PRICES OF GRAIN ON CHICAGO BOARD ARE PEGGED AT THURSDAY'S CLOSE

Secretary of Agriculture Approves Exchange Plan to Limit Fluctuations After Fixing a Minimum to Be Maintained.

SAYS SPECULATOR CAUSED CRISIS

the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Establishment of minimum prices for trading in wheat, corn and other grains until further notice, were announced late today by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace after the approval by President Roosevelt of a hastily drawn program designed to prevent the further collapse of commodity prices.

Wallace disclosed that a trader, whose identity was kept secret, was "long" 13,000,000 bushels of rn and several million bushels of heat and other grains when commodity prices began their precipitate decline last week. The trader was caught in the fall of prices and his large holdings occasioned a market crisis, which, in Wallace's opinion, necessitated action to prevent further declines and resort to minimum price-fixing authority for the first time in recent market history.

Terms of Agreement.

He announced that as a result, the Chicago Board of Trade had agreed that when it reopened Monday after being closed Friday and today that it will:

Allow no trading below the closing prices of Thursday.

Restrict fluctuation in any one y to 5 cents a bushel for wheat d for "other grains in proporn."

Both restrictions will remain in force until either they are released entirely or a program of commodity market reforms put into effect.

Other markets, including those at Minneapolis, Kansas City and Duluth, are expected by the Department of Agriculture to take similar action when they reopen, probably Monday.

Conflict on Fluctuations.

A statement by the directors of the Chicago Board of Trade announcing the reopening of trading Monday, beginning one hour later than usual, said: "Effective until further notice, there shall be no trading during any day at prices more than 8 cents per bushel above the average closing price of the preceding business day in wheat and rye, 5 cents in barley and corn and 4 cents in oats." It provided also that there should be no trading in provisions at prices more than 75 cents a hundred pounds above or below the average closing prices of the preceding business day.

When the attention of Chicago board officials was called to Secretary Wallace's statement that fluctuations were liimted to 5 cents, they insisted that 8 cents fluctuation for wheat was the correct version, and that the reason for a contrary statement was apparently a misunderstanding at the Department of Agriculture.

Minimum Prices Set.

Closing prices on grain in Chicago Thursday July 20, which are set as the minimum for the opening on Monday are:

Wheat: July 90c; September 91@92¾c; December 95½@96¼c; May 1@1.01.

Corn: July 46c; September 53@53¼c; December 56½@58c; May 63½@64c.

Oats: July 35c; September 34½@ December 37@37½c; May 41c.

Rye: July 69c; September 67c; December 72¾@73c; May 81½c.

Barley: September 75⅞c; December 80¾c.

The disclosure of the position of the "long" trader was made in a statement from the Department of Agriculture which opened:

"An astounding illustration of the result of individual unrestrained speculation as it affects commodity prices has been brought to the attention of the President and the Secretary of Agriculture.

"During the last administration a regulation requiring the reporting of all large grain holdings on the Chicago Board of Trade was rescinded and the regulation was not revived by this administration because it was believed that individual speculators had learned that it was contrary to public policy for

CHICAGO HOODLUMS KILL TWO POLICEMEN

Officers Fired on When They Go to Question Young Men in Auto.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Two policemen were fatally wounded tonight by a gang of young hoodlums they sought to question on the West Side. Policeman John Skopek, 34 years old, died on his way to a hospital. His companion, Officer Elmer Ostling, succumbed a short time after arriving here. The slayers escaped.

The officers, according to witnesses, halted a small sedan, in which at least three young men were riding. As the officers walked toward the machine the occupants fired a dozen shots.

Skopek, who is survived by a widow and a young son, was struck in the neck and head. Ostling was also struck several times and lived only an hour after being taken to a hospital.

The neighborhood in which the slaying occurred is about a mile from the West Side saloon which was twice attacked by gunmen who killed one man and wounded three others early this week. William Madden, Chicago hoodlum, was seized in Kansas City Friday by police at the request of Chicago authorities in connection with the saloon shootings.

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT WEDS TEXAS GIRL

President's Son and Ruth Googins Are Married at Burlington, Ia.

By the Associated Press.

BURLINGTON, Ia., July 22.—Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President of the United States, was married here tonight to Ruth Josephine Googins of Fort Worth, Tex.

The double ring ceremony was read in the rock garden on the river bank estate of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Swiler, uncle and aunt of the bride, by the Rev. Naboth Osborne, retired Congregational minister.

Young Roosevelt's marriage followed by only five days his divorce from Elizabeth Browning Donner at Minden, Nev. It was Miss Googins' first marriage.

The bride wore a long, simply fashioned dress of white georgette, cut full in the skirt, and carried a large bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bridegroom wore white flannel trousers and a camel's hair coat. Neither was attended.

Guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Miller of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moore of Chicago, Mrs. Park Sowden and her son, George, of Palatine Bridge, N. Y., and Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Swiler of Burlington, and their sons, Wesley and Hudson; Mrs. J. W. Swiler of Burlington, David Googins and Mary Ruth Googins.

Immediately following the ceremony a supper for 25 persons was served on the lawn.

During the ceremony, a crowd of 500 watched from the street at the rear of the house. Police guarded the estate, allowing only guests and newspaper men inside the grounds. A part of the street was roped off six hours before the wedding, and no automobiles were allowed within a block of the house.

Immediately after the wedding, Mrs. Dall informed newspaper men that the bridegroom had talked with his father, President Roosevelt, by telephone this afternoon. The President gave his approval of the wedding and wished the couple happiness, Mrs. Dall said.

The couple left Burlington by automobile presumably for Fort Madison, Ia., a few hours after the ceremony. They were to board a Santa Fe train there for Fort Worth before continuing on to California.

BODY IN TRUNK SET AFIRE

Discovery Made in Burning Hayfield Near Gary, Ind.

GARY, Ind., July 22. — A trunk containing the body of a man was found in the center of a burning hayfield south of here tonight.

Police authorities who investigated said they learned an automobile had been seen leaving a road near the field a short time before the fire broke out. It was thought the trunk was taken from the car and then set afire. The blaze spread to the dry hay in the field. The body was taken to Lowell, Ind., where an autopsy will be performed.

OCEAN FLYER NOT HEARD FROM

FLYING MOLLISONS OVER ATLANTIC ON WAY TO U. S.

Sharp Watch Kept for Famous British Pair at Harbor Grace, Due in New York Tonight.

PLAN ROUND TRIP; TO GO TO BAGDAD

Captain and Amy Johnson, Holders of Many Records, on "Most Venturesome" of Expeditions.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARBOR GRACE, Newfoundland, July 22.—Sharp watch was kept all along the North Atlantic coastline tonight for The Seafarer, in which James A. Mollison and his wife, Amy Johnson, were speeding across the ocean on an attempted non-stop flight fram Wales to New York.

The flyers were expected to pass over this vicinity within a few hours after midnight. They were last sighted over Fastnet Rock, Irish Free State.

By the Associated Press.

PENDINE, Wales, July 22.—Capt. James A. Mollison and his wife, Amy Johnson, both noted distance flyers, took off from here at 11 a. m. today (5 a. m. St. Louis time) to fly across the Atlantic to New York.

In contrast to stormy weather that caused their plane, the two-motored Seafarer, to crash on the first takeoff attempt June 8, the weather was favorable as the plane took the air.

They planned to reach New York tomorrow night, tnen after a short rest, fly back across the Atlantic to try to set a new long distance record, heading generally for Bagdad.

Capt. Mollison, who made the first solo East-to-West flight over the Atlantic last August, watched the final arrangements being made and saw to it that everything was shipshape.

His wife, who last November set a London-to-Capetown record, jumped into the cockpit beside her husband at the dual controls. She wore white overalls.

"Now for the greatest adventure of my life," she exclaimed.

There was very little wind as Mollison opened the throttle and began the run along the beach for the takeoff.

There was a burst of cheering from the crowd as the Seafarer took off. After reaching a height of 200 feet, Mollison swung its nose toward the open Atlantic and the Mollisons were off for New York.

The Mollisons had waited more than a month on the weather. This was the first time they have flown together in quest of a record. They were married last July 29. He is 28 years old, she is 24.

They seek three records—the first Great Britain-to-New York flight; the first two-way crossing of the Atlantic, and a new non-stop, straight-line mark.

Their plane, the Seafarer, is a flying gas tank, every available inch having been made into a fuel container.

Mollison was not particularly pleased with the weather prospects.

"The weather is reasonably, but not particularly good," he declared, "but it is good enough for us to take the chance."

"For the first 800 miles the weather will be foggy in patches, and there will be a certain amount of drizzle. But it's good to get the worst part over at first. After that we shall run into nice flying.

"If all goes well, we expect to be in New York by 10 o'clock tomorrow night. We are taking on 400 gallons of gasoline, which will give us a margin of something like 800 miles."

Most Venturesome of All Flights for Mollisons.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Capt. James Mollison and his 24-year-old wife, Amy, have each a number of distance flights to their credit, but the one on which they embarked today—Wales to New York and thence to Bagdad—is the most venturesome either has attempted.

Mollison, a Scotsman, made the first Westward one-man flight across the North Atlantic last August, landing his "flying gasoline can" in a New Brunswick pasture 30 hours, 10 minutes after he left Port Marnock, Ireland.

The 28-year-old pilot made the trip three weeks after his marriage to Amy Johnson, who for years had been flying all over the British Empire. From New Brunswick he came on to New York. Of-

POST LANDS IN NEW YORK COMPLETING WORLD FLIGHT IN LESS THAN EIGHT DAYS

CULBERTSON'S TEAM WINS OVER BRITISH BY 10,900 POINTS

Schwab Bridge Cup Goes to Americans After Six-Day Play.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 22.—Ely Culbertson and his three associates of the American team won the Charles M. Schwab cup tonight by defeating the British combination in the international contract bridge match with a lead of 10,900 points in 300 boards.

The American four—Culbertson, Mrs. Culbertson, Theodore A. Lightner and Michael T. Gottlieb—came from behind shortly before the mid-point of the six days' play and scored heavily with aggressive yet precise bidding.

The playing was in two soundproof, glass-walled rooms and was witnessed by a thousand or more spectators who were assisted by a large electrical scoreboard.

The total scores as the match was concluded late tonight were: Americans, 104,080; British, 93,180.

Col. H. M. Beasley captained the British players who were, besides himself, Sir Guy Domville, George Morris, T. V. Tabbush and several occasional substitutes.

"The Americans won not because they were more intelligent or scientific, but because they had the lucker swings and more experience in teamwork," Culbertson said after the finish.

"The largest part of our lead came from more precise slam bidding due to our four and five no-trump method and the better psychological adaptation of our team.

"We had the most thrilling and hardest battle of our experience."

SEVEN NAZI OPPONENTS GET THE DEATH PENALTY

Sentences Imposed on Communists as Goering Virtually Proclaims Martial Law.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 22.—Seven political death sentences in Cologne came on the heels today of Premier Hermann Goering's virtual declaration of martial law in Prussia to testify that the National Socialist government is determined ruthlessly to stamp out all opposition.

Echoes of this drastic policy came also from Hamburg and Thuringia and elsewhere, emphasizing its comprehensive and co-ordinated character.

At Cologne seven Communists were condemned to death after conviction of connection with the shooting of two Storm Troopers. Only three of the seven were directly charged with the shooting, the others being accused of assisting or inciting.

PRESIDENT TAKES ANOTHER OVERNIGHT CRUISE ON POTOMAC

Accompanied by Small Party and Says He Expects No Visitors From Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 22.— The President left the heat of the Capitol late this afternoon for his customary overnight cruise down the Potomac River.

He was accompanied by one of the smallest parties since he began the voyages on the yacht, Sequoia. It consisted of Warren Delano Robbins, Minister to Canada, Mrs. Robbins and Miss Marguerite Lehand.

Mr. Roosevelt said he intended to devote the trip principally to rest. He also made it known that he expected no visitors from Washington before his return tomorrow afternoon.

The chief executive may do a good bit of work on his speech for Monday night. His subject has not been announced but he is expected to make a strong plea for nation-wide support of the intensive campaign to raise mass purchasing power.

FAILS TO PAY $6000; JAILED

Woman Threw Stick That Destroyed Boy's Eye.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Because she failed to pay $6000 damages to a youth whose eye she knocked out in a burst of anger, Mrs. Eleanor Walters, 38, was sent to jail today. She will be imprisoned until the debt is paid, the Judge indicated, or until she works it out. At the rate of $1 a day she can settle it in something like 17 or 18 years.

The boy, whose attorney had Mrs. Walters jailed, is 14-year-old Daniel Carey. According to evidence at the trial, Daniel was playing in the Walters back yard when Mrs. Walters, annoyed, broke a length of wood from a crib and hurled it at him. The blow destroyed sight in one eye.

JOHNSON OFFERS COMPROMISE CODE TO SHIPBUILDERS

Seeks Agreement Before Naval Bids Are Opened Wednesday — Men Approve, Employers Balk.

OIL MEN OFFER SEPARATE PLANS

Emergency Committee Representing Most of Industry, and Independents to Be Heard Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 22. — Gov. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the National Industrial Recovery Act, today submitted to leaders of the shipbuilding industry a compromise proposal providing for a 32-hour work week.

Johnson presented his proposal after efforts to effect a compromise between shipyard management and labor proved fruitless.

The shipbuilders throughout a three-day hearing held out for a 40-hour week and minimum wages of 35 cents an hour in the South and 40 in the North, while labor insisted on a 30-hour week and a minimum wage of $25 weekly.

With opening of bids on the Navy's hugh building program scheduled for Wednesday, Johnson summoned employers and employes to his office today, heard their arguments, stated his own proposition, and gave them four hours to deliberate on it. When they returned the shipbuilders presented vigorous resistance to the proposal and the meeting recessed until tomorrow afternoon to give Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., opportunity to fly here from Norfolk to present the shipbuilders' case. Labor accepted Johnson's compromise.

Oil Men Name Committee.

Leaders of the oil industry chose their governing committee to function under the national industrial recovery law with four of the eight members representing the major companies and four the independents.

In selecting an executive committee, members of the emergency national committee on the petroleum industry ignored the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, two of the world's largest oil companies.

Axtell J. Byles, president of the American Petroleum Institute, was elected chairman of the executive committee the members of which were chosen as follows: K. R. Kingsbury, Standard Oil Co. of California, San Francisco; Harry F. Sinclair, Consolidated Oil Corporation, New York; W. T. Holliday, Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, Cleveland; E. B. Reeser, Barnsdall Oil Co., Tulsa, Ok.; Wirt Franklin, president Independent Petroleum Association, Oklahoma City, Ok; R. T. Zook, Bradford, Pa.; Howard Bennette, Western Petroleum Refiners' Association, Tulsa, Ok.; B. L. Majewski, Illinois Petroleum Marketers' Association, Chicago.

Three persons designated by Gen. Johnson, will serve with this committee in regulating the petroleum industry under plans for the proposed oil trade practice code.

The emergency Committee voted to apply the 40-hour week to all retail outlets including agencies that handle oil products as a side line.

The committee, preparatory to the opening of hearings Monday before Johnson, also approved Federal price regulation and licensing. It approved also a recommendation that the so-called lease and agency practice under which retail agencies are required to handle exclusively the products of one refiner, distributor, wholesaler or jobber, be prohibited.

The Emergency Committee of 54 members was chosen by representatives of about 90 per cent of the oil industry at a recent session in Chicago at which the code was formulated. None of the committee's decisions changed the code, but there were votes to recommend to Johnson that the plan be revised in accordance with the committee's action.

VOLUNTEER CODE BRINGS FLOOD OF PRAISE AND BLAME

Southern Group Wants Wage Differential—Others Pledge Support and Applaud Plan.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Thousands of telegrams poured into the White House and the National Recovery Administration today, in response to the President's proclamation of a blanket agreement fixing minimum wages and maximum hours for all industry not under individual codes. The messages hit every note in the scale from disgruntlement to pure panegyric.

E. H. Crutchfield, president of the Petersburg (Va.) Chamber of Commerce, pronounced the President's action "the smartest and most constructive piece of business ever advanced in the interest of American industry," but Paul L. Martin, president of the Omaha Chamber, suggested that the President also appeal to labor to avoid "strikes and other forms of violence."

H. C. Bucholz of Mount Clemens, Mich., wired that the whole thing was a mistake, that it "puts the cart before the horse," that what the country needs is "an American consumer plan," and that the administration had erred in planning production before planning consumption. He did not identify himself except by name.

On Behalf of Railway Men.

A much more serious note was struck in a telegram from George M. Harrison, saying that 700,000 railway employes were out of work, and expressing a hope that the railroads would be included under the blanket agreement. There is some doubt on that point, since Interstate Commerce Commissioner Eastman has been designated by the President to work out the railway problem.

A Dr. Alphonse N. Moufang of Johnstown, Pa., who apparently does not get the general idea, wired that "artificial price stimulation is folly in face of overwhelming number of people out of work." Administrator Johnson has repeatedly warned that prices must not be advanced until wages and jobs have been increased.

David Stern, publisher of the Philadelphia Record and the Camden (N. J.) Courier-Post, telegraphed his intention of signing the agreement as soon as possible, but called up later in some anxiety to say he had forgotten that he had just signed a contract with his printers at $1 an hour for a 48-hour week. He was assured that existing contracts are not impaired by the agreement.

Another pela that railway workers be brought under the code came from J. G. Luhrsen, president of the American Train Dispatchers'

SLASHES 21 HOURS FROM OLD RECORD

He Arrives at the Floyd Bennett Field an Hour Before He Is Expected but Is Greeted by an Enthusiastic Crowd.

RUSHED QUICKLY TO HIS HOTEL

Makes Final 2100-Mile Leg From Edmonton, Alta., Without Stop — Official Reception Is Planned for Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22. — Wiley Post landed at Floyd Bennett Field in Brooklyn just before 11 o'clock tonight (Eastern standard time), completing his flight around the world in less than eight days for a new record for such performance.

The record he made with Harold Gatty in 1931 in the same plane was eight days, 15 hours and 51 minutes.

Tonight he had made it in seven days, 18 hours and 50 minutes.

Thus he broke the former record by 21 hours and 1 minute.

His appearance, almost an hour earlier than he had been anticipated, was so sudden that the huge throng was startled.

The flyer was not seen until he came down almost in the center of the field. He landed from the north, taxied his plane to the end of the field and around to the front of the Administration Building.

Non Stop from Edmonton.

Mrs. Post was in the crowd that had been waiting at the field since early evening for the Oklahoma flyer, who reached here after a 2100-mile non-stop trip from Edmonton, Alberta.

Major J. Nelson Kelly, superintendent of the field, who recorded Post's takeoff at 4:10 a. m. (eastern standard time) last Saturday, clocked his return officially at 10:59:30 p. m.

Post's official elapsed time therefore was 186 hours, 49½ minutes for his journey of about 15,400 miles.

As Post taxied along, the crowd became frenzied. About 3000 persons broke through the lines of policemen and pushed toward the Winnie Mae's spinning propeller. Post was forced to stall his motor to prevent possible injury to them.

The flyer did not climb from his ship immediately. It was pushed up the taxi strip to the administration building with him still in the cockpit.

Last Leg at Fast Rate.

Post had flown from Edmonton with phenomenal speed. He had left there at 9:41 a. m., coming southeast across Canada and thence back into the United States.

Post covered the 2100 miles from Edmonton in 13 hours, 18 minutes, at an average speed of 2.63 miles a minute.

The enthusiasm of the crowd for the 34-year-old aviator's achievement exceeded anything ever seen at the field, attendants said.

Photographers pressed around the purple and white monoplane to take pictures while Post still was in his seat.

As the deafening cheers continued unabated Post rose and waved a couple of times, then slumped back into his seat. Apparently he was close to exhaustion.

Post's first request when he came to a stop was for an eye-patch. An ambulance surgeon made one for him.

Doesn't Talk at Field.

After several minutes Post was pulled from the cockpit by Lee Trenholm, his representative, and a policeman. He was taken immediately to an automobile and there was no opportunity for anyone to speak to him.

He was wearing a blue shirt and

ROOSEVELT PUTS BACK-TO-THE-LAND PLAN IN OPERATION

Sets Up Organization for the Use of $25,000,000 of Public Works Funds to Finance Movement.

DESIGNED TO AID JOBLESS IN CITIES

President Also Approves Most of Recommendations Submitted to Him for Regional Advisers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—President Roosevelt set up the organization today for using $25,000,000 of public works funds to finance a "back to the land" movement by which it is proposed to put urban unemployed on small farms where they can grow their own food.

The President also sought to quicken the distribution of the remainder of the $3,300,000,000 fund by approving most of the recommendations submitted to him by Secretary of the Interior Ickes for regional and State advisers through whom local construction projects will be financed.

Another $20,000,000 of the public works fund was set aside by the President to purchase forest lands, much of it in the South, for winter quarters for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

At the same time, the Public Works Administration announced approval of plans for spending $26,927,197 on roads in Minnesota, Arkansas and North Carolina.

Homesteading Conference Called.

The President directed Secretary Ickes to administer the $25,000,000 specifically set aside by Congress for "aiding the redistribution of over-balanced population in industrial centers" through subsistence homesteads.

Ickes immediately called a conference for next Wednesday of those interested in the project to work out plans for putting it into effect.

Although sponsors of the idea contended it was the ideal solution of the unemployment problem, there was a great diversity of thought as to the manner in which it should be carried out.

Some proposed that the unemployed should be placed on farm lands large enough to raise their own crops, but not to engage in commercial farming and thus add to the agricultural surplus.

Advisers Not Yet Announced.

This, however, would hardly make it possible for the unemployed to repay the Government loans, as contemplated in the act. The law provided that the money should be used as a revolving fund which would permit its use again after being repaid.

President Roosevelt went over with Ickes, his Public Works Administrator, the latter's recommendations for State and regional advisers, approving most of them. They will not be announced, however, until the entire list is finally approved some time next week.

Ten regional advisers and advisory committees for each State will be named to make recommendations to Washington on the State and local governmental projects proposed as part of the public works program.

About half of the works fund has been set aside for these projects, but its distribution held up pending the setting up of the local advisory committees.

The Latest Road Plan.

The road plans approved today made a total of 33 states which have received tentative approval for spending their road funds under the $400,000,000 allocated to that purpose.

Arkansas and North Carolina proposed to divide their allotments as follows: 50 per cent for the Federal aid highway system; 25 per cent on extensions through municipalities and 25 per cent on secondary roads. Minnesota will allot 48 per cent, 32 per cent and 20 per cent, respectively.

The states, their allotments, and the number of counties in which the funds will be spent, follow:

Minnesota: $10,656,569, 81 of the 87 counties; Arkansas, $6,748,335, 59 of the 75 counties; North Carolina, $9,522,293, 75 of the 100 counties.

YORKVILLE, ILL., BANK ROBBER CAPTURED, LOOT IS RECOVERED

Two Companions Also Are Reported Cornered by Officers in Cornfield.

By the Associated Press.

YORKVILLE, Ill., July 22.—One of three robbers who shortly before noon held up the Millbrook State Bank in Western Kendall County and escaped with about $300 was in jail here tonight and the other two robbers were thought to be cornered in a cornfield near here by a posse of Sheriff's deputies. The loot was recovered.

About a mile out of town the robbers' sedan toppled over in making a turn. The men fled, but vigilantes captured one. A bag containing all the money taken from the bank was found in the overturned car. The captured man gave his name as Joe Jed, 55, of East St. Louis.

LINDBERGHS IN GREENLAND AFTER FLIGHT OVER WATER

Land at Godthaab in Trip From Labrador; to Meet Ship Jellinge.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The Radio Marine Corporation said tonight it had received a wireless message from Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh announcing their arrival at Godthaab, Greenland, after a flight from Labrador.

The flight, about 400 miles, was over water from Hebron, Labrador, to the town on the southwest coast of Greenland.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh had reached Hopedale, Labrador, yesterday after a flight from Cartwright, and then had flown to Hebron.

In Greenland they will meet the Danish steamer Jellinge, mother ship of the expedition, which had preceded them to the North Atlantic.

Dispatches from Godthaab yesterday said District Sheriff Svane, the Danish representative in Greenland, would receive the aviators, whom he had invited to stay at his house. They said, however, they probably would make their headquarters on the Jellinge.

SECRETARY WALLACE ACCEPTS PROPOSAL TO PEG GRAIN PRICE

individuals to gamble so heavily in wheat, corn and other grains that the prices to the farmers producing the grain could be thrown wholly out of line with the board economic situation.

"Early this week the department came to the conclusion that the old order calling for information should be reinstated and this was done on Thursday.

"Long" 13,000,000 Bushels.

"Today it turns out that one man, who had been 'long' on corn by roughly 13,000,000 bushels and was probably also long on other grains to the extent of several million bushels, was caught in the decline of prices during the past few days, was unable to put up any more margin and would have to be sold out.

"This selling out process would mean in effect that by Monday morning, his brokers, 17 in number, would be compelled to dump 13,000,000 bushels of corn and several million bushels of other grain on the market and this dumping would naturally cause a severe break in grain prices—all the result of the selfish speculation of one individual.

"This speculator is only one of several who have traded wildly in large volume on both sides of the market.

"In order to protect the farmers and farm prices the Chicago Board of Trade has suggested and the department has approved action by the board setting closing prices as of Thursday, the last market day, as a minimum price below which no trading would be allowed until further notice. Fluctuations for any one day are being limited to 5 cents a day for wheat and other grains in proportion."

Wallace Calls for Action.

The disclosure of the position of the "long" trader came to the attention of the Chicago office of the Grain Futures Administration and was immediately reported to Secretary Wallace. The latter then communicated with Peter B. Carey, president of the Chicago Board, and advised him that "strong action quickly" would be expected.

Meanwhile, Wallace held a long conference with George N. Peek, chief administrator of the farm act; Charles J. Brand, co-administrator; Dr. R. G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, and other advisers to formulate a plan for achieving greater price stability.

How Fluctuation Rule Works.

Farm administrators explained how the emergency rule would work in establishing minimum prices for trading in grain.

Taking, for example, a grain of a given type and grade offered for sale for future delivery at Chicago which closed at 90 cents a bushel Thursday, they said it could not be bought or resold at less than 90 cents "until further notice."

Neither could it be bought or sold for more than 95 cents on the first trading day. If it chanced to close at 95 cents the first day, on the second day of trading it could be bought and sold for as much as $1 and not less than 90 cents.

If by another chance it closed at $1 on the second day, on the third trading day it could sell for as much as $1.05 and not less than 95 cents.

Thus its range could be 5 cents either up or down, providing that it did not go below 90 cents.

Grain Conference Tomorrow.

A conference of representatives of grain exchanges and others interested in the grain industry will be held here with Wallace and farm administrators in an effort to plan a method for bringing about greater stability in grain prices and reducing speculation.

Later this conference will be followed by others aiming to achieve the same purposes for trading in cotton and other farm commodities.

EXCHANGE HERE FIXES MINIMUM

Directors of the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange, meeting last night, ordered regulations similar to those drawn by the Chicago Board of Trade placed in effect Monday.

Minimum prices, pegged at Thursday's close, vary slightly from the minimums established for the Chicago market. In general the minimum prices for wheat options here are a few cents higher than the Chicago minimums, and in the other grains the St. Louis minimums are lower.

Minimums set for St. Louis follow:

Wheat: July, 95¾c; September, 94c; December, 96c; May, $1.

Corn: July, 44½c; September, 51½c; December, 56c; May, 61½c.

Oats: July, 34½c; September, 35½c; December, 38c; May, 41½c.

The limitations on maximum advances permissible in any day, 8 cents a bushel for wheat, 5 cents for corn and 4 cents for oats, coincide with the Chicago regulations. In mill feed futures fluctuations are fixed at not more than $1 a ton above or below the average closing prices of the preceding business day.

Hours of trading were abbreviated in conformity with the Chicago Board of Trade. The Merchants' Exchange will open at 10:30 a. m. and close at 1:15 p. m. Closing time on Saturdays will be at noon.

POST SETS NEW RECORD FOR FLIGHT AROUND WORLD

had a handkerchief tied around his forehead.

In the forefront of the throng that had rushed to the Winnie Mae was a group of Oklahoma men who had flown here to welcome Post.

At 11:23 p. m. his automobile drove away from the field for the midtown hotel where his headquarters have been maintained.

The crowd continued to swarm around the ship, however, and police had difficulty guarding it from souvenir hunters. Plans have been made to have it on display at the Battery until a formal reception is held by the city in honor of the aviator.

Set Four New Records.

Post set four records on his dash around the world. He made:

The fastest trip around the world.

The first solo flight around the world.

The first solo flight across the Pacific Ocean.

The fastest flight from New York to Berlin—3900 miles in 25 hours and 45 minutes.

In addition he was the first solo trans-Atlantic flyer since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to reach his announced destination without a stop.

Reception Set for Wednesday.

Plans for the municipal reception to Post, completed today, call for him to receive the traditional ticker-tape shower from the skyscrapers at noon Wednesday in the course of a parade from the Battery to City Hall, the route Gen. Balbo rode yesterday.

The Winnie Mae will be in the procession, either on its own wheels or atop a truck, and Post will ride in the cockpit.

Post started his journey at 4:10 a. m. (Eastern Standard time) last Saturday, July 16.

Twenty-five hours and 45 minutes later he came to rest at Berlin, setting a record for the 3900-mile flight. He had thought to be off again in half an hour, but the electric fuel pumps he expected were not there and it took nearly two hours to fill his big tanks.

At 8:10 a. m. Sunday (Eastern Standard time) he took off for Novosibirsk, Siberia, 2600 miles away, but after crossing into Russia he ran into clouds that hung so low he was forced to turn back and land at Koenigsburg, East Prussia, 315 miles east of Berlin.

There continued bad weather compelled him to take the rest he needed badly but which he wanted to deny himself for the sake of his enterprise, and he got away half a day later.

But again he found Novosibirsk unattainable. Continuing bad weather and trouble with his robot pilot made him alight at Moscow and stay there two hours.

He finally reached Novosibirsk at 10:27 a. m. Monday (Eastern Standard time). Fay Gillis, American aviatrix and only woman member of the "catterpiller club," was waiting to take charge of him and his ship, act as his interpreter and superintended the refueling while he napped briefly in a hangar.

The flyers' next hop took him to Irkutsk, where he landed at 7:35 a. m. Tuesday (Eastern Standard time) and remained less than four hours.

The flight west from there was one of the most perilous of his nearer and nearer the ground and whole trip. Low clouds forced him at one point his fuselage scraped the tree tops. At 6:32 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) the next day he reached Rukhlovo, where he remained until 3:25 o'clock in the afternoon. Communication with that isolated spot was so poor, however, that Post was well on his way to Khabarovsk, his last stopping place before returning to North America, ere the outside world knew he had reached there.

Heavy Fog Over Alaska.

When the airman left Khabarovsk to shoot across the Pacific at 9:53 p. m. Wednesday (Eastern Standard Time) he had a lead of more than 30 hours on the old record, and he zoomed into Alaska in quick time, being sighted over Nome at 1:30 p. m. the next day.

He encountered a heavy fog there, however, which balked his intention of flying on to Fairbanks, 400 miles inland, and after losing precious flying time around in what he calls "soup," he was forced down at Flat, west of Fairbanks, seven hours after Nome had spotted him.

His plane nosed over and his controllable-pitch propeller was smashed. Arrangements were made quickly, however, for Joe Crosson, famed trouble-shooter of the Arctic Airways, to rush him a new blade and guide him into Fairbanks at 3:42 p. m. Friday (E. S. T.).

Secret Army Apparatus.

He jumped the 1450 miles from there to Edmonton in less than 10 hours, back in his stride once more, and little more than an hour later he was off on the last lap—to glory and bed.

Directional signals and apparatus to receive them, details of which were closely guarded, were furnished by the United States Army—the first time they had been used on such a venture.

Post gave them credit for guiding him straight to Berlin across the Atlantic and again into Alaska on his Pacific hop. So carefully has the apparatus been guarded that a rumor got out the flyer had been ordered to destroy the instruments if he should find it necessary to make a forced landing, in which he might be disabled. This later was denied.

ORGANIZED WOMEN TO LEND A HAND IN RECOVERY PLAN

International Congress at Chicago Decide on Vigilance Groups to Make Act Effective.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 22.—A plan to form feminine vigilance committees to make the national recovery act effective was adopted at a holdover meeting today of the International Congress of Women.

The economic conference of several hundred women from 30 countries had also adopted a manifesto launching a second woman's movement, aimed at bettering world conditions for both men and women.

The Congress before it adjourned voted in favor of the national council calling another meeting in 1934.

Outstanding on the plan of action was the decision that the national council recommend to member organizations that they organize their constituents into vigilance committees for the purpose of aiding the program for recovery.

The Congress also commissioned the council to urge its member organizations to work hard to elect a high type of public official.

Another plan recommended by the conference was that member groups of the national council demand congressional investigation of the private manufacture of arms and munitions in this country.

The determination of a "comfortable standard of living" instead of just a "minimum safety standard" was indorsed.

The value of co-operation from youth in helping revamp the world for its own good was recognized, and the conference recommended that plans for this co-ordination be made.

In reference to the Negro question in the United States, the Congress took the stand that council member organizations devise programs to formulate inter-racial tolerance and understanding.

The Congress also urged study of the immigration laws looking toward their revision.

The American plan committee, headed by Mrs. Estelle N. Sternberger, vice-president of the national council, was continued as a temporary program committee to draft further plans of action based on the findings of the conference.

The two other members of this committee, all of which were appointed by Miss Phillips, are Mrs. Edgerton Parson and Mrs. Harold V. Milligan, both of New York.

MISSISSIPPI NEGRO LYNCHED; NOTHING IS DONE ABOUT IT

He Is Alleged to Have Insulted a White Woman and Been Trapped by Ruse.

COLUMBUS, Miss., July 22.—The lynching of a Negro by a mob at Caledonia, small town 15 miles north of here, was reported to authorities here this morning, but officers said late today they were without details of the affair.

What official action, if any, was planned, was not disclosed. Deputy Sheriff Homer Kilpatrick said no officers had been sent to the scene to investigate, so far as he knew.

The original message to Lowndes County authorities said the Negro had been hanged to a tree by a band of unidentified men after he had insulted a white woman.

Efforts to obtain details from residents of the remote Caledonia community were met in some instances by outright denials that any lynching had occurred. Others, however, admitted a Negro had been hanged, but declined to give the man's name or to discuss the case.

Information gathered piece-meal said the Negro had made an improper proposal to a white woman and that the woman had sent the Negro away with a promise to meet him in a cotton field. The Negro, reports said, went to the field at the designated time and was there met by a band of men, which hanged him with a rope to a tree limb.

HOW HULL'S DRAMATIC PLEA SAVED ROOSEVELT'S FACE AT LONDON ECONOMIC PARLEY

40 of 66 Nations Ready to Vote for Blunt Criticism of U. S. When Secretary Made Stirring Speech.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, July 22.—The inside story of the World Economic Conference is gradually coming out. So conspicuous has been its lack of accomplishment—to state the case euphemistically—that there is a widespread belief among those who have followed its proceedings that it marks the end of large scale international conferences for years to come. In this view of things, tangible results can only be attained by parleys among small groups of nations and then only after most careful diplomatic preparation.

In case of the present conference, which has now reached a stage described by the London Herald, organ of the Labor Party, as "comatose and contemptible," there was a certain amount of diplomatic preparation, but this was completely negatived by reversal of the American policy after our delegates had boarded ship for London.

Premier MacDonald came home from his visit to President Roosevelt last spring with definite word that the United States would participate in currency stabilization. Moreover, the nations of the world had before them Roosevelt's address to the heads of states in May saying that stabilization was one of the prime essentials to world economic recovery. Then came the July 3 statement from the White House throwing stabilization overboard because of the adverse effect it might have on the American domestic program.

An Embarrassing Position.

Probably no delegation to a world conference has ever been placed in such an embarrassing position as was our delegation by this about-face at home. The ordinarily placid MacDonald was enraged. When Chairman Hull of our delegation asked MacDonald, as president of the conference, to postpone the meeting of the Steering Committee called for discussion of the Roosevelt message, MacDonald figuratively snapped his fingers at Hull and allowed the meeting to proceed. MacDonald was in difficulties with his own people because he had led them to believe that the United States would agree to a stabilization formula, and at one time there was even talk that he would resign the premiership as a result of the failure of the conference in this vital respect.

The Steering Committee, composed of representatives of 16 nations, met in a sullen mood, with full intention of passing a resolution disbanding the conference and placing the blame explicitly on Roosevelt. A resolution was in fact drafted, with Roosevelt's statement to the heads of the nations about the need for stabilization set off in a parallel column against the July 3 message. The French and other gold bloc delegates, by methods similar to those of political conventions, had buttonholed delegates to such good effect that 40 nations of 66 participating in the conference stood ready to vote for the adournment resolution with its slap at the United States.

The majority of our own delegates adopted a defeatist attitude and pressed Hull to get authority from Roosevelt to advocate adjournment.

Things were bad enough as they were. It seemed to Hull they would be infinitely worse if the conference should close with adoption of a resolution stigmatizing the United States as the breaker of its plighted word. He believed such an ending would set back the cause of international co-operation for a generation. Deeply moved, he went into the Steering Committee and by sheer force of character persuaded it to consent to a breathing spell. Following this delay came the decision to let the conference proceed to an amiable conclusion.

A Dramatic Speech.

This is the story as gathered by the writer from British as well as American sources. There is general testimony that after the President's statement of July 3 the conference trembled on the verge of embittered disruption and that Hull's leadership saved the situation. His speech to the Steering Committee pleading for delay is described as one of the most dramatic episodes not only of this but of all international gatherings of recent times. There can be no question that Hull did Roosevelt a service of incalculable value, and he did this service, as has been told, after he had been put in a well-nigh intolerable position by Roosevelt's change of front. The fact that there had been a change of front he could not deny. He could only plead in explanation that a new policy had been made necessary by the desperate situation in which America found itself. It was more important, he argued, that America should save itself than that currency should be stabilized, for, if the American experiment should come to grief, the whole world would suffer disastrous effects.

In his speech at the concluding plenary session of the conference next Thursday, Hull is expected to take the position that it should not be branded as a failure but should be regarded as a moderately useful beginning of a series of intermittent conferences on world problems.

RUSSIA BARS FOUR ADDITIONAL AMERICANS

They Were on Ship With Marc Connelly, but Hope to Have Ban Lifted.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, July 22.—For reasons not yet disclosed the Soviet Government has denied Marc Connelly, American playwright and Pulitzer prize winner, the right to enter Russia. Four other Americans, who were traveling on the same boat with him for a Northern cruise, were also refused permission to enter Soviet territory, but they continued aboard the vessel toward Leningrad in the belief that the ban might possibly be raised.

Officers of the line persistently refused to disclose the names of the other Americans and insisted that the ban upon them was a case of mistaken identity which would be corrected at Leningrad.

It was understood that Connelly was not acquainted with the four and he was unable to recall their names.

Connelly expressed disappointment that he would not be permitted to visit Russia, asserting in an interview at Wisby that he had looked forward with pleasure to seeing the Moscow theaters. He did not understand the reason for the ban, he said.

"I can't understand it," he said, then added jokingly, "I have been charged with lampooning religion and praised for furthering it. Do Russians regard me as too clerical—or are they shocked by my so-called blasphemies.

"Perhaps they are afraid I plan a drama about 'the Soviets' red pastures.'"

The author of "The Green Pastures" said that he got off the steamship "because I have never envied anyone standing outside the door of Paradise trying to peep inside."

Mrs. Vivian Chase, Bank Robbery Suspect, Is Ordered Arrested After Picture Is Picked as Abductor

FUGITIVE SINCE LAST OCTOBER

ANOTHER WOMAN NAMED BY POLICE IN LUER KIDNAPING

Mrs. Vivian Chase, Bank Robbery Suspect, Is Ordered Arrested After Picture Is Picked as Abductor

FUGITIVE SINCE LAST OCTOBER

At That Time She Escaped From Jail at Liberty, Mo. —"Irish" O'Malley Also Is Still Sought.

A new figure was drawn into the August Luer kidnaping case yesterday with the announcement by Chief of Police Gerk that Mrs. Vivian Chase, fugitive bank robbery suspect and former resident of a rooming house at 92A St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, had been identified as one of the abductors of the wealthy 77-year-old Alton bank president and meat packer.

Mrs. Chase's photograph was taken to Alton yesterday afternoon after the police had been told by an undisclosed informant, that she was the woman who assisted two men to seize Luer in his home July 10 and hustle him off in a waiting automobile, to be held five days in a vain attempt to collect $100,000 ransom. It will be shown to Mr. and Mrs. Luer.

Mrs. Chase, also known to the police as Alice White and Gracie Hickey, has been sought since October, 1932, when she escaped from jail at Liberty, Mo., where she had been held for four months with Joe Marcella, a St. Louis and Kansas City hoodlum, in connection with a holdup of the National Bank & Trust Co. of North Kansas City.

Miss Vaughn's Status Changed.

Identification of Mrs. Chase caused police to change their estimate of the part of Miss Norma Vaughn, one of five prisoners already under arrest, had played in the case. Chief Gerk announced that the police have learned Miss Vaughn had no part in the actual kidnaping, but added they were satisfied she knew enough about the abduction to justify holding her as an accessory.

Miss Vaughn steadfastly has denied knowledge of the kidnaping and has disclaimed ownership of a flowered dress found in her room at the St. Clair avenue address where Mrs. Chase formerly lived. The dress is regarded as an important piece of evidence because it was identified by Mrs. Luer as identical with the dress worn by the woman kidnaper. Having determined that the dress is too small for Miss Vaughn, the police have concluded the dress was abandoned there by Mrs. Chase.

Held with Miss Vaughn at police headquarters in the kidnaping case are Randall Eugene Norvell, Nameoki professional bondsman, said to have been the driver of the kidnapers' car, and Michael and Mary Musiala on whose Madison County farm the kidnapers kept Luer a prisoner in a confined and musty cellar.

All But Fitzgerald Deny.

The fifth prisoner in the case, Percy Michael Fitzgerald, whose confession led to the arrest of the others and the discovery of the kidnapers' hideout, is held in jail at Murphysboro, Ill., on a Federal warrant charging use of the mails to extort money. Except for Fitzgerald the prisoners have denied knowledge of the kidnaping.

Mrs. Chase's name entered the investigation after a woman named "Gracie" had been mentioned repeatedly by some of the prisoners as a resident of Miss Vaughn's rooming house. Finally James Powers, clerk in the identification bureau, was asked if he could find any police record of a "Gracie" who might be connected with any of the prisoners.

Powers immediately recalled that a Gracie Hickey was arrested in Kansas City for the North Kansas City bank robbery in company with Joe Marcella, since convicted, that Marcella was a pal of Frank Clark, known to the police as "Tompaw" and that "Tompaw," in turn was an intimate of Fitzgerald.

When her picture was extracted from the record file, police learned that her correct name was Vivian Chase. The police declined to say who identified her as the kidnaper, but it is understood it was Miss Vaughn.

Description of Mrs .Chase.

Mrs. Chase, who escaped from the jail at Liberty by sawing out a cell bar and sliding down a knotted blanket, is 32 years old. The police record carries the following description of her: height, 5 feet 7¼ inches; weight, 115 pounds; build, slim; hair, chestnut, but usually hennaed; eyes, blue; complexion, medium. She is a native of Springfield, Mo.

She is the second person sought by the police in the Luer kidnaping. The hunt for "Irish" O'Malley, said by the police to have entered the Luer home with Mrs. Chase on the pretext of using the telephone, was broadened today as detectives searched hideouts in Missouri and Illinois. O'Malley, whose real name, seldom used, is Walter Holland, is a friend of Miss Vaughn and Mrs. Chase and is understood to have left East St. Louis in Mrs. Vaughn's automobile, which he frequently used.

As previously stated in the Post-Dispatch, the kidnapers will be tried in State court at Edwardsville. Penalty for kidnaping for ransom in Illinois ranges upward to death in the electric chair, while maximum penalty for using the mails to extort ransom, under the new Federal Cochran act, is 20 years imprisonment and a $5000 fine.

BLANKET CODE PLAN BRINGS FLOOD OF PRAISE AND CRITICISM

Association, the members of which, he said, are now required to perform "superhuman tasks" under conditions "hazardous to the traveling public." He said: "Many are required to work 12 or more hours per day and seven days per week."

Wants Differential for South.

The Tuscaloosa Chamber of Commerce noted "with alarm" that no wage differential between the South and other sections was recognized in the blanket agreement, and was "gravely apprehensive of its ability to compete with other sections, unless such a diffeerntial was maintained."

Joseph Mesmer wired from Santa Monica, Cal., to tell the President that the blanket agreement "intrenches labor so firmly and arrogantly that capital will be compelled to capitulate." The agreement provides for a minimum wage of $14 for a 35-hour week, with exceptions up to $15 a week and 40 hours.

N. N. Harris of Scarsdale, N. Y., entreated the President by telegraph to consider "the humiliation and embarrassment of thousands of patriotic and well-wishing employers," who are "economically unable" to meet the foregoing conditions. He has a substitute plan which he offers to bring to Washington whenever Mr. Roosevelt is ready to see him.

J. J. Maloney, president of the Decatur (Ill.) Association of Commerce, wired that he felt a "patriotic duty" to organize a committee to sign up employers in his area, but an hour later came back with the following message: "Kite manufacturer reports Philadelphia jobbers buying Japanese kites at 75 cents a gross less than his price, making it impossible to compete under recovery act. Do you propose to protect American industry?"

Chicagoan Enthusiastic.

It remained for Gustav Mann of Chicago to strike high C in the scale of lyricism. "I am an ardent admirer of you and all your policies," he telegraphed the President. "Will co-operate 100 per cent. God must love this country and its people to have given you to us."

Meanwhile, sheltered from the deluge of messages, Gen. Johnson was asking reporters to assure employers not to worry about the proper course to take in connection with the blanket agreement. He said that in due time they would receive full instructions telling them how to proceed.

"This thing is going to be administered very simply," he added. "I don't intend to promulgate a lot of complicated regulations. Anyone who wants to squawk will have an opportunity. This thing is going over because it's the only way to save American business, and because public opinion is behind it."

GIRL SAYS SHE THREW BRICK AT MAN FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

Sam Indelicato, 52-year-old plumber's helper, 1806 Cass avenue, is held in the prison ward at City Hospital after being set upon by women at an address on Biddle street yesterday morning.

Police who were summoned to the place found Indelicato unconscious in a shed. They prevented one irate woman from stabbing him with a butcher knife and questioned a 17-year-old girl who told them: "I heard my 8-year-old sister screaming in the shed and I ran in and he was there. Before he could get up I hit him on the head with a brick and knocked him out."

Indelicato has a skull injury and severe lacerations. He told police he was hurt in a fall.

KIDNAPER OF BERG IS FOUND GUILTY OF BANK ROBBERY

Charles Heuer Gets 25 Years for Winfield, Mo., Holdup—Already Under 99-Year Sentence.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TROY, Mo., July 22.—Charles Heuer, serving a 99-year prison term for his part in the kidnaping of the late Alexander Berg, St. Louis fur dealer, was found guilty today of complicity in the robbery of the Winfield Banking Co., on Nov. 18, 1931, while he was a fugitive in the kidnaping case.

A jury in Circuit Judge Woolfolk's court fixed his punishment for the bank robbery at 25 years in prison. Edward Barcume, serving a life-term for the Berg kidnaping, is to be tried Wednesday on the bank robbery charge.

Heuer was taken from the Jefferson City penitentiary for the trial, but presented no defense.

Witnesses for the State told of the arrest of Heuer, Barcume and a third man at Hawk Point, Mo., 60 miles northwest of St. Louis, less than 24 hours after the bank robbery. They were armed and had with them $1070 in cash, which was identified as part of the $2000 taken in the robbery.

FLYING MOLLISONS OVER ATLANTIC ON WAY TO U. S.

ficials at Floyd Bennett Field prepared tonight for a welcome to the flying pair which will surpass that Mollison received last August.

Six hundred twenty policemen will be on duty at the airport, Inspector Kuhne said, to handle the expected crowd. The fact that the Italian seaplanes are moored at the field will add to the throng.

Here are some of Mollison's distance flights:

August, 1931—Australia to England, almost 10,000 miles, in 8 days, 21 hours, 25 minutes.

March, 1932—England to Capetown, 6200 miles in 4 days, 17 hours, 24 minutes.

February, 1933—Africa to Brazil, across the South Atlantic.

Mrs. Mollison began making long flights a year before her husband flew to Australia. She was made a commander of the British Empire for a 19-day journey from England to Australia in 1930.

She made a round trip between London and Tokio in August, 1931, and 15 months later wrested from Mollison his London-Cape Town record. She completed the flight in 4 days, 6 hours.

was winding up its meeting, the Independent Petroleum Association and a group of other independent associations not taking part in the Emergency Committee sessions, presented a substitute code to Johnson and numerous objections to the code before him.

The substitute proposed a 30-hour week for producing and refining employes and a 36-hour week for retail filling station employes, and a flat minimum pay of 50 cents an hour, as compared with the Emergency Committee's 40-hour week and geographical area rates ranging from 40 to 47 cents. It also asked that the President take steps immediately to regulate operation and "exorbitant" rates of pipe lines.

It declared against price-fixing either by the Government or purchasers, but said that if it were necessary to fix prices, the President should take steps to see that the price of "crude petroleum and all of its products are kept in a proper normal relation."

President Roosevelt by executive order put into immediate effect a new code submitted by the rayon dyeing and printing industry, estimated to employ 30,000 workers. With a maximum 40-hour week, the industry will pay 45 cents an hour minimum to men and 35 cents to women employes.

J. W. M'AFEE QUITS MAYOR'S COMMITTEE ON PATRONAGE

J. Wesley McAfee, special tax attorney for the city, has resigned from the voluntary position of secretary of Mayor Dickmann's patronage committee, because of the pressure of official duties. The committee is composed of officials and associates of the Mayor, who pass on applications of Democrats for city jobs.

Dickmann accepted the resignation reluctantly, he said, but with gratitude for McAfee's work. James E. Darst, a former newspaper man, who has been employed in the Mayor's office, will succeed McAfee on the committee.

A suit by chain stores opposing the city chain store tax, is set for trial in Circuit Court Sept. 18 and a suit by Washington University, opposing the city's effort to tax its commercial property, is due for trial in Circuit Court next autumn. These were among the things that will occupy McAfee.

BUSINESS MEN'S MEETING AT INSTANCE OF GEN. JOHNSON

A meeting of St. Louis business men at which the possible formation of a St. Louis committee to aid the National Industrial Recovery Administration will be discussed has been called by Mayor Dickmann for 2 p. m. tomorrow at City Hall.

The call for the meeting was sent out following receipt of a telegram by Jacob M. Lashly, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce, from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, N. I. R. A. head, asking that a committee be formed in St. Louis to explain all phases of the recovery act and to encourage acceptance of President Roosevelt's proclamation asking for a blanket code for all industry.

The meeting will be open to a limited number of men. A meeting of all trade groups and associations will probably be held later.

WOMAN, STABBED 12 TIMES, SLAIN NEAR KENT, O., COLLEGE

Factory Worker Apparently Had Been Assaulted and Struggled Desperately With Slayer.

By the Associated Press.

KENT, O., July 22.—A 23-year-old factory worker, Mary Klinko, was found stabbed to death late today in a wooded section not far from the Kent State College campus. She had been missing since yesterday afternoon.

She had been stabbed 12 times in the neck and chest, but no trace was found of a knife in the brambles and undergrowth where the body was found. Coroner J. R. Turner, after a preliminary examination, said it was indicated she had been assaulted.

Scratches on her face, torn clothing and trampled underbrush gave evidence the girl had struggled desperately against her assailant.

Little Census Gain in Sweden.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, July 22.—Sweden's population, says an official report, was 6,190,364 on Jan. 1, a net increase in a year of 27,918. The excess of births over deaths was only 2.96 a thousand, the lowest ratio, except in 1918 and 1931, since 1813.

WIFE OF MISSING MAN APPEALS FOR RETURN

Mrs. Christine Scott Does Not Think Husband Killed Self Despite Letter.

Mrs. Christine Scott wants her husband to come back. She does not believe he has killed himself, as he intimated he would in last Monday's letter. She does not consider him a failure and never did. She knows it is no solution for him to disappear, for her to return to Scotland with Edgar, who is going on seven.

Mrs. Scott told a reporter yesterday how her husband, Gilbert, left their home at 6154 Etzel avenue last Monday morning to go to the filling station he operated at 1155 Hodiamont avenue. She has not seen him since, but has had a letter, as has a brother who financed the filling station for Scott.

"He thought Edgar and I would get along better without him," Mrs. Scott said. "But we won't. We can't. And he wrote that he thought he'd been a failure. He wasn't. He's a man who's always held good jobs. Things just went against us. He didn't get the breaks, but it wasn't for the lack of trying.

"He lost some money. It wasn't so much, but to us it was a lot. He cashed a check for $20 at the station and it came back, no good. He worried about that all week. He didn't eat. He wouldn't take his dinner right, or his breakfast or his lunch. It told me it was just the heat, but I know now it wasn't. Then, last Sunday night, he lost $10 out of his pocket, making change or something. He left to go to business Monday morning and we haven't seen him since.

"I'll try to describe him," she said, "but even after all these years—we were married in Hamilton, Ont., in 1922—it's hard to tell anyone how he looks. He's tall, about 5 feet 10 or 11, slender, and he has a little bald spot. His hair is sort of wiry, stands up almost straight and he has a high forehead. He wears tortoise-shell glasses and he can't see out of one eye. There is a scar on one side of his neck—I believe it's the right. He is a long-faced man. When he left home he was wearing blue pants with a little stripe in them, and a blue shirt. I don't believe he was wearing a tie.

"We want to get in touch with him if he's still living. He left a note on the door of the station that he'd be back at 9 o'clock, and he went away. Edgar saw it and told me. I thought he had gone to police headquarters about that bad check.

"But he didn't come; Tuesday morning I got a letter, mailed from East St. Louis.

"It said, 'Well, I supposed you've been wondering all day where I am. Well, I'm here to end it all off. I hate to do this for your and Edgar's sake, but I don't see any way out of it.' He said he'd lost some money—that $10—and for me to cable my aunt in Glasgow, and then he said, 'Don't let Edgar see me after it's all over.'

"Gilbert is 41 years old. As I said he's well educated, an engineer, He worked for two years for the Edison company. Then they found out he had only one eye and they gave him notice. They couldn't keep anybody who wasn't perfect. After that he worked for a construction company in Detroit and it went out of business.

"Finally we came here and he couldn't get an engineering job for the same reason he lost out at Edison. His brother helped him with money and helped him again. He was the hardest-working man you ever saw. And now he's gone. I think he went back to Detroit or to Chicago."

DIVORCEE AND MAN SHE SAYS PROMISED TO WED BUT DIDN'T

MRS. PEARL SELF.

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

MATT SIECKHAUS.

$40,000 SUIT ALLEGES BREACH OF PROMISE

Mrs. Pearl Self, Divorcee, Files Action Against Matt Seickhaus.

Matt Seickhaus, superintendent of the Ralston-Purina plant, was sued for $40,000 in a breach of promise suit filed against him in Circuit Court yesterday by Mrs. Pearl Self, 36-year-old former shoeworker who now operates a rooming house at 3707 North Ninth st.

Mrs. Self, a divorcee who has a 14-year-old daughter, alleges she met Seickhaus in January, 1932, and that shortly afterward Seickhaus, who is about 60 years old, asked her to marry him.

A date was set, she declares, but when the date, Decoration Day of 1932, came around, Seickhaus pleaded ill health and the marriage plans were postponed until Chirstmas. Prior to Christmas, however, Seickhaus revealed to her for the first time, she charges, that he was married, but added that his wife was ill and expected to die, and that he would marry Mrs. Self after Mrs. Seickhaus' death.

Prior to this revelation, the petition continues, Mrs. Self had made a trip to Minnesota with Seickhaus, relying on his alleged promise to marry her.

Seickhaus, Mrs. Self asserts, continued to visit her after telling her he was married. His wife died on March 31, she says, but after that time he refused to carry out his promise to marry her and finally quit seeing her altogether.

Seickhaus, a resident of Long Lake, near Mitchell in Madison County, could not be reached.

AUTO DEATH ACCIDENTAL

Coroner's Verdict in Case of J. Harry Temm, Druggist.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the case of J. Harry Temm, druggist, who was killed by an automobile Friday night at St. Charles and McKibbon roads, St. Louis County.

Francis Maginn, 20-year-old Park Department employe, 5934 Minerva avenue, did not testify, but told police he was unable to stop his machine in time to avoid striking Temm, who had alighted from a street car and started across the road to his home, 8715 Burton avenue, two blocks away.

ANONYMOUS GIFTS OF $700,000 MADE TO WASHINGTON U.

Money From Two Donors to Be Used to Erect and Maintain a Physics Building There.

Announcement of two anonymous gifts, totaling about $700,000, for the construction of a physics building at Washington University, for its maintenance and for the support of teaching and research work there, was made last night by Dr. Malvern B. Clopton, president of the university corporation.

Plans have been drawn by Jamieson & Spearl, architects of the university. A contract for erection of the structure is about to be awarded by the university, which has received bids. Construction is to be started at once and the building is to be ready for occupancy in September, 1934.

One donor provided about $250,000 for the building and equipment and $100,000 as an endowment for maintenance. The other gave $350,000 to endow the physics department, furthering its work of research and instruction. Classes in physics are held now in Eads Hall.

The new building will be the first unit of a proposed additional quadrangle, adjoining the main quadrangle on the north. It will be 175 feet long and will vary in width from 52 to 105 feet, the longitudinal axis running east and west. The eastern end will be approximately in line with the front of Brookings Hall, the principal building on the campus. The proposed quadrangle will be devoted to engineering subjects.

University officials disclosed a plan for another quadrangle in the future, to the south of Brookings Hall, to balance the engineering group.

Tudor-Gothic in Design.

Tudor-Gothic design, corresponding to the style of most of the buildings on the campus, was adopted by the architects for the new physics building. Missouri granite and Indiana limestone will be used for the exterior walls. There will be two main floors and a well-lighted ground floor. A tower-like structure near the center will rise two stories higher. Battlements will ornament the roof lines.

On the ground floor will be research rooms for the faculty and advanced students. The first floor will be occupied by classrooms, a library and offices, and the second floor by laboratories for instruction purposes. Use of deep reinforced concrete beams will result in an unusually solid structure, minimizing vibration, to facilitate scientific work. To avoid surface tremors of the earth, there will be a sub-basement 53 by 66 feet in extent. It will be ventilated artificially to assist in experiments calling for constant temperatures.

The tower section is not purely for the sake of appearances. From it shafts will lead to the sub-basement for experiments with falling bodies. The building will have an unusual amount and variety of electric wiring. It will have alternating and direct current, 110 and 220-volt lines and single wire, two-phase and three-phase circuits.

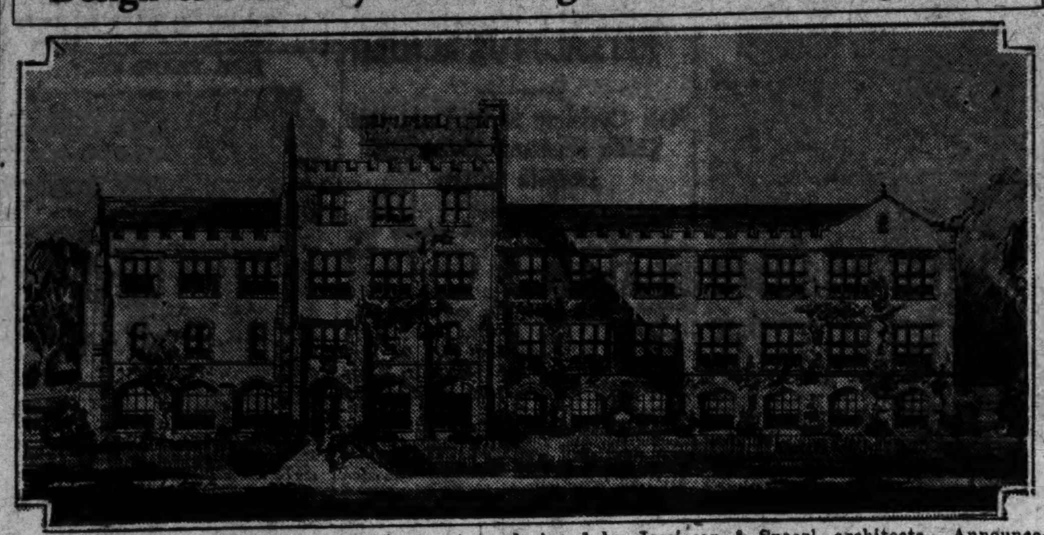
University's Statement.

"The building and the endowment," said a university announcement, "are a testimony to the importance of and the great progress being made in physics and in particular to the place of distinction which the present staff of the department, headed by Prof. A. L. Hughes, holds in this scientific field. Prof. Hughes is an authority in the field of photo-electricity.

"Special attention will continue to be given to research in the new building and the facilities for that purpose are greatly increased. The endowment of the department affords a permanent basis upon which the future work can be organized and provides a stabilized program of future activity. It is also in line with the high development of the scientific departments in the university and in accordance with the progress of the pure sciences in late years and the increasingly fundamental part that they play in our present knowledge and education."

The last large gift to Washington University was $850,000, made by Joseph B. Givens, retired architect and contractor, in November, 1930, for the architectural building, Givens Hall, opened in memory of his parents last October. He gave $300,000 for the structure, $100,000 to endow it and $450,000 for the nucleus of a scholarship fund for the architectural school.

Design of New Physics Building Given to Washington U.



CONSTRUCTION will start soon on this structure, designed by Jamieson & Spearl, architects. Announcement was made last night of two anonymous donations, totaling about $700,000, for erecting this building and endowing its maintenance and its teaching and research work. This is the north facade, to face a proposed new engineering quadrangle.

Registration of Securities.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Registrations of proposed security issues with the Federal Trade Commission today reached approximately $117,000,000 with 11 companies filing applications to sell over $10,000,000 worth.

MURDERED MAN IDENTIFIED

Victim of Train Killing Was Paducah Man.

ROBINSON, Ill., July 22.—A man shot to death because of a dispute over a piece of cake today was identified as Forest Giles, 28, of Paducah, Ky. A brother, Wayne, made the identification.

Giles' body was found, a bullet in the heart, on a coal car Thursday. Sam Reede, 18 years old, a Negro, of Cairo, Ill., confessed he shot him because Giles refused to give him a piece of cake. Reede is in the local jail.

ASKS ALL WHO WOULD SEEK OLD AGE PENSIONS TO WRITE

Missouri Senate Committee Drafting Bill Wants Data on Probable Number.

The committee of State Senators appointed by the last Legislature to draft an old age pension law asks that indigent persons, 70 years old or more, who expect to apply for pensions, communicate with the committee.

The purpose of the request is to obtain data on the probable number of persons who will apply for pensions. A constitutional amendment, approved by voters last November, authorized the Legislature to enact an old-age pension law, and several bills for that purpose were introduced in the last Legislature. They failed of passage, however, because no satisfatcory means of raising the needed revenue was found.

Members of the Senate Committee are: Carter Buford, Ellington; J. C. McDowell, Charleston; P. S. Terry, Festus; Lon Kelly, Pineville, and Joseph Brogan and Michael Kinney, St. Louis.

The committee plans, within the next six months, to obtain copies of the old age pension laws of about 20 states which have enacted such legislation and to prepare a bill for introduction in the General Assembly which will meet in January, 1935.

CHICAGO WOMAN CONVICTED OF PLOT TO KILL HUSBAND

He rushes in Just Before Jury Retires and Kisses Her; Hoodlums Confessed to Their Part.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Mrs. Bessie Opas was convicted today of plotting to kill her husband, Marion, an automobile dealer, for his $15,000 insurance in which double indemnity would be paid in the event of death by accident—the jury's verdict carried a sentence of one to five years in prison and a fine of $2000.

The woman was accused of hiring hoodlums, who already have confessed, to kill her husband.

The jury reached its verdict after only a few minutes of deliberation although just before they retired, and in the absence of the judge, her husband rushed to her side and kissed her.

Until we learned better

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

Until we learned better, we used to mix wood and steel in our car bodies and wheels.

It was the best way to make bodies—then. But the state of the art has advanced.

Of course, it is more expensive to make an all-steel body than to make a wooden frame and nail steel panels on to it. The better way involves an initial expenditure of several millions of dollars for new dies, which renders a change very costly. Cars, especially large expensive cars which are produced in small volume, cannot afford this, because the dies cost as much for one car as for a million. That alone explains why all-steel bodies are not used in all cars.

But our basic policy from the beginning is to make a good car better, regardless of cost.

For example, when we discarded wood-steel body construction, it was not because we lacked wood. We still have some thousands of acres of the best hard wood in America. Economy would urge us to use up the wood first, and then adopt the better all-steel body. But we decided that quality was more important than expense.

We weighed the reasons, for and against, before we made the change.

We could see only one reason for retaining a mixed wood-and-steel body—nailing the metal on, instead of welding an all-steel body into a strong one-piece whole. That reason was, it would be cheaper—for us.

Our reasons for adopting an all-steel body were these: A wood-steel body is not much stronger structurally than its wooden frame. In all American climates, wood construction weakens with age. Every used car lot gives evidence of this. Rain seeps in between joints and the wood decays. A car may have a metal surface, and yet not be of steel construction. Under extreme shock or stress the steel body remains intact—dented perhaps, but not crushed.

Steel does not need wood for strength or protection. Wood is fine for furniture, but not for the high speed vehicles of 1933.

In the Ford body there are no joints to squeak, no seams to crack or leak.

The all-steel body is more expensive—to us, but not to you.

By all odds, then, steel bodies seem preferable.

Wheels also have become all-steel. No one argues that an electrically welded one-piece steel wheel, such as the Ford wheel, needs to be "strengthened" by adding wood to it.

The one-piece all-steel body is the strongest, safest, quietest, most durable body made. That is our only reason for making them.

MILWAUKEE MOVE TO RECALL MAYOR GAINS MOMENTUM

Petitions in Every Ward Against Socialist D. W. Hoan — Realty Man, 25, Leads Opposition.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 22.—Re-elected a year ago by the largest majority of his long political areer, Milwaukee's Socialist Mayor, Daniel W. Hoan, today faced a growing recall movement.

In every ward petitions asking for a recall election were being circulated as 25-year-old Fortney Stark tried to unseat the Socialist leader who for 17 years has headed Milwaukee's city government.

Stark is the outstanding candidate, having the support of an organization calling itself the Recall Council. There might be other andidates, in which event it would e necessary to have a primary, if a recall election were ordered.

Stark, a real estate operator, who says he holds the viewpoint of the home owner, for several years of his short business career has made public demands for reduction of taxes. Recently he was secretary of the Real Estate Board, which campaigned for and effected legislation limiting city expenditures.

His concern for the taxpayer collided with one of the principles of the Milwaukee Socialist Party—which holds that the city should be liberal employer, upholding with good wages the purchasing power

MILWAUKEE MOVE TO RECALL MAYOR GAINS MOMENTUM

Petitions in Every Ward Against Socialist D. W. Hoan — Realty Man, 25, Leads Opposition.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 22.—Re-elected a year ago by the largest majority of his long political career, Milwaukee's Socialist Mayor, Daniel W. Hoan, today faced a growing recall movement.

In every ward petitions asking for a recall election were being circulated as 25-year-old Fortney Stark tried to unseat the Socialist leader who for 17 years has headed Milwaukee's city government.

Stark is the outstanding candidate, having the support of an organization calling itself the Recall Council. There might be other candidates, in which event it would be necessary to have a primary, if a recall election were ordered.

Stark, a real estate operator, who says he holds the viewpoint of the home owner, for several years of his short business career has made public demands for reduction of taxes. Recently he was secretary of the Real Estate Board, which campaigned for and effected legislation limiting city expenditures.

His concern for the taxpayer collided with one of the principles of the Milwaukee Socialist Party—which holds that the city should be liberal employer, upholding with good wages the purchasing power of city workers, and setting an example to other employers.

But the economic depression hit the taxpayers and delinquent taxes mounted until now, according to Stark, they total about $25,000,000. The city this month retired several bond issues, and to get the money gave its employes their pay half in cash and half in city promisosry notes sold in small denominations as "baby bonds." Bonds are accepted in payment of taxes, and it is charged that they will be gathered in by large taxpayers at a discount.

The city met its bond obligations, but did it, Stark said, by a scheme which piled up trouble for the future. Actually, he charged, the city's budget was "wickedly unbalanced."

Mayor Hoan, who has a faculty for making every political campaign "bitter," has been scornful of the recall movement. He has made no direct reference to it, and denied that Milwaukee was building up any extraordinary troubles. He has given caustic advice to "selfish interests to stop pounding the anvil."

Recall petitions must be signed by about 43,000 voters. The Recall Council stated that 1500 workers were circulating the petitions and predicted that enough signers would be obtained to hold the recall election in September.

STRIKE IN HOLLYWOOD SOUND PICTURES SET FOR TODAY

27,000 to Be Affected by Action With Only 650 Technicians Actually Striking.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, July 22.—Production of sound motion pictures in Hollywood was to be virtually stopped tomorrow, with a strike of sound technicians in 11 studios affiliated with the Association of Motion Picture Producers called tonight at midnight.

Unless a settlement is effected, the strike will tie up a $200,000,000 production program that is well under way, will halt a weekly payroll of $1,500,000 and jeopardize the jobs of 27,000 workers in the studios.

Representatives of the studios and the sound technicians conferred all day in an effort to avert the walkout, which is the outgrowth of the strike of sound technicians at the Columbia studios, where 800 employees have been out of work two weeks.

Although there are 27,000 workers affected by the strike, the actual number of strikers is only 650. The more serious consequences for the stars and featured players is that there may be a wholesale cancellation of actors' contracts under the strike clause. The studios may exercise that prerogative at any time after the strike becomes effective.

The technicians were scheduled to quit work, effective at midnight, in the following studios: Warner Brothers-First National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO-Radio, Paramount, Universal, Fox, Educational, United Artists, Harold Lloyd, Hal Roach and Bryan Foy Productions.

The strikers are demanding a six-day week, 12-hour maximum day and a uniform wage scale.

MAN CAUGHT IN STOLEN AUTO IDENTIFIED AS ROBBER

A warrant charging robbery in the first degree was issued at Clayton yesterday against Jack L. Hyde, 34-year-old lather, Rolla, Mo., who was arrested by St. Louis police Thursday in an automobile stolen June 24 from a salesman for the Reller Chevrolet Co., 7239 Manchester avenue, Maplewood.

Hyde has been identified, according to police, as one of two men who accompanied the salesman, John Lang, in a demonstration ride in the machine and held him up near Grant road and Elm avenue, south of Webster Groves, taking the car and $2. The other robber has not been caught.

Shoe Factory at Centralia, Ill., Grants 7½ Per Cent Increase.

By the Associated Press.

CENTRALIA, Ill., July 22.—L. H. Vorwick, superintendent of the Barnes Shoe Co. factory here, said today he had been authorized to grant a 7½ per cent increase in wages effective July 24. He said another 7½ per cent increase would be granted in September.

BREWERY BUSINESS BOOMS IN ST. LOUIS DISTRICT

Seven Plants Selling Beer, Four More Operating and Eight New Ones Have Been Formed.

Seven breweries in the St. Louis district are marketing beer, four others have started operation and will begin marketing their product within two months, and eight new companies have been formed to make beer, according to the research bureau of the Industrial Club of St. Louis.

The breweries selling beer are producing about 4745 barrels daily, but plans are being made to increase the annual capacity, now about 1,492,000 barrels, to 2,537,000. This would increase the number of employes from 2900 to 3950, it was stated. The four operating plants not yet marketing beer, employ about 550 persons and produce about 1535 barrels daily, or between 415,000 and 530,000 barrels annually.

The new companies plan a combined annual capacity of 1,125,000 barrels, eventually increasing this to 1,850,000. They would employ 1300 persons. If plans are carried out in all cases, annual capacity production would be 5,017,000 barrels and employment would be provided for 6000 persons. Before prohibition the St. Louis district had a maximum annual capacity of 3,000,000 barrels and 4000 brewery workers were employed.

DR. HARVEY S. M'KAY OF ST. LOUIS U. DIES

Professor of Surgery and Head of St. Anthony Hospital Staff Succumbs to Nephritis.

Dr. Harvey S. McKay, 24 Wydown terrace, professor of surgery in St. Louis University, died of nephritis yesterday at St. Anthony Hospital, where he had been president of the staff since 1918. He was 54 years old.

Born in Auburn, Lincoln County, Dr. McKay was third of a line of physicians. His father was Dr. S. R. McKay, and his grandfather, Dr. Harvey S. McKay, practiced in Troy before the Civil War. A son, Newell R. McKay, is to enter the St. Louis University School of Medicine next fall.

Dr. McKay was graduated from Buchanan College at Troy and, in 1901, from St. Louis University School of Medicine. He continued his studies in Paris and in Berlin and Tuebingen, Germany, returning to practice here in 1903. He joined the staff of St. Anthony Hospital 28 years ago, and entered the medical school faculty as associate professor in 1909.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Florence Newell McKay, the son, a daughter, Miss Mary Jane McKay, his mother, Mrs. Julia McKay of Troy, a sister and three brothers.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow from the residence to the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes.

COCHRAN OPPOSES NATIONAL POLICE TO WAR ON GANGS

Says Central U. S. Force Is Not Needed to Fight Kidnapers If Other Agencies Co-Operate.

BY RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Representative John J. Cochran (Dem.), St. Louis, who has been conferring with Assistant Attorney General Joseph H. Keenan regarding new kidnaping and racketeering legislation, is opposed to the proposal of Senator Copeland (Dem.), New York, for an American "Scotland Yards," or National police force.

Soon after the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, Cochran obtained the enactment of a law making it a felony to use postal facilities in kidnapings and rackets, and was co-author of the law making it a felony to transport a kidnaped person from one state to another. Under these laws, Federal authorities obtain their authority to participate in the pursuit of kidnapers and racketeers.

Cochran declared today that one central Federal detective and police force would not be necessary if all Federal, State and local police agencies co-operated.

Considers Further Legislation.

"I have conferred with Mr. Keenan relative to additional legislation needed to strengthen existing laws as well as to extend further power to Government enforcement agents," said Cochran. "I found him a determined individual who has accepted with a vengeance the great task assigned to him and I predict that before his campaign is ended he will break up the gangs that have been responsible for the greatest crime wave this country has ever known. One thing is certain it will not be a publicity stunt. The part the Government plays will receive little or no mention in the public press. Success in ridding the community of criminals will be the objective.

"The question of Government jurisdiction is already settled. Under existing laws it is the duty of the Government enforcement officers to determine whether Federal laws have been violated. In dealing with kidnapers the Federal Government steps in to see if the victim has been moved from one state to another. While it is making its investigation along this line its efforts will be to apprehend the criminals.

Secret Service to Co-Operate.

In the final analysis it is for the courts to determine whether it is a Federal or State case, but the Government is in a position to attempt to solve the crime. Until the violators are in custody, and not until then, will its officers cease to run down the offenders.

"The Department of Justice in its campaign against law violators will have the assistance and cooperation of Post Office inspectors, agents of the intelligence unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, immigration and custom inspectors and the secret service.

"'Old Whiskers,' as Uncle Sam is termed in gangland, is in the picture to stay. Gangland can move from city to city or state to state, but it will find 'Old Whiskers' on the job wherever it goes in the future.

"It being evident that local police have been unable to rid the country of the gangsters, the Government has stepped in to help solve the problem. Where it is apparent that the local or state enforcement officers are not doing their full duty, every effort will be made to show that they are engaged in a conspiracy with gangland in carrying out its nefarious practices.

Says Money Will Be Provided.

"There will be no attempt to economize in combating the law violators. Just as soon as Mr. Keenan develops his needs, Congress will be asked for the money and there will be no delay in advancing all that is necessary. No additional organization is necessary but it will be necessary to school the existing forces. This will be done by men already in the service who are fully advised of the activities and methods used by kidnapers and gangsters.

"A complete picture of gangland, all its ramifications, and the names of the members and methods of gangs in every part of the country will be in possession of the Department of Justice within a fortnight. It already has the most complete finger-print system ever developed.

"There can be no doubt that the Congress will stand firmly behind Mr. Keenan and his assistants, enact every law that is necessary and advance as much money as he requests. It was no easy task for us to secure the enactment of the kidnaping and extortion laws. The lawmakers who had long assailed any measure tending towards centralization of power were bitterly opposed to the bills, but since that time kidnaping and racketeering has spread throughout the nation and I am sure they will now join with us in enacting any additional laws Mr. Keenan says are required. I have assured him I will introduce any measure he advances that has for its purpose the end of the kidnaper and the racketeer. There is no place for either in this country and the sooner he learns that 'Old Whiskers' means to exterminate gangland and ceases its activities the better it will be for all concerned."

GIRL'S SECOND MATE KILLS THIRD AND SELF

First Husband of Kennett, Mo., Wife, 19, Also Committed Suicide.

By the Associated Press.

KENNETT, Mo., July 22. — The husband and a former husband of Jewell Hasty Bell, 19 years old, are dead, bringing the number of tragedies in her marital life to three.

Harry Bell, 24, her third husband, was fatally shot by her second husband, Arthur Pruett, 44, last night. Pruett then took his own life. Bell died today at a Poplar Bluff hospital.

Mrs. Bell's first husband, Robert Wright, committed suicide about three years ago when, officers said, she refused to live with him.

Last night's shooting was a climax to the kidnaping of Mrs. Bell by Pruett 10 days ago. She said today he took her to his cabin in the woods near Gideon, 30 miles away, and kept her several days.

When he returned, Pruett was arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace of Mrs. Bell's mother, Mrs. Florence Hasty. Pruett obtained a rifle and returned to the Hasty home where Mrs. Hasty and her four daughters barricaded themselves in a room while Bell sought to pacify him.

In the shooting that followed, Bell was fatally shot and Mrs. Hasty suffered a hand wound when Pruett fired through a window into the barricaded room.

Pruett, Mrs. Bell said, was married twice before and twice since he married her in 1931.

SOLICITORS OF FEES IN HOME LOAN SERVICE SOUGHT

An investigation of individuals or firms who have offered, for a fee, to assist applicants for loans from the Federal Home Loan Corporation to get their loans was ordered yesterday by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Claude Crooks.

More than a dozen persons have complained to Crooks and to G. C. Vandover, director of the Home Loan Corporation for Missouri that they answered advertisements in the newspapers of individuals or firms that offer to renew home loans, only to be solicited for fees ranging from $10 to $50 by the advertisers to represent them in getting loans through the Home Loan Corporation.

The law creating the home loan corporation provides that "no person, partnership, association or corporation shall make any charge in connection with a loan from the corporation or the exchange of its bonds" and provides a penalty of not to exceed five years in the penitentiary and a fine of $10,000 for violation of the section. The Department of Justice will be in charge of the investigation.

8 SILVER NATIONS SIGN AGREEMENT TO INCREASE PRICE

Pittman Obtains Memorandum Under Which India Restricts Sales While Others Absorb Production

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 22.—Representatives of the silver producing and holding countries at the world economic conference signed tonight an agreement the provisions of which seek to increase the price of the metal which is used for money by nearly half the population of the globe.

The accord was regarded as a victory for the persistent efforts of Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, who has been carrying on untiring negotiations for rehabilitation of the silver market.

In Pittman's hotel suite the representatives of India, China and Japan, whose coffers are bulging with monetary silver, of the United States, Mexico, Canada, Australia and Peru, the great world producers, completed a memorandum which calls for restriction of silver sales for four years.

When ratified by the home governments the document will take the form of a treaty.

No Monetary Silver Sales.

The big producers will absorb from mine production amounts of silver equivalent to the sales of holding countries. They will hold this metal for monetary use while agreeing not to sell any monetary silver.

Signature of the pact was described by Senator Pittman as "the most dramatic moment of my life." In his long efforts the Nevada Senator has been assisted by Edward Bruce, silver expert.

When the accord is ratified it will make effective a resolution adopted by the monetary commission of the conference under which states agreed to cease debasing silver coinage and to increase, where feasible, the use of the white metal for small pieces of money.

Although the American delegation was unable to obtain in the conference itself an agreement for as extensive use of silver for monetary purposes as had been hoped, Pittman felt that the pact between the silver nations went far toward removing the pressure which has broken down the price of the metal to the lowest level in history.

Experts explained that this demoralization arose chiefly from dumping of silver on the world market by countries diminishing its monetary use, chiefly India.

American specialists said the principal result of this situation was to reduce the purchasing power of such countries as Mexico and China for American and other foreign goods.

India to Restrict Sales.

The most important part of the accord is the provision that India shall restrict silver sales to a yearly average of 35,000,000 ounces over four years starting next Jan. 1, while producing countries will absorb an equivalent amount.

The quotas to be alotted to producing nations are yet to be determined, but it was understood the United States is to take approximately 24,000,000 ounces annually, and Pittman was confident the other producing states would absorb the remainder.

Frederick E. Murphy, American wheat expert, continued conversations today with the French and spokesmen of other wheat importing countries with a view to some agreement for wheat restriction.

James M. Cox of the American delegation completed arrangements for the final meeting of the conference's monetary commission, which he heads, Monday.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Senator Pittman planned to sail for New York Thursday. Cox will remain at least until mid-August.

After the impressive red sealed silver document had been signed, Pittman said: "I regard this as one of the greatest developments in monetary history. It represents a compromise between the gold standard and bi-metallism. Gold remains the measure of value, but a real and stable value is restored to silver which is the money of half the world's population."

Minor revisions in the accord required last-minute initialing by government representatives. W. W. Yen, the Chinese delegate, was the last to put his initials on it.

Called Big Achievement.

Some members of the American delegation regarded the agreement as the greatest achievement of the world economic conference.

Spain, which has large monetary stocks but has not been a great seller of silver, agreed under the pact to restrict its average sales for the next four years to 5,000,000 ounces annually.

China, second only to India as a great silver holder, agreed to sell no silver as a result of demonetization during the four-year period.

The accord provides that India may sell silver in excess of its quota to governments wishing to use it in settlement of war debts to the United States.

The document embodying the pact will be filed with the United States Government and notices of its ratification must be made to Washington not later than April 1, 1934. The agreement concludes by saying:

"The Government of the United States is requested to take such steps as may be necessary for the purpose of the conclusion of this agreement."

Forestry Workers Send $62,500 A Month to Families Here

Lighten Burden of Relief Agencies—Expenditures for First Half of Year 88 Pct. Above Same Period in 1932.

St. Louis members of the Civilian Conservation Corps have lightened the relief burden in St. Louis by sending back to their families $25 of the $30 they are paid each month. There are about 2500 St. Louisans in the corps, and the total of their contributions to their families is about $62,500 a month.

The St. Louis contingent was chosen by the relief agencies from among the needy families under their care. In most cases the money the forestry workers send back is sufficient to remove their families entirely from the relief rolls.

Relief expenditures of Citizens' Committee during June, when 34,276 families were helped, totaled $636,159. The cost was 6 per cent under the peak month of the year, April, and the number of families helped was 5 per cent less.

The decline in relief costs begun in May, was continued in June, but expenditures for the first six months of 1933 totaled $3,670,558, an increase of 88 per cent over the $1,955,869 spent in the first half of 1932. So far this year 49,186 families have been helped, compared with 33,870 in the corresponding period of last year.

E. G. Steger, director of Citizens' Committee, said a more substantial decline in relief costs would have been experienced in June had not many veterans, whose pensions were eliminated or severely reduced, applied for aid. Definite figures on the number of such cases were lacking, but Steger said they had materially affected the total of relief costs.

The city's work-relief program, which has given employment to about 800 men since 1st March, is to be discontinued temporarily this week. Budget Director Arthur Meyers, who is chairman of the work relief division of Citizens' Committee, said the original $150,000 appropriation for that work is about exhausted.

The appropriation was made from general revenues, with the understanding that the general revenue fund would be reimbursed later after the sale of part of the $4,600,000 relief bond issue authorized last November.

Both laborers and "white collar" workers were engaged in the work relief program and were paid 30 cents an hour for a minimum of four eight-hour days each week. The laborers were put to work in the parks, cleaning sewers and the levee, repairing streets and grading the downtown plazas. Draftsmen, engineers and architects were employed by the City Plan Commission and by the street department to make maps and surveys.

Whether the work relief program will be resumed in the fall will hinge largely on what Federal relief funds will be available for the last half of the year. In the first six months of 1933 about 70 per cent of the cost of relief has been met with money advanced by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The R. F. C., however, is no longer concerned with relief work, which has been taken over by the newly-created Federal Relief Administration. That organization has a $500,000,000 appropriation, of which half is to be expended in outright grants, at the discretion of the Federal relief director, to local relief agencies, and the other half by matching $1 of Federal relief money with every $2 of State and municipal funds spent for relief in the previous quarter. On what basis St. Louis will participate has not been determined.

ST. LOUISANS HAVE ARTISTS' COLONY AT STE. GENEVIEVE

Two Women Directing Work of Students Who Visit Picturesque Old Town.

Mrs. Jessie Beard Rickly and Mrs. Aimee Schweig of St. Louis have established an artists' colony in Ste. Genevieve, Mo., and several St. Louis students have spent weekends or longer periods in the picturesque old town this summer, working under their direction.

The directors have established themselves in an old stone residence, two large rooms of which have been set aside as studios. The pupils paint and receive instruction there but more frequently take their equipment out-of-doors.

The two women spent last summer at Ste. Genevieve, painting and enjoying the life of the quiet town. They ended the season with an exhibition of their work.

Last March, Mrs. Rickly placed 18 Ste. Genevieve paintings on exhibition at the Artists' Guild here, together with other of her works. She and Mrs. Schweig plan to present a second exhibition at Ste. Genevieve in the autumn, with their own and pupils' work on display.

CONTROL OF RABIES IS EFFECTIVE HERE, DR. BREDECK SAYS

He Thinks the Methods He Adopted Will Reduce Disease to Vanishing Point in St. Louis.

The public, police, City Marshal, the city dog pound and the Humane Society are handling rabies control in St. Louis so well that the doctors have the least of the work, and can do it more efficiently than ever before, Health Commissioner Bredeck announces.

"It's a citizen's job first," he remarked yesterday "whenever all the citizens understand the necessary measures, and realize—as most of them do now—that everything we do is for the protection of themselves and their pets, the city agencies won't have much left to do in the fight against rabies."

Under the modernization of the Health Department, along lines which have brought comment from public health experts in Washington and New York as well as local medical organizations, every case of dog-bite that comes to the notice of any of the agencies is examined by Dr. Downey L. Harris, international authority on rabies.

In every case where a person is bitten by a dog known to have rabies or where there is any doubt, treatment is given. Only where it can be established that the dog did not have the disease is it safe to omit the treatment. That is established by tying up the dog for observation. Dog's saliva is infectious for three days before it shows symptoms of rabies and hence 10 days' observation allows a 7-day margin of safety.

Rounding Up Strays.

The city dog-catchers and the Humane Society are cleaning up stray dogs. By emergency order, every dog on the streets must be on leash. Police warn visitors with dogs as they cross the Mississippi, and, if they have no leash, provide them with a length of rope.

Already, said Dr. Bredeck, certain results are apparent:

The 78 cases a day which required the Pasteur treatment in the first 10 days of this month have dropped to 25 a day.

The number of persons bitten by stray or unidentified dogs has gone down, and the number of dogs under observations has gone up.

Taxpayers are more than making up the extra expenditure on dog-catching by the saving in the $12 to $14 which one treatment cost, and patients are spared the discomfort, and the expense and inconvenience of returning to Municipal Courts building for the series of injections.

Dr. Bredeck expects the methods in use to reduce rabies in St. Louis to the disappearing point.

"It would be absolutely out of the question without the fine cooperation we have had from the dog pound, the police, the marshal and the public," he said. "Ultimately it depends on the citizens.

"They're bound not only to comply with protective measures themselves but to insist on universal compliance as soon as they understand it is a humane effort to protect their own dogs as well as human beings.

"In destroying the strays, we insure that the dogs we have are cared for. In keeping pets on leash, we protect them from unsuspected contact with rabid strays. I have hunting dogs of my own, and I keep them in a special enclosure, for rabid dogs have been known to jump fences. When I go to a farm to hunt, I won't let them get near the farmer's dogs.

Calls Muzzles Useless.

"Muzzles are a cruelty to the animal and wholly ineffective. They keep a normal dog from protecting himself, and a rabid dog can bite right through them. The ordinance requires muzzles, but we're going to try to change it.

"We have nothing to say about licensing dogs, except that it means nothing whatever in rabies control. If a dog bites you and runs—as rabid dogs always run—are you going to get the number from a tiny collar plate?

"Those are places where the dog owners and the general public can help us and themselves. The thing for persons bitten to do is to identify the dog if possible, so it can be watched, and then to come down for examination by Dr. Harris. This is a public health agency and not a charity."

Spread of Rabies Last Winter.

The sudden rise in the number of persons bitten by rabid dogs here last winter was a demonstration of the theory, held by authorities including the International Rabies Commission of the League of Nations and now taken up by the St. Louis Health Department, that the way to control rabies is to control the dogs.

For several years, in what Dr. Bredeck called "false economy," the city's expenditures for keeping strays off the streets had been curtailed. Rabies everywhere rises and falls in cycles of prevalence and comparitive rarity, but the increase last February was far beyond anything the cycle has shown since the records were kept here.

In January the Health Department laboratories found only five of 12 dogs in postmortem examination had rabies. The number rose to 19 rabid of 26 examined in February and to 35 of the 60 examined in March. Last month it was down again to 12 of 30 examined. The figures are fluctuating now, but Dr.

ST. LOUISANS HAVE ARTISTS' COLONY AT STE. GENEVIEVE

Two Women Directing Work of Students Who Visit Picturesque Old Town.

Mrs. Jessie Beard Rickly and Mrs. Aimee Schweig of St. Louis have established an artists' colony in Ste. Genevieve, Mo., and several St. Louis students have spent week-ends or longer periods in the picesque old town this summer, working under their direction.

The directors have established themselves in an old stone residence, two large rooms of which have been set aside as studios. The pupils paint and receive instruction there but more frequently take their equipment out-of-doors.

The two women spent last summer at Ste. Genevieve, painting and enjoying the life of the quiet town. They ended the season with an exhibition of their work.

Last March, Mrs. Rickly placed 18 Ste. Genevieve paintings on exhibition at the Artists' Guild here, together with other of her works. She and Mrs. Schweig plan to present a second exhibition at Ste. Genevieve in the autumn, with their own and pupils' work on display.

CONTROL OF RABIES IS EFFECTIVE HERE, DR. BREDECK SAYS

He Thinks the Methods He Adopted Will Reduce Disease to Vanishing Point in St. Louis.

The public, police, City Marshal, the city dog pound and the Humane Society are handling rabies control in St. Louis so well that the doctors have the least of the work, and can do it more efficiently than ever before, Health Commissioner Bredeck announces.

"It's a citizen's job first," he remarked yesterday "whenever all the citizens understand the necessary measures, and realize—as most of them do now—that everything we do is for the protection of themselves and their pets, the city agencies won't have much left to do in the fight against rabies."

Under the modernization of the Health Department, along lines which have brought comment from public health experts in Washington and New York as well as local medical organizations, every case of dog-bite that comes to the notice of any of the agencies is examined by Dr. Downey L. Harris, international authority on rabies.

In every case where a person is bitten by a dog known to have rabies or where there is any doubt, treatment is given. Only where it can be established that the dog did not have the disease is it safe to omit the treatment. That is established by tying up the dog for observation. Dog's saliva is infectious for three days before it shows symptoms of rabies and hence 10 days' observation allows a 7-day margin of safety.

Rounding Up Strays.

The city dog-catchers and the Humane Society are cleaning up stray dogs. By emergency order, every dog on the streets must be on leash. Police warn visitors with dogs as they cross the Mississippi, and, if they have no leash, provide them with a length of rope.

Already, said Dr. Bredeck, certain results are apparent:

The 78 cases a day which required the Pasteur treatment in the first 10 days of this month have dropped to 25 a day.

The number of persons bitten by stray or unidentified dogs has gone down, and the number of dogs under observations has gone up.

Taxpayers are more than making up the extra expenditure on dog-catching by the saving in the $12 to $14 which one treatment cost, and patients are spared the discomfort, and the expense and inconvenience of returning to Municipal Courts building for the series of injections.

Dr. Bredeck expects the methods in use to reduce rabies in St. Louis to the disappearing point.

"It would be absolutely out of the question without the fine cooperation we have had from the dog pound, the police, the marshal and the public," he said. "Ultimately it depends on the citizens.

"They're bound not only to comply with protective measures themselves but to insist on universal compliance as soon as they understand it is a humane effort to protect their own dogs as well as human beings.

"In destroying the strays, we insure that the dogs we have are cared for. In keeping pets on leash, we protect them from unsuspected contact with rabid strays. I have hunting dogs of my own, and I keep them in a special enclosure, for rabid dogs have been known to jump fences. When I go to a farm to hunt, I won't let them get near the farmer's dogs.

The sudden rise in the number of persons bitten by rabid dogs here last winter was a demonstration of the theory, held by authorities including the International Rabies Commission of the League of Nations and now taken up by the St. Louis Health Department, that the way to control rabies is to control the dogs.

For several years, in what Dr. Bredeck called "false economy," the city's expenditures for keeping strays off the streets had been curtailed. Rabies everywhere rises and falls in cycles of prevalence and comparitive rarity, but the increase last February was far beyond enything the cycle has shown since the records were kept here.

In January the Health Department laboratories found only five of 12 dogs in postmortem examination had rabies. The number rose to 19 rabid of 26 examined in February and to 35 of the 60 examined in March. Last month it was down again to 12 of 30 examined. The figures are fluctuating now, but Dr. Bredeck expected them to fall permanently as control measures have time for full effect.

Against Vaccinating Dogs.

The department does not accept the vaccination of dogs against rabies as practiced by some other cities, including some in St. Louis County. Dr. Bredeck, explaining that it had time and again been found effective in some cases, but worthless in others, deplored it as creating a dangerous sense of false security.

In years of research Dr. Harris has developed an individual method of dog vaccination, using a serum he makes himself, with some indication of effectiveness. It is not generally distributed, and will not be until he has established its effectiveness in two years or more of research at the city dog pound. In fact, the unusual opportunity for research was the only inducement by which the city was able to obtain his services, Dr. Bredeck said.

STANLEY MAXWELL.

STANLEY MAXWELL DIES WHEN PLAYING TENNIS

Vice President of Cupples Co. Apparently Stricken With Heart Attack.

Stanley Maxwell, a vice-president of the Cupples Co., died suddenly at 10 o'clock yesterday morning while playing tennis at the home of Eugene R. McCarthy, 6481 Ellenwood avenue, Clayton. A heart attack apparently was the cause. Mr. Maxwell was 55 years old and unmarried.

He had been playing about 10 or 15 minutes when he collapsed without warning. Companions made a vain effort to resuscitate him and called a physician, who pronounced him dead. Coroner Tiernon of St. Louis County performed an autopsy at the Ambruster mortuary, Clayton road and Concordia lane, Clayton and pronounced him dead of heart disease.

Mr. Maxwell was in a doubles match with McCarthy, a vice-president of the Brown Shoe Co.; the Rev. Dr. Edward B. Willingham, 710 Eastgate avenue, University City, pastor of Delmar Baptist Church, and Alfred White, 108 Aberdeen place, Clayton.

He resided with his mother, Mrs. Thomas S. Maxwell, at 4919 McPherson avenue. Born here and educated at grammar school, he started as an office boy at the age of 16 with the Samuel Cupples Woodenware Co., forerunner of the Cupples Co. He worked himself up into the sales division and for several years represented the concern in Chicago. Returning to the sales office here, he was made a vice-president four years ago. His father, who died about 20 years ago, also was connected with the company.

Surviving are his mother and two brothers—Harold Maxwell, 501 Clara avenue, vice-president and general manager of the Cupples Co., and Robert Maxwell, salesman for the company at Denver, Colo. Mr. Maxwell was a director of the Masdin Insurance Co., a mutual fire insurance concern at Kansas City, of which McCarthy also is a director.

Private funeral services will be held today, preceding cremation.

WIFE SUES CONKEY WHITEHEAD

Property Settlement Reported With Soft Drink Business Heir.

CHICAGO, July 22.—A suit for divorce against Conkey Pate Whithead of Atlanta, Ga., millionaire heir to his father's soft drink business, has been filed in Circuit Court. Attorney Benjamin Ehrlich, representing Mrs. Marion Hughes Whitehead, said today a property settlement had been reached out of court.

Whitehead married Marion Hughes, daughter of a New York broker, in 1930 when she was 18 years old. He was divorced from his first wife, Mrs. Julia Murphy Whitehead, several years previously.

Nude Man Arrested.

Riding in the 2100 block of Lafayette avenue early yesterday, Motorcycle Patrolmen York and McKenna saw a nude man on the sidewalk. When they took him to City Hospital, he said he was Joseph Schimering, 40 years old, but could not remember where he lived or what had happened to his clothes.

NEW PLAN FOR MEDICAL CARE OF CHILDREN'S AID WARDS

Washington and St. Louis Universities Will Take Over All of This Work.

All medical attention required by those helped by the Children's Aid Society will now be supplied by the medical schools of St. Louis and Washington universities, eliminating the need for a staff physician, it was announced.

Herschel Alt, secretary of the society, said yesterday both schools had been rendering some service, but were now assuming the full burden. St. Louis University will continue to furnish medical care for children and widowers helped by the Citizens' Relief Unit of the society. Dental care will also be provided and a new service for unmarried mothers, including medical and psychological treatment, will be established.

As its part of the arrangement Washington University will conduct health examinations for children preliminary before they have been placed in foster homes and medical care afterward.

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 22.—Wall Street, following a protracted speculative spree, fled in confusion during the week before the ghost of 1929.

From Wednesday to Friday stocks, grains and other leading commodities were thrown overboard into the whirlpool of sinking prices for losses that wiped out sizable portions of spectacular gains which had been accumulating during the last three months. In the frightened selling rush the good went with the bad and discrimination was forgotten in the mob-like flight.

In the brief Saturday stock market session, while nervousness was still the dominating factor, shares managed to rally moderately as "bargain hunters" picked off some of the apparently considered "cheap" equities and the growing army of "bears" covered their commitments as a week-end precaution against good news between now and Monday.

The frantic stock trading got to such a pitch in the latter part of the week that commission houses were virtually swamped. The stock exchange governors, in response to demands for aid, announced that beginning Monday, until further notice, trading would not open until noon instead of at 10 a. m., as is the customary procedure. The Chicago Grain Mart was closed on both Friday and Saturday to permit harried brokers to dig out from under a mountain of business that was seriously interfering with orderly transactions.

It was one of the wildest and heaviest stock trading weeks on record. The sales volume totaled 44,645,243, which was around the peak of any week in the history of the exchange. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 90 selected issues dropped 17½ points to 77.1. This average reached its highest level for the year at 96.9 on last Monday.

Bond Decline Small.

While bonds of certain groups tumbled with stocks, the average for this market showed a net decline of only 1.7 points. On the other hand, wheat, from Monday to Thursday, was off 12⅞ to 22⅛ cents a bushel, rye lost 30 to 34⅝ cents a bushel and corn yielded 15¼ to 19 cents. Cotton trading continued through the week and this staple finished with losses of $5.65 to $6.30 a bale. Bar silver declined 4⅛ cents an ounce to 35½ cents.

The American dollar rallied sharply against the British pound sterling and leading European currencies, although this reversal of trend seemingly was not the same important motivating influence of former weeks.

Although mild warnings of a "corrective reaction" had been coming from various financial quarters in the past week or so, the realization of the top-heavy markets structure, with a minimum of cushioning short interests, did not permeate the consciousness of most enthusiastic traders until the previously buoyant alcohol share group nose-dived on Wednesday in the face of happy prohibition repeal news from the Southern States. Then the specter of the 1929 debacle, which appeared under similar circumstances, started a mad selling rush in all categories.

Business and industrial news continued bright, but a warning of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, head of the national industrial recovery administration, that, unless employment and wages caught up with production within the next two months, difficulties might be expected, caused some apprehension among proponents of advancing markets. Freight car loadings reached another new peak for the year, steel output was off a trifle from its highest level and electric power production recorded further gains.

Many Leads Up Saturday.

Following the ruthless battering of the past three days, stocks at the week-end session recovered some of their losses and at the final gong many leading issues showed advances of fractions to 4 points.

At the opening, a majority was higher but a fresh test of the vitality of the market came after about the first half hour and prices fell under their previous closing levels.

The market rebounded however, on covering with the approach of the close, and on enormous volume for a Saturday session—4,224,070 shares—the Associated Press-Standard Statistics average of 90 selected stocks rose half a point to 77.1.

Advances for the most part were well distributed throughout all categories. The alcohol stocks, which had been careening downward wildly since their recent joyride, were serene.

Stocks which registered advances of from 1 to 4 included U. S. Steel preferred, Youngstown Sheet, Union Carbide, du Pont, General Motors, National Biscuit, International Harvester, Texas Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania, Canadian Pacific, North American, Owens Illinois, Commercial Solvents, Southern Railway, Standard Brands, Celanese, Illinois Central and Johns-Manville. National Distillers and American Commercial Alcohol advanced around a point.

In the commodity markets cotton closed with a gain of from 15 to 70 cents a bale against extreme losses of $4. Silver was in active demand but other staples, for the most part were nervous and irregular. The moratorium that prevailed in wheat futures yesterday was in force again by order of the Chicago Board of Trade. The bond market did a lively business, but prices were generally irregular.

Initial transfers on the big board were in huge blocks. Few sales of less than four figures were recorded by the overworked ticker during this period. There will be little golf for brokerage partners over the week-end as practically all houses plan to put in diligent hours catching up with the enormous volume of clerical work.

Car Loadings Record.

Revenue freight handled by the railroads last week spurted to a new high for the year, totaling 648,206 cars. With the exception of one week last October, this was the best freight showing since 1931. The current report represented an increase of 28.6 per cent over the corresponding week a year ago.

The Stock Exchange's decision to cut down trading hours helped revive memories of late 1929 when similar action was taken as a means of easing the burdens placed on clerical labors attendant upon big markets during the wild selling of that year the exchange did not open until noon on several occasions, and there were some full holidays.

Brokers had to send out large batches of margin calls last night and early today, and selling from accounts of customers who had failed to comply with these demands was rather substantial—a natural aftermath of three weak markets.

The dollar rallied substantially in foreign exchange markets. The British pound sterling lost 3 cents at $4.64 for cables, the French franc sagged .06 of a cent at 5.44 cents and Dutch guilders fell to 56.10 cents, off .62 of a cent. Belgian belgas dropped one-fifth of a cent and Swiss francs were down .27 of a cent. German marks, the Scandinavians, Canadian dollars and Japanese yen yielded ¼ to ½ a cent.

Wholesale prices for the week ended July 15, as measured by the index number of the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor, stood at 68.9, as compared with 67.2 for the preceding week. The July 15 figure is the highest reached this year, and compares with a low of 59.6 in the week of March 4.

Ten Most Active Stocks.

Closing price and net change of the 10 most active stocks: General Motors, 25⅝, up 1; Radio, 7¼, up ⅛; Chrysler, 27⅝, down ⅝; Standard Brands, 23⅞, up 1; Commercial Solvents, 28¼, up 1⅜; International Telephone & Telegraph, 13, up ¾; Aviation Corporation, 9½, up ¼; United Aircraft, 30½, up ½; International Nickel, 16⅞, up ⅝, and Continental Oil, 9¾, down ⅝.

STOCK EXCHANGE TRADING STARTS AT NOON MONDAY

St. Louis Merchant's Exchange and Chicago Board of Trade Still Barred Futures

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The New York Stock Exchange announced today that beginning Monday it would open at noon until further notice.

Trading will start at 10 a. m. St. Louis time.

The St. Louis Stock Exchange voted not to open until 10:30 a. m., an hour later than usual.

The St. Louis Merchants' Exchange kept the bar on trading in grain and millfeed futures Saturday following similar action by the Chicago Board of Trade. Cash grain was sold as usual.

Peter B. Carey, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, said that the closing was in compliance with numerous requests from outside exchanges and from the grain trade generally. Traders said that clerical staffs were exhausted from handling the enormous volume of business.

Chicago Stock Board Shortens Hours.

CHICAGO, July 22.—The Chicago Stock Exchange will open at 11 a. m. Monday instead of 9, closing at 2 p. m. The hours will be effective until further notice by directors of the exchange.

Dry Goods Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Business was light in the dry goods markets today. The trade was still holding off in anticipation of expected upward price revisions on new cotton goods items in accordance with the added costs incident to operation of the recovery measure. Rayon, silk, burlap and woolens were steady.

BOND MARKET NERVOUS IN AN ACTIVE TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Bond market prices continued to fluctuate nervously today, but a last-minute rally enabled a number of issues to cut their losses substantially or emerge with moderate gains.

It was a session of intermittent recoveries and reactions and the trading volume was well ahead of the normal Saturday aggregate. Sales totaled $10,482,000 and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans sagged three-tenths of a point.

Heaviest transactions were in the more speculative corporation categories. Railroad issues that replaced early losses with net advances of fractions to a point or more, included some of Santa Fe, Canadian National, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Erie, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific and Alleghany Corporation. Among losers of 1 to 3 or more were various maturities of Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Great Northern, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Pennsylvania, Frisco, Southern Pacific and Wabash.

Bonds of Dodge Bros., American Telephone, National Dairy, Paramount Publix, American & Foreign Power, Postal Telegraph and U. S. Rubber came back for gains of 1 to as much as 4 points. Among the heavier utilities and industrials were loans of Colorado Industrial, Goodrich, Houston Oil, International Hydro-Electric, International Paper, Loew's, McKesson, Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron and Vanadium.

United States Government securities were dull and moderately mixed. Foreign obligations were highly irregular. Bonds of Dutch East Indies, France, Antioquia and Poland yielded 1 to 3 or more points. Some of the Germans improved and British 5½s were heavily traded for a gain of 1¾ points.

COTTON CLOSES HIGHER AFTER IRREGULAR DAY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—An opening advance in cotton here today met a renewal of liquidation which sent the price of December contracts down from 10.67c to 10.03c during the early trading, but offerings then tapered off and the market rallied on trade buying and covering. December closed at 10.50c, with the general market firm at net advances of 3 to 14 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 13 to 37 points on a renewal of the buying movement which had been in progress at the close of yesterday's market and which was supplemented by considerable buying through houses with foreign connections. Active months soon showed net gains of about 20 to 24 points, but this bulge met a good deal of selling and for a brief period the market was extremely weak, breaking in some instances several points between sales.

Additional stop orders were uncovered on the decline which carried October off from 10.47c to 9.80c and March from 10.90c to 10.30c, or about 60 to 67 points from the early high. Offerings then tapered off materially, however, and a steadier tone developed on a continuation of the trade demand, combined with covering or rebuying by some of the earlier sellers. Closing quotations showed rallies of some 47 to 50 points on active positions.

The opening advance here had the encouragement of relatively firm Liverpool cables and the feeling that yesterday's heavy selling had left the market in a much improved techincal position. The renewal of liquidation seemed to take same of the early buyers by surprise and led to some reselling, but foreign and domestic trade interests absorbed the offerings and the buying broadened somewhat on the later advance.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 138,000 bales, against 77,000 last year.

WINNIPEG WHEAT HAS SHARP PRICE BREAK

Market Down 4c at Close After Extreme Lower Range of Over 11 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

WINNIPEG, July 22.—Adversity affected by large scale liquidation wheat prices tumbled in a panic of early selling today. Substantial orders for export brought prices back in late selling but the close found values more than 4 cents under the previous day's close.

The break in wheat, which carried prices down for a loss of more than 11 cents at one stage, was simultaneous with the suspension of wheat futures trading at Chicago and action at New York. At Chicago trading was suspended for the second day in succession.

Bolstered by European purchases of 1,500,000 bushels of wheat good resistance was uncovered at the low points. When the bell clanged close of trading, July wheat sold at 73⅜ cents a bushel, or 4⅝ cents under Friday's close. October, which at one time took a loss of 11⅝ cents, closed at 76¼ cents where it was down 4 cents.

Liverpool was firmer at the close than had been expected, and values closed only 1d to 1⅛d lower.

There was a small improvement noted in demand for cash wheat, and spreads at the close were a little higher. Volume of business, however, was no larger. Coarse grains lacked the wild gyrations of the past two days and followed the trend of wheat futures to a lesser degree.

Millions of bushels of wheat literally were thrown into the pit as soon as trading began, sending prices into the greatest opening tailspin in years. Caught in a maelstrom of selling, values dropped almost perpendicularly. Prices opened as much as 7 cents lower, and subsequently crashed another 4 cents for a maximum loss of 11¼ cents. The market rallied 5 cents.

Observers viewed the decline as the greatest catastrophe that has befallen the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and were of the opinion that some restriction on fluctuations might be the outcome.

CASH WHEAT DECLINES ON ST. LOUIS MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, July 22.—Cash wheat was 2@3½c lower Saturday. Trading was slow, purchases for the most part being confined to filling shipping orders. Mills and elevators here took little wheat, with elevators making bids to option exchange basis when future trading is resumed. Corn was steady to 1c lower and in fair demand. Oats were steady to ½c lower. Demand was fair.

The market had to operate without the assistance of futures market, which again was suspended.

Sales of cash grain made on the floor of the exchange were as follows:

WHEAT.

No. 1 red winter wheat 91½c, No. 1 red garlicky wheat 90c.

CORN.

No. 2 mixed corn 48½c, No. 2 yellow corn 50c, No. 3 yellow corn 48½c, No. 6 yellow corn 43c, No. 1 white corn 52c, No. 2 white corn 51c.

OATS.

No. 2 white oats 36c, No. 2 mixed oats 32½c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 244,500 bushels, compared with 304,500 a week ago and 177,800 a year ago, included 152 cars local and 11 through. Corn receipts, which were 198,000 bushels, compared with 69,000 a week ago and 28,000 a year ago, included 84 cars local and 48 through. Oats receipts, which were 94,000 bushels, compared with 44,000 a week ago and 33,000 a year ago, included 39 cars local and 8 through.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, July 22.—A firmer tone developing in copper early in the week was checked by weakness of the stock and commodity markets with the result that consumers who had been showing increased interest withdrew from the market.

Foreign quotations eased as the dollar became firmer. During the middle of the week, producers had advanced asking prices ¼ cent to 9¼ cents for electrolytic, but the quotations later was shaded to the previous level. Nevertheless, domestic consumption was reported in excess of shipments and stocks continued to decrease.

Tin prices fluctuated over a range of more than 2 cents a pound influenced by sharp changes at London and in sterling exchange. A fair business was reported from time to time when the market showed some degree of stability. This reflected continued active operations by tin plate mills.

Transactions in lead tapered off. Prices were unchanged at the close. Earlier buying was credited to a few large consumers for August needs. Buyers turned cautious as easier sterling brought foreign lead quotations close to a domestic parity. June statistics revealed a decrease in stocks influenced by increased shipments which more than offset large production.

Advances in zinc reflected a tight ore situation, and when easier conditions developed elsewhere, smelters were reluctant to shade prices owing to difficulties in obtaining ore. With good orders on books they were not disposed to press offerings, it was said.

Antimony was steady at the recent advance, with large holders not pressing, although buying interest receded.

A decline of one point in estimated steel production schedules to 58 per cent of capacity, reflected continued absence of demand from the larger consuming industries. Miscellaneous buying continued fairly active. Prices were firmly held with some recent concessions eliminated. Pig iron held steady at the advance as iron foundry melt increased.

Frisco June and 6 Mos. Reports

The St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Co. reports total operating revenue for June of $3,833,647, an increase of $353,540 and net railway operating income $644,924, an increase of $499,206 as compared with same month last year. For the six months ended June 30, operating revenues were $19,468,376, decrease of $1,711,713, and net railway operating income $748,148, decrease of $198,566 as compared with same period last year.

STOCK PRICE TREND LOWER LATE IN WEEK

Because of Advances Earlier in Period Some Shares Are Unchanged to Higher.

Stock market prices receded in the latter part of the week on the St. Louis Stock Exchange but because of advances scored in the forepart of the period, some shares were unchanged and others even higher at the close. Declines from previous week's final levels extended beyond 2 points in other shares.

National Candy, Wagner Electric, Brown Shoe, and Stix, Baer & Fuller were off 2 points or more net.

Coca Cola Bottling closed unchanged as did International Shoe and Missouri Portland.

Ely-Walker and National Bearing Metals were higher on small turnovers.

ST. LOUIS STOCKS

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, July 22.—Sales of stock on the local board during the week amounted to 4796 shares, compared with 4260 the previous week. Bond sales were $3000, compared with $1000 the previous week.

U. S. DOLLAR RALLIES

NEW YORK, July 22.—The American dollar rallied today in leading foreign exchange markets. In contrast with the dizzy toboggan ride experienced during some of the previous days this week, however, changes were moderate.

At a closing price of $4.64, the pound sterling showed a decline of 3 cents. All gold standard currencies sagged, although declines were limited to narrow fractions. The French franc, at 5.44 cents, was off .06 of a cent; Belgian belgas lost .2 of a cent at 19.40 cents; Dutch guilders at 56.10 cents were down .62 of a cent and while Swiss francs gave up .27 of a cent at 26.88 cents.

Marks were off .33 of a cent at 33.22 cents and Scandivavian currencies were slightly lower. The Shanghai dollar gained a cent. The Canadian dollar, at 95 cents, was off ¼ of a cent.

WINNIPEG WHEAT HAS SHARP PRICE BREAK

Market Down 4c at Close After Extreme Lower Range of Over 11 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

WINNIPEG, July 22.—Adversity affected by large scale liquidation wheat prices tumbled in a panic of early selling today. Substantial orders for export brought prices back in late selling but the close found values more than 4 cents under the previous day's close.

The break in wheat, which carried prices down for a loss of more than 11 cents at one stage, was simultaneous with the suspension of wheat futures trading at Chicago and action at New York. At Chicago trading was suspended for the second day in succession.

Bolstered by European purchases of 1,500,000 bushels of wheat good resistance was uncovered at the low points. When the bell clanged close of trading, July wheat sold at 73⅜ cents a bushel, or 4¾ cents under Friday's close. October, which at one time took a loss of 11⅜ cents, closed at 76¼ cents where it was down 4 cents.

Liverpool was firmer at the close than had been expected, and values closed only 1d to 1¾d lower.

There was a small improvement noted in demand for cash wheat, and spreads at the close were a little higher. Volume of business, however, was no larger. Coarse grains lacked the wild gyrations of the past two days and followed the trend of wheat futures to a lesser degree.

Millions of bushels of wheat literally were thrown into the pit as soon as trading began, sending prices into the greatest opening tailspin in years. Caught in a maelstrom of selling, values dropped almost perpendicularly. Prices opened as much as 7 cents lower, and subsequently crashed another 4 cents for a maximum loss of 11¼ cents. The market rallied 5 cents.

Observers viewed the decline as the greatest catastrophe that has befallen the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and were of the opinion that some restriction on fluctuations might be the outcome.

CASH WHEAT DECLINES ON ST. LOUIS MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, July 22.—Cash wheat was 2@3½c lower Saturday. Trading was slow, purchases for the most part being confined to filling shipping orders. Mills and elevators here took little wheat, with elevators making bids to option exchange basis when future trading is resumed. Corn was steady to 1c lower and in fair demand. Oats were steady to ½c lower. Demand was fair.

The market had to operate without the assistance of futures market, which again was suspended.

Sales of cash grain made on the floor of the exchange were as follows:

WHEAT.

No. 1 red winter wheat 91½c, No. 1 red garlicky wheat 90c.

CORN.

No. 2 mixed corn 48½c, No. 2 yellow corn 50c, No. 3 yellow corn 48½c, No. 6 yellow corn 43c, No. 1 white corn 52c, No. 2 white corn 51c.

OATS.

No. 2 white oats 36c, No. 2 mixed oats 32½c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 244,500 bushels, compared with 304,500 a week ago and 177,800 a year ago, included 152 cars local and 11 through. Corn receipts, which were 198,000 bushels, compared with 69,000 a week ago and 28,000 a year ago, included 84 cars local and 48 through. Oats receipts, which were 94,000 bushels, compared with 44,000 a week ago and 33,000 a year ago, included 39 cars local and 8 through.

Grain "To Arrive" Market.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, July 22.—Following is a list of bid prices for cash grain "to arrive": 10-day shipment, No. 2 white corn, 46½c, No. 2 yellow, 45½c.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, July 22.—A firmer tone developing in copper early in the week was checked by weakness of the stock and commodity markets with the result that consumers who had been showing increased interest withdrew from the market.

Foreign quotations eased as the dollar became firmer. During the middle of the week, producers had advanced asking prices ¼ cent to 9¼ cents for electrolytic, but the quotations later was shaded to the previous level. Nevertheless, domestic consumption was reported in excess of shipments and stocks continued to decrease.

Tin prices fluctuated over a range of more than 2 cents a pound influenced by sharp changes at London and in sterling exchange. A fair business was reported from time to time when the market showed some degree of stability. This reflected continued active operations by tin plate mills.

Transactions in lead tapered off. Prices were unchanged at the close. Earlier buying was credited to a few large consumers for August needs. Buyers turned cautious as easier sterling brought foreign lead quotations close to a domestic parity. June statistics revealed a decrease in stocks influenced by increased shipments which more than offset large production.

Advances in zinc reflected a tight ore situation, and when easier conditions developed elsewhere, smelters were reluctant to shade prices owing to difficulties in obtaining ore. With good orders on books they were not disposed to press offerings, it was said.

Antimony was steady at the recent advance, with large holders not pressing, although buying interest receded.

A decline of one point in estimated steel production schedules to 58 per cent of capacity, reflected continued absence of demand from the larger consuming industries. Miscellaneous buying continued fairly active. Prices were firmly held with some recent concessions eliminated. Pig iron held steady at the advance as iron foundry melt increased.

Frisco June and 6 Mos. Reports

The St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Co. reports total operating revenue for June of $3,833,647, an increase of $383,540 and net railway operating income $644,924, an increase of $499,206 as compared with same month last year. For the six months ended June 30, operating revenues were $19,468,376, decrease of $1,711,713, and net railway operating income $748,148, decrease of $195,566 as compared with same period last year.

STOCK PRICE TREND LOWER LATE IN WEEK

Because of Advances Earlier in Period Some Shares Are Unchanged to Higher.

Stock market prices receded in the latter part of the week on the St. Louis Stock Exchange but because of advances scored in the forepart of the period, some shares were unchanged and others even higher at the close. Declines from previous week's final levels extended beyond 2 points in other shares.

National Candy, Wagner Electric, Brown Shoe, and Stix, Baer & Fuller were off 2 points or more net.

Coca Cola Bottling closed unchanged as did International Shoe and Missouri Portland.

Ely-Walker and National Bearing Metals were higher on small turnovers.

ST. LOUIS STOCKS

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, July 22.—Sales of stock on the local board during the week amounted to 4796 shares, compared with 4260 the previous week. Bond sales were $3000, compared with $1000 the previous week.

JURY CHOSEN FOR MURDER TRIAL IN MINE WARFARE

Those Selected at Jonesboro, Ill., Are Married Men and Farmers—Choosing Consumes Five Days.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JONESBORO, Ill., July 22.— A jury of married men, alien from the coal mining area, will determine the fate of five young Du Quoin men charged with the murder there of Laverne Miller, 14-year-old daughter of a United Mine worker as she studied her lessons the night of April 6, last.

Selection of the 12, who will hear the first testimony of the trial Monday, consumed nearly five days including a futile night session in the historic court-house of Union County where the case was brought on a change of venue from Perry County, one of the Southern Illinois communities disrupted by the strife between the United Mine Workers of America and the Progressive Miners.

Shooting of the school girl, who was a victim of bullets fired from an automobile speeding by her home, is regarded by both sides as the most wanton tragedy of the mining controversy. The shots were fired from the darkness a few hours after her father, Vernon Miller, returned from duty as a special deputy sheriff policing a Progressive picket line.

More than 200 prospective jurors were examined before the panel finally was chosen today. Many of those excused expressed conscientious scruples against infliction of the death penalty. Only once in 115 years has the death penalty been inflicted in Union County and that occurred about 50 years ago.

Interest Is Tense.

The son of the Sheriff at that time is a member of the jury which will decide a trial watched with intense interest by all factions engaged in the mining controversy as well as by citizens of this farming community to whom a murder trial is a rarity. Even during the tedious hours of examination of talesmen the courtroom was crowded. All showed the effects of stifling heat before the week was over.

The Sheriff's son on the jury is H. L. Baggott of Anna, a mile from here. He is 63 years old, a retired merchant, and has an 18-year-old son and 20-year-old daughter. He was one of the first four accepted last Tuesday after the previous day had been consumed in disposing of various motions.

Other jurymen are: R. M. Kelley, 38, of Dongola, a farmer, the father of three daughters; H. G. Cruse, 38, of Anna, a farmer, the father of four children; Sam Russell, 46, of Anna, a carpenter, the father of three daughters; Fred Smick, 4[illegible], of Anna, a farmer, who has a 19-year-old daughter; Martin Durall, 56, of Cobden, a farmer, who has six children; Eli Eddleman, 32, of Dongola, a barber, married; Orlando Davis, 54, of Anna, a farmer, the father of five children; Roy Wilkins, 34, of Anna, a farmer, the father of three children; Otis Watkins, 48, of Cobden, a farmer, the father of five children; James H. Penrod, 53, of Cobden, a farmer, who has seven children, and John Stadelbacher, a 27-year-old farmer of Cobden, who is the father of three children.

Judge Speaks for Fair Trial.

In counseling the jury as to its demeanor between court sessions, which probably will continue throughout next week, Circuit Judge Spann admonished them not to destroy the efforts "to get a fair jury."

Seated in a row a few feet from the jury box, have been the five defendants. They are Sam Ferro, 21 years old; Barney Bosetta, 28; Emery Albers, 23; Robert Shingleton, 21; and Olis Battaglia, 18. Neither Ferro nor Battaglia ever has worked in the mines, although they are acquainted with many miners as are other inhabitants of the Du Quoin mining community.

They had listened with interest to the challenges of opposing counsel and frequent verbal tilts. All have presented a neat appearance with hair neatly combed and wearing clean shirts each day, open at the neck because of the intense heat in the courtroom. Nelson B. Layman, of DuQuoin, appointed a special assistant Attorney-General to assist in the prosecution, will present tomorrow the opening statement for the State. The State will attempt to show that the fatal shots were fired by Ferro and Shingleton. It will try to establish also that Bosetta furnished the weapons and planned the shooting, obtaining a car from Albers. Battaglia, who was a classmate at high school of Layman's son, is alleged to have driven the car.

Other prosecution attorneys are Walker Butler of Chicago, assistant Attorney-General, in charge of the case for the State; Ford L. Rendleman, State's Attorney of Union County, and Michael Grabowski, State's Attorney of Perry County. They are assisted by three Chicago investigators.

The defense staff comprises Carl Preihs of Pana, M. C. Cook, and L. E. Cranston, both of Du Quoin, John Fribley of Pana, State Senator Karraker of Anna, and Phillip Hileman, also of Anna.

'DIZZY' DEAN TALKS, THIS TIME OF HOLDUP

Loquacious Cardinal Pitcher Tells of Robbery in Which He Was Victim.

"I walked right in on it and didn't even know it was a stickup until one kid throwed that thing against my ribs and told me to get into the back room," said "Dizzy" Dean yesterday in telling his experience in a holdup at the drug store in the Forest Park Hotel, where the loquacious Cardinal pitcher and his wife reside.

They were among the seven customers marched into a backroom by two robbers who took $200 from the proprietor, Samuel Levitch, late Friday night.

"Mrs. Dean and I had just come home a few minutes before and parked our car right behind the roadster the holdup men were in," Dean related. "Mrs. Dean went upstairs, then came back and went into the store while I was still in the lobby. We had been talking about buying a motion picture camera at the store and wanted to see some pictures taken with it.

"When I stepped into the store, I saw these two boys—they were just kids—with Levitch, who was emptying the money out of his pockets, but I didn't pay any attention. 'When are you going to show up those pictures?' I asked. 'As soon as these boys are through,' Levitch told me.

"I saw the pistols the kids had but I thought they were just water guns. One kid got in my way and I pushed him aside. Then he put that thing on me and told me to get back in the prescription room where the rest of the crowd was. Levitch looked over and said, 'It's a stickup!' I went on back."

Mrs. Dean, who had about $60 and a watch in her purse, had dropped the purse into an ice cream can and put the lid back on as she was ordered to the rear. The robbers, however, were satisfied to search Levitch's pockets and the cash registers. They and a lookout on the street escaped in the roadster, which bore an Illinois license.

As soon as the excitement died down, Dean and his wife and several customers attended a showing of the motion pictures in the back room. The pictures showed several of Dean's teammates in action and were so satisfactory that the pitcher arranged to buy the camera.

Brandt, mounting the hill with one out in the third inning, held the Cardinals to four hits and one run during the rest of the contest and the Braves won, 9 to 5, for their third straight victory, the tenth of the season for Brandt and his sixth in succession.

Hallahan Batted Out.

Manager Street had high hopes that Hallahan, with a long rest since his victory over the Phils last Sunday, would stop the team's losing streak and put it back on Prosperity Avenue. But Hallahan didn't have anything that fooled the Braves. He was wild and ineffective and was knocked out of the box with one out in the second inning after six hits, two passes and an error by Bill himself had produced seven runs for the enemy.

Sylvester Johnson and Jim Mooney, who divided the rest of the afternoon's pitching, held the enemy to two more runs, but they had all they needed.

Urbanski walked to start the game and Jordan, bunting for a sacrifice, was safe on Hallahan's wild throw, Urbanski reaching third. Berger struck out, but Moore singled to center, scoring Urbanski, and while Whitney was forcing Moore, Jordan scored. Then Lee doubled over Orsatti's head and Whitney scored.

Martin's pass, Hornsby's double and Collins' single gave the Cards two in their half of the opening frame, but the Braves quickly lengthened their lead in the second. Maranville doubled to left for a starter and Mangum sacrificed, Urbanski walked and Jordan singled to left, scoring Maranville. Then Berger doubled to right-center and Urbanski and Jordan scored. When Moore singled to center, scoring Berger, Manager Street wig-wagged Hallahan to the showers and Johnson stopped the rally.

McKechnie Takes no Chances.

It was apparent early that McKechnie would not tarry long with Mangum. He went through the second safely, but when Watkins and Orsatti singled to start the third, Brandt began to warm up. The base runners advanced on Hornsby's long fly to Berger and Watkins scored on Crawford's fly to the center fielder. Then when Medwick cracked a single to center, scoring Orsatti, Mangum passed out of the picture and Brandt went to the hill.

Cardinal hopes departed with Mangum. Brandt stopped that third inning outbreak and retired the Cardinals in order, except for two passes, until the seventh, when Martin led with a single, only to remain on first while Brandt re-

Man Proposes, Fate Disposes.

A MONTH ago in New York, Manager Gabby Street of the Redbirds thought he was sitting pretty, as to pennant prospects. Today it appears that his team has become only a forlorn hope.

That's what baseball can do to a manager. In the month that has ensued, Gabby's pitchers let down, instead of improving, as had been expected.

Pepper Martin, the life of the party, fell away to where his batting could hide behind a decimal point.

And that department of run producers, the outfield, hasn't functioned on more than one cylinder out of the three.

Instead of clicking, the old machine has just put-putted along, keeping its head up just far enough to encourage hope that things would be all right, soon.

But the prospect ahead is a stiff one for the Old Sergeant. Overworked pitchers and not enough

Hallahan Fails; Brandt Relieves Mangum and Holds Redbirds Safe

By J. Roy Stockton,

Charley Street's Cardinals found a pitcher they could hit yesterday afternoon, but while they were whacking Leo Mangum for four runs in three innings, the Braves were lambasting Bill Hallahan for seven and when it appeared that even that bumper total would not be enough, the rude Bill McKeechnie sent Mangum to the showers, called Ed Brandt to the mound and that noise you heard at Sportsman's Park was the Redbirds falling into the second division.

Brandt, mounting the hill with one out in the third inning, held the Cardinals to four hits and one run during the rest of the contest and the Braves won, 9 to 5, for their third straight victory, the tenth of the season for Brandt and his sixth in succession.

GUS BOEHMER WINS MIDWEST TENNIS CROWN

OMAHA, Neb., July 22. — Gus Boehmer Jr., youthful net star from St. Louis, today won the men's singles championship in the Midwest tennis tourney here by defeating Russell Ball of El Paso, Tex., 6—3, 6—0, 4—6, 6—1.

In the junior singles, Bill Kiley of Kansas City made it unanimous against the Ball brothers in singles play by defeating George for the title in that division, 6—1, 6—2.

Audrey Bartholomew, Omaha, took the women's title by trouncing Elizabeth Donohoe, Omaha, 7—5, 6—3.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Man Proposes, Fate Disposes.

A MONTH ago in New York, Manager Gabby Street of the Redbirds thought he was sitting pretty, as to pennant prospects. Today it appears that his team has become only a forlorn hope.

That's what baseball can do to a manager. In the month that has ensued, Gabby's pitchers let down, instead of improving, as had been expected.

STREET.

Pepper Martin, the life of the party, fell away to where his batting could hide behind a decimal point.

And that department of run producers, the outfield, hasn't functioned on more than one cylinder out of the three.

Instead of clicking, the old machine has just put-putted along, keeping its head up just far enough to encourage hope that things would be all right, soon.

But the prospect ahead is a stiff one for the Old Sergeant. Overworked pitchers and not enough of them, plus non-hitting outfielders are combining against him. When the hitters hit, it's behind weak pitching; when the pitchers pitch, the hitters don't deliver.

It Happened in 1930!

STILL, the Cardinals have fought out of worse situations. In 1930 they oozed through to victory, after being 12 games behind the leaders on Aug. 5. If the 1933 National League is as weak as was the 1930 outfit, the Cardinals still have a chance.

Unfortunately, at this time the Giants' pitching staff is just as air tight as it was one month ago. If anything, it is going better. Pittsburgh and Chicago both are stronger than in 1930.

Material improvement in both pitching and hitting will have to be developed, and quickly, to bring the Cardinals through in a contending position.

Street probably will be held accountable for the result if it's bad. But as he did not sponsor the many shifts of players that may have led to the weak hitting and pitching situation, putting the blame on him seems something akin to buck passing.

If the hitters and pitchers of the Cardinals had lived up to the

CROWD OF 25,000 SEES WOMEN SWIMMERS BEAT 2 WORLD MARKS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—In another day of record smashing performances, witnessed by a crowd of 25,000, five of America's speediest mermaids today lowered two recognized world's marks. Katherine Rawls of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., shattered her own time in winning the 300-meter medley for the third successive year and the Carnegie Library Club of Homestead, Pa., anchored by the queen of the country's free stylers, Lenore Kight, swept to victory in the 880-yard relay.

MISS RAWLS.

Through the quiet, blue waters of Zach's Bay, Miss Rawls stroked her way to the new record in 4:35 3-5, lowering the mark of 4:45 4-5 she made in winning the 1931 crown by more than 10 seconds.

Relay Record Lowered.

With Miss Kight, already victor in three individual events swimming the anchor lap of 220 yards in 2 minutes, 38 3-10 seconds, the Homestead four, which also included Louise Clark and the Gorman sisters, Anna Mae and Johanna, sent the relay record down to 11:10. The old mark of 11:15 1-5 was made by the Los Angeles Athletic Club in winning the event at long Beach in 1930.

In successfully defending her second title, the 15-year-old Florida star, winner of the springboard dive on the opening day, easily outclassed her four rivals. She finished the trying test of swimming 100 meters breast stroke, and the same distance back stroke and free style with 20 yards to spare over little June Burr of Miami, Fla. Close behind in third place trailed Helen Lee Smith of Indianapolis, beaten for runner-up honors only after a great duel through the final 25 meters.

The meet closes tomorrow with Miss Kight going after her fourth individual title in the 880-yard free style and Miss Rawls seeking retention of her breast stroke crown. The platform dive, with Dorothy Poynton, of the Los Angeles A. C. Olympic champion, the favorite, will complete the four-day program.

KLEIN AND FOXX MAINTAIN PACE IN MAJOR LEAGUE BATTING

Wesley Schulmerich, now with the Phillies, replaced his teammate, Chick Fullis, in the big six yesterday as he registered one of the few important gains in hitting among the topmost batters of the major leagues.

Schulmerich hit three out of four against Chicago for a seven point gain that lifted him from sixth place to third in the National League race. Spud Davis held his mark at .348 with one hit in three times up, while the other big six members lost from three to seven points.

Al Simmons, Joe Cronin and Chuck Klein failed to hit, while Jimmie Foxx had only his 27th home run to show for nine trips to the plate.

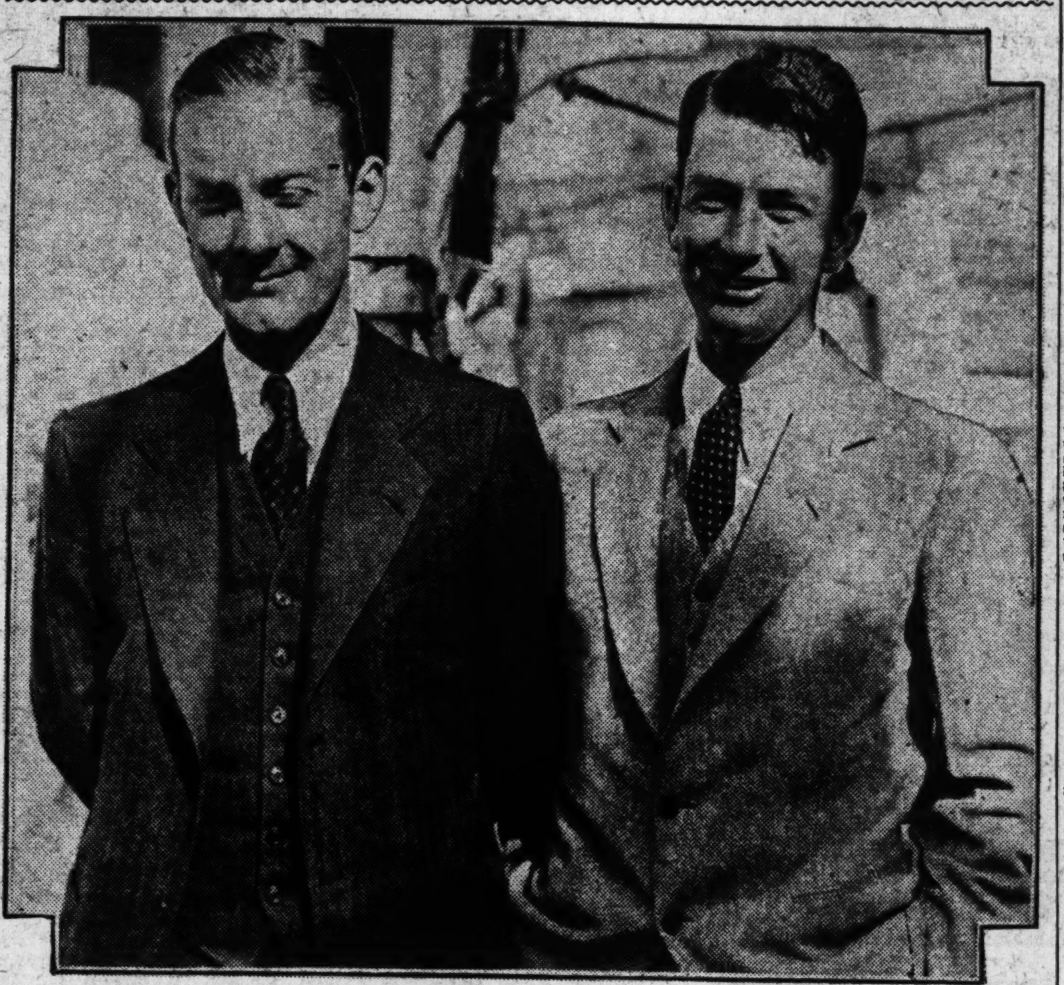
They Kept the United States in the Davis Cup Fight



George Lott (left) and John Van Ryn, who beat the British pair, Hughes and Perry, in the doubles, in straight sets. The United States singles players must win both their matches today to reach the challenge round.

Van Ryn and Lott Win Doubles, Keep U. S. in Cup Fight With British

By the Associated Press.

AUTEUIL, France, July 22.—The fighting American doubles team of George Martin Lott Jr., and John W. Van Ryn pulled the United States back into the thick of the Davis Cup tennis battle today with a straight-set triumph over the English pair, Frederick J. Perry and George Patrick Hughes, but the development of Ellsworth Vines' poor physical condition minimized the chances of saving the series tomorrow.

Lott's heroic play staved off another bad start for the Americans today and furnished the inspiration for the first U. S. victory in three straight matches. The set scores were 8-6, 6-4, 6-1 as the two ex-collegians finished with a blast of power.

Final Matches Today.

England's two singles conquests yesterday kept the British forces in front 2 to 1, and they were heavy favorites to capture at least one of the two singles encounters tomorrow, bringing together first Wilmer Allison and Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, then Vines and Perry, the rival top-ranking players.

Vines had two short workouts today with one ankle bandaged, the result of a recent practice sprain, and bothered also by a pulled abdomen muscle. The American champion developed the abdominal injury while serving one of his "cannonball" shots, also in practice. He hurt his ankle the first time at Wimbledon, but appeared fully recovered from this when he faced Austin.

Bernon Prentice, American captain, insisted Vines was in shape to give a good account of himself, but it appeared obvious neither injury would aid him in a hard battle with Perry. However, this match will be an anti-climax unless Allison can stop the rampaging Austin, who lowered Vines' colors in straight sets and has been especially coached to combat both Americans.

The doubles match was exciting only for about a set and a half. Once Van Ryn rallied and got the range with his sharp volleys, the outcome was rarely in doubt, but to Lott went the credit for saving the first set, fighting the British brilliantly at every turn and dominating the whole match with his service.

Lott's Services Effective.

The Americans made the most of Lott's effective delivery by having him serve first for the U. S. team in each set. Nine times the former University of Chicago star served and made it good, losing only 12 points altogether. In contrast to this Van Ryn failed to hold his service at all in the opening set and won it only twice in the entire match, but the ex-Princeton player made up for this with his superb sharpshooting at the net. Van Ryn scored 18 placements.

The British pair quickly ran up a 4-1 lead in the first set and led again at 5-3, on Hughes' service, but then cracked. The Britons' service was broken six consecutive times through the latter part of the first set and half of the second set. By that time the Americans were in full command and piling up points with a rampant surge. Lott's service furnished the clinchers for the first two sets. After winning the opening game of the last set, the British were swept aside in six straight games.

After the first set, Perry was equally as erratic as Hughes and finally gave every indication of his willingness to let the match end speedily so that he could save his resources for the crucial singles tomorrow.

$5,244,472 Bet In 28-Day Meet At Rockingham

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, N. H., July 22.

THE last-day crowd of 30,000 running horse followers pushed $453,871 through the betting windows of the Rockingham Park Track today to boast the New Hampshire Breeders' Association's Pari-Mutuel "handle" to $5,244,472 for the 28-day race meeting, the first ever held in New England with legalized betting.

The Association's share of the huge wagering totalled $340,890.69 and the State of New Hampshire's three and a half per cent tax amounted to $183,555.51. The daily betting average was $187,303.

More than 500 horses, representing some 50 stables, competed during the meeting for daily purses of $5000. The initial meet was such a successful venture that the Association has announced a 23-day fall meeting will open on Sept. 2.

MAKO ENTERS FINAL OF OHIO TOURNAMENT

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, July 22.— Gene Mako, 17-year-old University of Southern California star, advanced to the singles finals of the Ohio State tennis tournament today by overcoming Phil Greenstein, Cleveland singles champion, 6—1, 6—4, 6—1.

Bill Parkhill of Chicago became Mako's opponent for the final by defeating George Hoyt of Cleveland, who upset Byron Bauer of Erie, Pa., in a quarter-final match, 6—4, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2.

McDiarmid Victor in North Carolina Event.

By the Associated Press.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 22.—A trio of Texas tennis stars carried away major honors in the North Carolina tennis tourney here today. John McDiarmid, Fort Worth, defeated Wilbur Hess, Houston, in the men's singles, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2, while Hess and Doc Barr of Dallas won from Henry Prusoff of Seattle and Dick Covington of Asheville, in a great doubles final, 2—6, 6—2, 6—3, 8—6.

FASTNET CUP YACHT RACE GETS UNDER WAY

By the Associated Press.

COWES, England, July 22.—Three American and three British yachts started out from Cowes today in the Royal Ocean Racing Club's eighth Fastnet Cup race, a 720-mile sail around Fastnet Rock and return.

The three American craft, all of which sailed the ocean under their own power to compete in the famous event, are Henry and Sherman Morss' schooner Grenadier Roderick, and Olin Stephen's yawl Dorade, and W. T. Barnum's schooner Brilliant. The three British entries are all cutters. They are T. P. Rose-Richard's Lexia, the Royal Engineer Yacht Club's Ilex, and Charles Nicholson's Flame.

aN. W. Church entry.

Equipoise, under a perfect ride by Workman, allowed his mount to take it easy while biding his time, then moving into third position at the far turn, gained steadily under hand riding to wear down Watch Him in the final furlong. Watch Him steadied along early and, saving ground, took the lead from Gallant Sir at the stretch head, and, holding on with good courage, only weakened in final sixteenth. Gallant Sir raced to the front under a restraint midway of the back stretch, when Dark Secret tired, held on gamely when put to hard pressure, but weakened when called upon for final issue. Plucky Play dropped back soon after the start, swung wide entering the stretch and finished in the center of the track. Dark Secret retired early. Big Brand would not extend himself after reaching stretch. Larranaga tired badly in final three-sixteenths.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Equipoise a-galloping. The great five-year-old son of Pennant-Swinging, carrying a crushing impost of 135 pounds, galloped to victory in the $10,000 added Arlington Handicap at Arlington Park today, to prove his right, not only to the 1933 handicap championship, but to take rank with the greatest thoroughbreds of all time.

Equipoise won by a length and a half, defeating Watch Him, the entry of Mrs. John D. Hertz of Chicago. Five lengths back, a thoroughly beaten third, was Norman W. Church's Gallant Sir. Plucky Play, Gallant Sir's running mate, was fourth in the field of seven.

WORKMAN.

Equipoise, owned by Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney of New York, ran the mile and a quarter in 2:02 3-5, and because no other thoroughbred has been assigned such a heavy burden in 15 years for such a race, it is not likely that the Whitney star will be beaten in this, his last season in racing.

Equipoise Fourth Money Winner.

By his victory Equipoise moved into fourth place in the list of American money winning horses, replacing Mate. Today's race had a gross value of $12,980, with $9260 going to Owner Whitney. This swelled Equipoise's total race earnings to $294,820, dropping into fourth place behind Zev, which had won $313,639.

Equipoise went to the post an odd-on favorite and returned $3.50 to win, $3.72 to place and $2.58 to show. The place price on Watch Him was $9.52, with $3.56 to show, while Gallant Sir paid $2.54 to show.

As always, Equipoise came from behind to win. All he needed was the excellent horsemanship and strong hand riding of Jockey "Sonny" Workman to do it. As the field bounded out of the starting gate, Equipoise was in fifth place, but Workman wisely rated him back in the first quarter, to allow such speed horses as Dark Secret and Watch Him to get away in front from their outside post positions without the danger of crowding Equipoise.

As they rounded the first turn, Dark Secret had gone to the front on the inside with Gallant Sir and Watch Him close together, running second and third. Equipoise lay back in fourth place on the inside. Going up the back stretch, Dark Secret made the pace and Equipoise dropped back to fifth place

ALICE MARBLE AGAIN DEFEATS MISS BABCOCK

MANCHESTER, Mass., July 22.—Alice Marble, 19-year-old marvel who learned her tennis on the San Francisco playgrounds, today rounded out the second week of her Eastern court tour by humbling Carolin Babcock of Los Angeles who ranks third nationally, 7—5, 6—3, in the final round of the Essex County Club's invitation tournament.

A week ago at Longwood the San Francisco girl astounded the Eastern tennis public by overwhelming her higher-ranked Californian rival in straight sets but few thought she was capable of repeating the trick.

Miss Babcock's play in the Brookline final was not quite up to her usual standard but she was at her peak when she faced Miss Marble for the second time. She played brilliantly and battled for every point but her struggling was futile because Miss Marble's game had also improved since their initial meeting.

Both were on opposite sides of the net in the doubles final, when Miss Babcock, playing with Sarah Palfrey of Brookline, turned the tables by crushing Miss Marble and another high-ranking Californian player, Josephine Cruickshank of Santa Ana, in 6—1, 6—3 fashion.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE CLUBS IN PLAYER DEAL

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 22.—The Buffalo Bisons of the International Baseball League today announced one of the biggest player deals of the league season with Jersey City.

Buffalo gave Pitchers Joe Bloomer and Joe Bartulis, Third Baseman Gil English and an unnamed amount of cash for Joe Brown, third baseman, and Charley Perkins, pitcher.

The Buffalo management announced the deal was for this season only, and that the players would revert to their original teams at the end of the season.

Helen Hicks Shoots a Match Play 70 In Winning New York State Title

By the Associated Press.

PLANDOME, N. Y., July 22.—After breaking the course record with an unofficial 70 to be nine up on Mrs. Leo G. Federman, in the final round of the New York State women's golf championship at the Plandome Golf Club today, Helen Hicks, former national champion, won the title for the third time by a margin of 7 and 5.

Her prospects rendered hopeless by the super golf of Miss Hicks in the opening 18 holes, Mrs. Federman made a fine showing and played exceptional golf in the afternoon. Out in 37, only one stroke over par, she won back four holes from Miss Hicks, and added another before her three putts on the twenty-ninth green set the stage for a dramatic finish.

HELEN HICKS.

Now only five up, Miss Hicks drove within four feet of the hole and sank her putt for a birdie 2 on the 220-yard thirtieth hole and then wound up the match by getting home with a screaming brassie shot on the thirty-first and sinking a 12-foot putt for a birdie 3.

There was some question about Miss Hicks' 70 in the morning, for at the sixth, where Mrs. Federman had played out of two bunkers, she failed to hole out a putt of four feet. Giving her two putts there she had a 71, to tie the course record jointly held by Bill Mehlhorn, the professional, and Frank Graven, one of the club amateurs. Conceding her the three there gave her a 70.

Miss Hicks' 70 was the second lowest score ever made by a woman. Only Glenna Collett's 69, on a par 70 layout at Philadelphia last October, bettered her effort today.

HODGE BEATS HERB WEINSTOCK IN UNIVERSITY CITY TENNIS

GAINS VICTORY IN FOUR SETS; MEETS M'MILLIN IN FINAL TODAY

Karl Hodge defeated Herbert Weinstock, 2—6, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4, in the semi-final round of University City open tennis championship yesterday afternoon at Lewis Park, and entered the final round, in which he will oppose Charles McMillin, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. McMillin advanced by defeating Alfred Rothschild, 6—2, 7—5, 6—4, in the other semi-final. In the doubles final, at 4, Weinstock and McMillin will play Rothschild and William Krueger.

Weinstock won the first set from Hodge by some well directed placements. Hodge took things rather easily at the start of the set and gradually increased the power of his drives. He continued this plan of attack and won the next two sets without much difficulty. Weinstock showed much improvement in the fourth set and forced Hodge to close play for the first eight games. Weinstock lacked steadiness in the next two games and Hodge took the set and match.

The other semi-final was expected to go the limit of five sets. Rothschild, however, tried too much net play against McMillin in the early part of the contest. McMillin, who drives the ball with much consistency, held the edge over his opponent.

Due to illness of Teddy Eggmann, he and Charles Barnes were forced to default their semi-final round doubles match to Rothschild and Krueger. In the other semi-final match Weinstock and McMillin won from Wayne Smith and Warren Davis, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2.

Play Continues in Men's Municipal Tennis.

The Jefferson Memorial tennis courts, in Forest Park, will be the scene of plenty of tournament activity today as the men's championship continues after a successful opening, yesterday afternoon.

Several players reached the third round in striving for the title now held and being defended by the perennial champion, Ted Drewes.

A total of 29 teams entered the men's doubles play. All first round matches must be completed today, according to Carl Kamp, official referee.

DEFENDING CHAMPION PLAYS IN BELLEVILLE TENNIS EVENT TODAY

Five singles matches were played as the Maple Court Tennis Club's invitational tournament at Belleville opened yesterday afternoon. MacNeil Smith, defending champion, did not play yesterday, but is scheduled for a match against Hepp of Belleville this afternoon.

Other matches in today's pairings bring together Hearth of Belleville and Church of Lebanon, Kline of Prospect and Fournie of East St. Louis, and Moyer of Belleville and the winner of the H. Braun-Bien match.

Yesterday's results:

Virgil Church, Lebanon, defeated Lee Hamwar, Belleville, 6—1, 6—0; Harold Jager, Litchfield, defeated Melvin Etling, East St. Louis, 6—3, 2—6, 6—1; Elmer Hearth, Belleville, defeated Donald Exander, Prospect Park, 6—2, 6—3; Irving Krummerck, Belleville, defeated Ivan Light, East St. Louis, 4—6, 6—1, 6—1; H. Etling, East St. Louis, defeated Jack Pfeffer, Lebanon, 0—6, 6—4, 6—3; H. Karstedder, East St. Louis defaulted to J. Keys, Dupo; Bill Denton, East St. Louis, defaulted to V. Moyer, Belleville; John Hull, East St. Louis, defaulted to L. Harper, East St. Louis.

Eleanor Holm, Hollywood movie actress and record-holding swimmer, leaving the water after one of her races in the National Swimming championships at New York. She lowered her own record for the 220-yard backstroke from 2:57.8 to 2:57.4.

HATZFELD TAKES LEGION OPENER FROM FESTUS, 8-6

Home runs and errors tell the complete story of Hatzfeld's ninth-inning, 8-6 victory over the Festus baseball nine in the first game of the district American Legion series yesterday afternoon at Sherman Park.

One specific error and one home run were the immediate causes of Festus' defeat, after two Hatzfeld batters were out in the last half of the ninth. At the time the score was tied, 6-all. Dick O'Connell, the third Hatzfeld batter, rolled to Dick Turley, whose throw to first was dropped by Jack Glore.

Then, Joe Monahan, son of Pat Monahan, one-time scout for the Browns and Red Sox, stepped up and smashed a homer between left and center field to break up the game. In four previous trips to the plate Monahan had one single which slipped past an outfielder and was good for two runs.

Excepting two other circuit clouts by John Krifka and Pete Chulick, the rest of Hatzfeld's runs were results of Festus errors. Hatzfeld held a 5-3 advantage by the end of the seventh, but Festus took the lead for the first time in the eighth. Biehle walked and scored on a double by Turley. Gibbons was hit by a pitched ball, and both runners scored on Butler's single.

The city champions' tying run came in the eighth, when Tucci reached base on an error and crossed the plate on Goldak's hit.

Festus will attempt to even the series Wednesday in the second game at Herculaneum, Mo.

Warren Heller to Marry

By the Associated Press.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., July 22.—In a ceremony which only seven months ago was deferred "until the end of the depression," Warren Heller, former all America halfback at the University of Pittsburgh, and Miss Irene Malindzak, 21, will be married here tomorrow.

GOLF
by
W. J. McGOOGAN

Ralph Guldahl, professional of the St. Louis Country Club, who finished second by a stroke to Johnny Goodman, Omaha amateur, in the recent National Open golf tournament, is waiting word daily from Olin Dutra, Professional Golfers' Association champion, as to when to start an extensive exhibition tour.

Dutra has just returned from England, where he played in the Ryder Cup matches and in the British Open.

Guldahl said the route of the tour had not been determined, but he expects his itinerary would permit him to play in the major tournaments such as the P. G. A., the Western and Canadian Opens and in the Captial City Open in Washington.

Ralph recently returned from Texas, where he went for a visit and to play an exhibiton tour. Admirers in his old home town of Dallas presented him with a new sedan in recognition of his work in the U. S. Open.

Westborough Country Club will hold an invitation tournament Wednesday to which four or five members of each club in the district have been invited to play with about 40 Westborough members.

Clarence Wolff, secretary of the St. Louis District Golf Association, has not received word from the U. S. G. A. as to the number of places allotted to this district in the National Amateur, the sectional qualifying round for which will be held at Sunset Hill Country Club, Aug. 8. Last year two places were given to St. Louis and it is likely that the district will get either two or three places this year.

A contingent of St. Louis golfers headed by Frank Bredall, district and Webster junior champion, has gone to Memphis to play in the Western amateur which opens there tomorrow. Among others are Charley Martin, Joe Switzer and Mike Roach.

Bredall was presented with a new set of clubs by members of Woodlawn Country Club for his victory in the Western junior.

The sectional qualifying round for the Professional Golfers' Tournament for this district will be held at Algonquin Golf Club, Monday, July 31. Ralph Guldahl, St. Louis Country Club, John Manion, Sunset, and Jim Fogertey, Osage, are the only entrants. They will play 36 holes and the one with the lowest score will represent the district at Milwaukee.

P. G. A. EXEMPTS RYDER CUP ACES FROM QUALIFYING

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 22. — Milwaukee backers of the National Professional Golf Championship were satisfied today that a solution had been reached in their dispute with members of the American Ryder Cup team that would assure the success of the tournament.

In a telegraphic pool conducted today, directors of the National P. G. A. voted 8 to 2 to admit Ryder Cup team members to the tournament without the necessity of first qualifying in sectional competition.

By this action, the directors hoped to attract to Milwaukee those top notch pros who have announced that they would not be present because of a conflict between qualifying tournaments and exhibition matches which they had scheduled before the national dates had been set.

Among this group are Denny Shute, British Open champion; Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Jo Kirkwood and Craig Wood, all Ryder Cup players. Hagen and Shute are still in England and cablegrams were dispatched to them today containing word of the directors' action.

Sarazen Won't Play

NEW YORK, July 22.—Gene Sarazen will not take part in the P. G. A. tournament despite the fact that the officials voted to allow his automatic qualification.

His local agent had Sarazen booked solid for a month of exhibitions and said that Sarazen told him he would be unable to change the dates to suit the P. G. A.

Graham to Play Hudlin in Negro Tennis Final

The final round of play in the Negro city tennis championships will bring together in the men's division two of the most outstanding players of the tournament—Richard A. Hudlin and Charles Graham. This pair will battle for the title at 4 o'clock this afternoon on the Tandy Park courts.

Hudlin, a local star, formerly was captain of the Chicago University team, while Graham holds the Oklahoma State Negro championship. An indication of what to expect was supplied to the 2000 fans yesterday as Hudlin paired with Dr. Russell Smith to defeat Graham and his partner, Dr. Jones Hurt, 6—4, 6—0, 7—5, in the men's doubles final.

Another championship was shared by Hudlin as he teamed with Mrs. D. O. Seames, Chicago's 65-year-old representative, to conquer Montell Blanks and Ruby Lawrence, 6—0, 6—1, in the mixed doubles final round. The hot weather didn't bother Mrs. Seames much, as she came right back and paired with Ruby Lawrence, but lost the women's doubles championship to Adelaide Bruce and Pelagie Green, 6—4, 6—3.

After today's matches the winners and runners-up will be presented with trophies presented by Cab Calloway. The champions will be entitled to participate in the national Negro tennis championships to be held at Hampton, Va., starting Aug. 12.

Yesterday's Results

MEN'S DOUBLES.
(Final round.)

Richard Hudlin and Dr. Russell Smith defeated Dr. Jones Hurt and Charles Graham, 6-4, 6-0, 7-5.

EQUIPOISE IS VICTOR IN $10,000 HANDICAP

when Larranaga made a fast move on the outside.

But as the field started into the far turn, Dark Secret began to drop back, leaving the lead to Watch Him and Gallant Sir. Then Workman made his move, and called upon Equipoise for speed. The great Whitney five-year-old left Larranaga behind and moved up on the two leaders on the outside. Rounding into the stretch Equipoise conquered Gallant Sir and then took out after Watch Him.

An eighth of a mile from the finish, Equipoise began to bob in front to the cheers of 25,000 spectators. From then on to the finish he drew away slowly but steadily to win galloping.

Watch Him, carrying only 106 pounds, ran a surprising race. He was perfectly ridden by Jockey Earl Steffen, and while not good enough to offstand Equipoise, he beat Gallant Sir by five lengths.

Plucky Play, which finished fourth, delayed the start for nearly 10 minutes, when it was discovered after the horses had left the paddock, that he had a loose shoe on his left forefoot. The horses were returned to the paddock, the jockeys dismounted, while a new plate was nailed on. Dark Secret held on to finish fifth, with Big Brand sixth and Larranaga after making one desperate move at the three-quarter pole, dropped out of it to finish last.

QUALIFYING PLAY IN WESTERN TO OPEN TOMORROW

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 22.—The quest for the Western amateur golf championship starts here Monday without a single challenger from the Far West—the region that has produced five champions in the past seven years.

CHICK EVANS.

The Pacific Coast sector, home of Don Moe and Frank Dolp, twice champions, and Bon Stein, was not represented among the 118 players who had registered tonight, but to balance the loss of those contenders there was the biggest field in history from the South and Southwest.

Four former titleholders, Charles (Chick) Evans of Chicago, Keefe Carter of Oklahoma City, Johnny Lehman of Chicago, and Gus Moreland of Dallas, were ready for the chase. Moreland, although somewhat bothered by a right knee injury, showed the soundness of his game with 68, two under par, in practice.

Moreland is not required to qualify, but the others will stake their title hopes in the 36-hole medal play test Monday and Tuesday to determine the 31 players who will join him in the match play rounds beginning Wednesday.

Among the better known stars who will oppose the right of the recent trans-Mississippi tournament winner to wear the Western crown another year are Walter Emery of Oklahoma City, who recently acquired the National Intercollegiate title; Rodney Bliss of Omaha, Neb., another college star; Carl Dann Jr. of Orlando, the Florida champion, and Jack Westland, Chicago, runner-up in the National Amateur two years ago.

Three former Southern champions—Sam Perry of Birmingham, Ala.; Emmett Spicer of Memphis, and Chasteen Harris of Memphis—also are entered, as is Earl Stokes of Louisville, Ky., runner-up this year in the Southern. Stokes had a 72 today.

Charles Yates of Atlanta, Billy Howell of Richmond, Va., and Eugene Vinson of Meridian, Miss., form another trio of dangerous Southern threats.

Paul Jackson of Kansas City, another bright light of the 1931 National Amateur, seeks the throne, as does Johnny Dawson, a veteran Chicagoan.

Edgemont Meets Bly-Moss Team In Trolley Loop

The two leaders in the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League will meet strong opposition in games this afternoon. The St. Louis Dairies engage the Kirkwood A. C. at the North End Park, Belleville, while the Edgemont A. C. will be host to the Bly-Moss nine at Seventy-ninth and State streets, East St. Louis. In the other contest scheduled, the Vess team will meet the Hubtowners, of Madison, at Kirkwood.

The Edgemont A. C., with three straight victories in the second half race, will probably have the hardest contest as Bly-Moss has two wins and one defeat to its credit. The defeat came at the hands of the St. Louis Dairies.

KOZAK AND SCHEIBER TO MEET IN FINAL OF METROPOLITAN GOLF

By the Associated Press.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., July 22.—For the fourth time in five years Walter Kozak, 24-year-old Pomonak golfer, today reached the finals of the Metropolitan P. G. A. championship tournament.

On the heels of a brilliant victory this morning over Jack Sabol of Westchester Hills, Walter this afternoon checked the advance of the veteran Mike Brady of Winged Foot, 5 and 4.

A neighboring Long Islander, Walter Scheiber of Hillcrest, will be Kozak's opponent in the 36-hole final tomorrow over the picturesque fairways of the Rockwood Hall Country Club.

With a sensational finish, Scheiber vanquished John Golden of Wee Burn, 1 up, when Golden three-putted on the 18th green.

WOLF AND HELLRUNG NINES WILL DEFEND LEAGUE LEAD TODAY

The Wolf and the Hellrung teams, occupying first place in the University City League by a margin of one game, will be called upon to defend their position this afternoon when they meet the Burkes and Knapps, respectively, in Heman Park.

The Wolfs defeated the Burkes in their last meeting and, having also defeated the Knapps and their star twirler, Gruenwald, are looked upon as favorites to maintain their position at the top of the league. Davis, who lost a three-hit game in his last out, will probably be on the hill for the Wolfs, opposed by Duvic for the Burkes.

MISS WEISS AND RUTH BAILEY TO PLAY FOR MUNY HONORS, TODAY

By Davison Obear.

Ruth Bailey opposes Merceina Weiss in the final round of the women's municipal singles tennis championship on the Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Following the singles final, Miss Bailey and Mrs. Ella Dietz-Felbinger meet Mrs. Ethel Schneider and Miss Frances Jacobson for the women's doubles title.

Miss Bailey won the municipal singles title in 1928, while Miss Weiss was runner-up to Mrs. Dueker in the final last year. The match between the two players is likely to produce some close play with Miss Bailey the favorite. She has had considerably more experience than her younger opponent and during the tournament has steadily improved. Miss Weiss is a very steady player and quite often her chop strokes prove troublesome to opponents.

In reaching the final round, Miss Bailey defeated Lottie Hagemeyer, a former champion in one semi-final, while Miss Weiss won from Mrs. Ethel Schneider in the other.

The doubles final may require the limit of three sets before a decision is reached. Miss Bailey and Mrs. Ella Dietz-Felbinger, are playing together for the first time. They were seeded second while Mrs. Schneider and Miss Jacobson have been playing together for seven seasons and were seeded first by the committee.

An admission charge of 25 cents will be made for the finals. The proceeds will go into a fund being raised to send the champions to New York for the national public parks tournament, the week of Aug. 7.

WRAY'S COLUMN

spring advance notices, Street couldn't have kicked off the flag, in all probability.

Hired as "Goats."

SOMETIMES it appears that baseball team managers are hired so the clubs will have a scapegoat handy. Losing teams have to do something to draw the public attention away from themselves. What is simpler or more inexpensive than to fire the manager and let a player or coach finish out the campaign?

Sometimes club owners seem to place too high an importance on the leadership of a club. We hear complaints about this manager's poor handling of his pitchers, that manager's field tactics, and another's lack of control of his players. But if each leader did all these things 100 per cent, we wonder if he could make world champions out of second division material?

Case of the Cards.

SAM BREADON of the Cardinals seems to have demonstrated that managers are only incidents in the winning of pennants. He released a winning manager in 1926 and named Bob O'Farrell for the next year. O'Farrell's team was barely nosed out, after suffering an appalling series of accidents.

McKechnie, a new manager the next season, won the flag in 1928; but Southworth, who came the next year, couldn't duplicate it. The following season another manager, Gabby Street, took the reins and won—

With that record in view why worry about the manager? Good players and good breaks, rather than good managers, turn the trick. That seems to be the deduction from the Cardinals' recent history.

Mack Was Fortunate.

AND, looking over the entire major league list and noting that the average duration of a manager's job (Connie Mack excluded) is 1.9 years, there is reason to believe the application is general.

Even the venerable Mr. Mack's long term in office can be explained—he's part owner of the Philadelphia club!

How long would Connie have lasted with any other team in either league, during that period between 1914 and 1929—a hiatus of 15 years between pennant winning teams? Connie would hardly have survived the seven-year period during which his club occupied last place, with the club in other hands.

Club presidents are not that patient today. It is necessary to add, while on the subject of managers, however, that most of the clubs which changed managers without changing players probably would have fared as well or better, if they had not made the swap.

A new manager inspires hope, rather than expectancy of improvement.

New Managers Who Helped.

THERE have been several notably successful new managers who form exceptions to the rule.

Red Dooin had a good ball club and a great pitcher, Alexander, in Philadelphia, back in the pre-war days; but his famed "riding academy" failed to click. They brought in veteran Pat Moran, and he won the flag for the Phillies in 1915.

As though to prove it wasn't an accident, Pat Moran, drafted by the Reds, did the same thing for Cincinnati in 1919.

George Stallings took over the despised Boston Braves in 1913, and the next year he won the world championship.

And, by the way, Bill Terry and Joe Cronin seem to be turning on the heat in a most unusual manner. However, both of these inherited some ready-made talent of high order.

Milwaukee Is Peeved

AS if Phil Ball of the Browns did not have enough major worries his minor leaguer affiliations are beginning to growl out loud. Milwaukee critics are laying down a barrage of complaint, designed to have Ball either sell out his holdings in Milwaukee or ship his St. Louis American League club and franchise back to the Cream City, where it originally came from, years ago.

Nothing much is likely to come of either, unless a juicy price is offered for the Brewers—and baseball club values have long since had all the juice squeezed out of them.

The reason for the complaint, according to Sam Levy of the Journal, is that only 30,000 persons have attended the home games of the Brewers this season, indicating that Ball will lose a large head of "lettuce" on this year's campaign. In the past there has always been plenty more lettuce where the losing heads came from; but the 1933 lettuce crop is a bit wormy.

Milwaukee Wants a Winner!

THE average daily Milwaukee attendance has been 200 and the worst is yet to come, unless some uplift can be arranged. Dick Coffman was hurried to the Brewers, but didn't seem to supply the required hoist.

Milwaukee writers are clamoring for a one-two-three club which, they believe, will put the club back in its former class as a money earner. From 1920 to 1928 inclusive, the Brewers are said to have earned a total of $865,000, with a peak of $192,000 in 1927.

However, the Milwaukee club is not the only Association team that has gone into the red. The whole organization, with the exception of Columbus and perhaps one or two others, has been badly bent. Milwaukee is the rule, not the exception.

Deflating Racing.

THAT amazing financial bubble, inflated during the last decade and which saw horse owners paid as much and more than $100,000 for winning a single race, has been punctured.

The 1933 campaign has seen almost every major stake reduced materially. The Caliente Handicap, proclaimed the "world's richest stake," was cut three-fourths—from $100,000 to $25,000; the Arlington Classic was cut from $70,000 to $25,000. On the average a fifty per cent cut was made in all $50,000 stakes, with the sole exception of the Kentucky Derby. Even the Belmont's payoff dropped about $20,000.

Some stakes have been abandoned altogether, notably the Pimlico Futurity, which carried $40,000 added money. The Latonia championship, for years a $25,000 added money test, will be abandoned after the 1934 conditions have been fulfilled.

Public Is "Broke."

OTHER costs of operation of track promotions have been reduced everywhere; but still in the metropolitan area the business of conducting horse races continues to be a financial pain in the neck.

The slashes are, of course, in keeping with the loss of spending power on the part of the public. The diminished receipts do not reflect unpopularity. But it is highly unlikely that the present generation will witness a return to the amazing days of the last decade, when $100,000 was offered for a two-horse race to which the public gladly paid as high as $22.50 a single admission—the Papyrus-Zev race. It was in these halcyon days that the revival of the American Derby saw E. R. Bradley's Boot to Boot reap a harvest of $85,000—a sum that almost bankrupted the Washington Park Jockey Club to pay.

Gallant Fox' All-Time Record.

THE inflation period of racing makes it probable that no horse of the future will ever approach the money-earning record of Gallant Fox which, as a three-year-old, earned in that one campaign a total of more than $308,000.

During this year Gallant Fox ran 10 races and won nine of them, finishing second in the memorable Traves stake, won by a "plug," Jim Dandy.

At present day reductions Gallant Fox's victories, repeated this year, would barely net the victor $200,000—a shrinkage of more than $100,000!

Man O' War Born Too Soon.

IN earlier days of small—added money stakes, say in 1920 before the gold rush began, Man o' War, winner of all his 21 races with one exception when he finished a nose behind Upset, could earn only $249,000.

If he had been in his prime in the day of Gallant Fox and high stakes, the same victories he won in 1920 plus the Arlington Classic and the three-year-old stakes added since Man o' War's time would have given the son of Fair Play a grand total of winnings of more than $600,000, or more than $225,000 above Sun Beau's record, $376,000.

The future of racing would seem to be better served by increases to the mine-run of horses, rather than extreme increases in the value of stakes.

BROWNS L

7-RUN RALLY WINS FIRST; FOXX HITS 27TH HOMER IN THE SECOND

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—The Browns lost two heart-breakers here today in the double-header winding up their second eastern invasion. A seven-run rally in the eighth inning of the first game landed the Athletics an 8 to 7 decision. Jack Burns' fumble of Madjeski's grounder with the score tied, and two out in the eighth put the Mackmen over in the nightcap, 6 to 5.

The Browns thus lost the series here, 3 to 1, and headed for the West with only six victories to show against 11 set-backs in the East. All four of the games here were nip and tuck, however, the first two going to extra innings. Today's pair of one-run decisions makes 8 out of 14 Browns-Athletics games so far this year decided by the thinnest possible margin.

McDonald Fades in Eighth.

Hank McDonald, who started the season as a Mack pitcher, held a decided edge over Rube Walberg in the first game until the Athletics went to bat in their half of the eighth. McDonald had allowed five hits and only one run up to that time and the Browns, with a 4 to 1 advantage, looked like winners.

McDonald, however, faded with a devastating suddenness. He walked the first batter, Pinch Hitter Bing Miller, then Bishop's single and Cramer's double put one run across and stationed enough potential tallies on the bases to tie the score.

Acting Manager Sothoron yanked Hank and sent in Sam Gray, also a former Philadelphia ace. Gray's first move was to hit Cochrane with a pitched ball, filling the bases for Foxx with none out.

Gray looked like a mountain-high stumbling block in the Athletics' path when he disposed of Foxx on a grounder to Scharein on which Scharein threw out Bishop at the plate. Coleman's best effort was a fly to West, which scored Cramer, but made two out with a run still needed to tie.

Gray tried to profit by the evident anxiety of the young Mackmen by making them hit bad balls, but the result was a pair of passes to Johnson and Higgins, the first filling the bases and the second scoring Cochrane with the tying run.

Gray then got the ball over for Williams, but the local shortstop clouted it into the left field pavilion for four bases and four runs.

The Browns made a gallant last-ditch effort in the ninth, knocking out Jim Peterson on singles by Levey and Garms together with a pair of passes. With little Tony Freitas pitching, Burns' single knocked West home and put the tying run on second but the game ended when Johnson made a spectacular catch of Melillo's long liner to left.

Jimmie Foxx's twenty-seventh homer of the season, coming with two on base in the third inning, featured the local scoring in the nightcap. George Blaeholder started for the Browns, but while the Athletics were scoring two runs on a double and two singles in the second inning, Blaeholder strained a muscle in his pitching arm and was forced to retire.

Ed Wells took charge in the third, yielding Foxx's homer in that inning, but blanking the locals for the next three rounds. Meanwhile the Browns began an uphill fight against the 4-0 lead, mixing hits with "Sugar" Cain's generous output of bases on balls and finally tying the score when Debs Garms came up as pinch hitter in the seventh and doubled to send two runs across the plate.

Stiles Losing Pitcher.

Rolland Stiles then hooked up with Cain in the pitching duel. The Browns made no hits after Garms' pinch double. Williams, the first game's local hero, opened the home eighth with a safe bunt. Cain fanned and McNair flied out, but Cramer singled to right to put Williams on second.

The crisis seemed past when Madjeski knocked a slow one straight at Burns, but the ball had a lot of spin on it and eluded the visiting first-baseman's hands, rolling to right-field while Williams rushed home with the winning run.

Cain, who gave out 11 passes, handed out his last two in the ninth inning, but managed to strike out Storti and Gullic for his only strike outs of the game, then forced Scharein for a grounder to end the game.

Scharein's fielding was easily the feature of the playing of both teams in both games. He started two double plays in the afterpiece that were gems of third-basing art and in the fifth inning threw out Coleman, the fastest man in the local lineup, on a slow roller when everybody said it couldn't be done.

MISS WEISS AND RUTH BAILEY TO PLAY FOR MUNY HONORS, TODAY

By Davison Obear.

Ruth Bailey opposes Merceina Weiss in the final round of the women's municipal singles tennis championship on the Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Following the singles final, Miss Bailey and Mrs. Ella Dietz-Felbinger meet Mrs. Ethel Schneider and Miss Frances Jacobson for the women's doubles title.

Miss Bailey won the municipal singles title in 1928, while Miss Weiss was runner-up to Mrs. Dueker in the final last year. The match between the two players is likely to produce some close play with Miss Bailey the favorite. She has had considerably more experience than her younger opponent and during the tournament has steadily improved. Miss Weiss is a very steady player and quite often her chop strokes prove troublesome to opponents.

In reaching the final round, Miss Bailey defeated Lottie Hagemeyer, a former champion in one semi-final, while Miss Weiss won from Mrs. Ethel Schneider in the other.

The doubles final may require the limit of three sets before a decision is reached. Miss Bailey and Mrs. Ella Dietz-Felbinger, are playing together for the first time. They were seeded second while Mrs. Schneider and Miss Jacobson have been playing together for several seasons and were seeded first by the committee.

An admission charge of 25 cents will be made for the finals. The proceeds will go into a fund being raised to send the champions to New York for the national public parks tournament, the week of Aug. 7.

race, has been punctured.

The 1933 campaign has seen almost every major stake reduced materially. The Caliente Handicap, proclaimed the "world's richest stake," was cut three-fourths—from $100,000 to $25,000; the Arlington Classic was cut from $70,000 to $25,000. On the average a fifty per cent cut was made in all $50,000 stakes, with the sole exception of the Kentucky Derby. Even the Belmont's payoff dropped about $20,000.

Some stakes have been abandoned altogether, notably the Pimlico Futurity, which carried $40,000 added money. The Latonia championship, for years a $25,000 added money test, will be abandoned after the 1934 conditions have been fulfilled.

Public Is "Broke."

OTHER costs of operation of track promotions have been reduced everywhere; but still in the metropolitan area the business of conducting horse races continues to be a financial pain in the neck.

The slashes are, of course, in keeping with the loss of spending power on the part of the public. The diminished receipts do not reflect unpopularity. But it is highly unlikely that the present generation will witness a return to the amazing days of the last decade, when $100,000 was offered for a two-horse race to which the public gladly paid as high as $22.50 a single admission—the Papyrus-Zev race. It was in these halcyon days that the revival of the American Derby saw E. R. Bradley's Boot to Boot reap a harvest of $85,000—a sum that almost bankrupted the Washington Park Jockey Club to pay.

Gallant Fox' All-Time Record.

THE inflation period of racing makes it probable that no horse of the future will ever approach the money-earning record of Gallant Fox which, as a three-year-old, earned in that one campaign a total of more than $308,000.

During this year Gallant Fox ran 10 races and won nine of them, finishing second in the memorable Traves stake, won by a "plug," Jim Dandy.

At present day reductions Gallant Fox's victories, repeated this year, would barely net the victor $200,000—a shrinkage of more than $100,000!

Man O' War Born Too Soon.

IN earlier days of small—added money stakes, say in 1920 before the gold rush began, Man o' War, winner of all his 21 races with one exception when he finished a nose behind Upset, could earn only $249,000.

If he had been in his prime in the day of Gallant Fox and high stakes, the same victories he won in 1920 plus the Arlington Classic and the three-year-old stakes added since Man o' War's time would have given the son of Fair Play a grand total of winnings of more than $600,000, or more than $225,000 above Sun Beau's record, $376,000.

The future of racing would seem to be better served by increases to the mine-run of horses, rather than extreme increases in the value of stakes.

BROWNS LOSE DOUBLEHEADER TO ATHLETICS, 8 TO 7 AND 6 TO 5

7-RUN RALLY WINS FIRST; FOXX HITS 27TH HOMER IN THE SECOND

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—The Browns lost two heart-breakers here today in the double-header winding up their second eastern invasion. A seven-run rally in the eighth inning of the first game landed the Athletics an 8 to 7 decision. Jack Burns' fumble of Madjeski's grounder with the score tied, and two out in the eighth put the Mackmen over in the nightcap, 6 to 5.

The Browns thus lost the series here, 3 to 1, and headed for the West with only six victories to show against 11 set-backs in the East. All four of the games here were nip and tuck, however, the first two going to extra innings. Today's pair of one-run decisions makes 8 out of 14 Browns-Athletics games so far this year decided by the thinnest possible margin.

McDonald Fades in Eighth.

Hank McDonald, who started the season as a Mack pitcher, held a decided edge over Rube Walberg in the first game until the Athletics went to bat in their half of the eighth. McDonald had allowed five hits and only one run up to that time and the Browns, with a 4 to 1 advantage, looked like winners.

McDonald, however, faded with a devastating suddenness. He walked the first batter, Pinch Hitter Bing Miller, then Bishop's single and Cramer's double put one run across and stationed enough potential tallies on the bases to tie the score.

Acting Manager Sothoron yanked Hank and sent in Sam Gray, also a former Philadelphia ace. Gray's first move was to hit Cochrane with a pitched ball, filling the bases for Foxx with none out.

Gray looked like a mountain-high stumbling block in the Athletics' path when he disposed of Foxx on a grounder to Scharein on which Scharein threw out Bishop at the plate. Coleman's best effort was a fly to West, which scored Cramer, but made two out with a run still needed to tie.

Gray tried to profit by the evident anxiety of the young Mackmen by making them hit bad balls, but the result was a pair of passes to Johnson and Higgins, the first filling the bases and the second scoring Cochrane with the tying run.

Gray then got the ball over for Williams, but the local shortstop clouted it into the left field pavilion for four bases and four runs.

The Browns made a gallant last-ditch effort in the ninth, knocking out Jim Peterson on singles by Levey and Garms together with a pair of passes. With little Tony Freitas pitching, Burns' single knocked West home and put the tying run on second but the game ended when Johnson made a spectacular catch of Melillo's long liner to left.

Jimmie Foxx's twenty-seventh homer of the season, coming with two on base in the third inning, featured the local scoring in the nightcap. George Blaeholder started for the Browns, but while the Athletics were scoring two runs on a double and two singles in the second inning, Blaeholder strained a muscle in his pitching arm and was forced to retire.

Ed Wells took charge in the third, yielding Foxx's homer in that inning, but blanking the locals for the next three rounds. Meanwhile the Browns began an uphill fight against the 4-0 lead, mixing hits with "Sugar" Cain's generous output of bases on balls and finally tying the score when Debs Garms came up as pinch hitter in the seventh and doubled to send two runs across the plate.

Stiles Losing Pitcher.

Rolland Stiles then hooked up with Cain in the pitching duel. The Browns made no hits after Garms' pinch double. Williams, the first game's local hero, opened the home eighth with a safe bunt. Cain fanned and McNair flied out, but Cramer singled to right to put Williams on second.

The crisis seemed past when Madjeski knocked a slow one straight at Burns, but the ball had a lot of spin on it and eluded the visiting first-baseman's hands, rolling to right-field while Williams rushed home with the winning run.

Cain, who gave out 11 passes, handed out his last two in the ninth inning, but managed to strike out Storti and Gullic for his only strike outs of the game, then mastered Scharein for a grounder to end the game.

Scharein's fielding was easily the feature of the playing of both teams in both games. He started two double plays in the afterpiece that were gems of third-basing art and in the fifth inning threw out Coleman, the fastest man in the local lineup, on a slow roller when everybody said it couldn't be done.

HALLAHAN FAILS AND CARDS LOSE AGAIN TO BRAVES

tired Allen, Orsatti and Hornsby.

The three other hits off Brandt were bunched in the ninth with a pass to produce the Redbirds' fifth run. Frisch batted for Durocher and singled to open the ninth and Slade, for Mooney, walked. Martin singled to left, scoring Haines, who ran for Frisch, but Allen fouled out and, after Orsatti's single to left filled the bases, Hornsby hit into a double play to end the game and disappoint the ladies, who were shrieking for him to tie the score with a home run.

The seven runs off Hallahan were more than Brandt needed, but the Braves added one in the sixth with Johnson on the hill. Brandt singled, Urbanski sacrificed and Jordan doubled, scoring Brandt. With Mooney on the hill in the eighth Brandt again singled and was forced by Urbanski, who scored from first on Berger's double to right center.

It was Boston's twenty-first victory in the last 31 games and a team that can travel that fast deserves to be in the first division.

Redbird Notes

DIZZY DEAN and Tex Carleton will be the starting pitchers in today's doubleheader with the Braves. Tom Zachary and Benny Cantwell are due for Boston.

Ed Brandt was announced just before the third game of the series as McKechnie's selection, but Bill made a last-minute switch in favor of Mangum, who pitched a three-hit game against the Redbirds in Boston, but who hasn't won a contest since then.

Secretary Clarence Lloyd of the Cardinals announced last night that Outfielder Estel Crabtree had been released on option to the Rochester club of the International League.

Cardinals and Braves gathered at home plate before the game to honor Jess Haines on his fortieth birthday. Frankie Frisch made the presentation speech. The gift was a silver statuette, a figure of a pitcher standing between the portals of the Hall of Fame.

Collins aggravated the injury to his left instep sliding back to second in the first inning, and when the Cards took the field in the third, Crawford went to first base.

The game attracted a Ladies' day crowd of 1900 cash customers and 5200 women.

Scharbert Meets Toby.

Billy Scharbert of East St. Louis will meet George Toby of Bonne Terre, Mo., in the third preliminary limited to 30 minutes on the wrestling card to be held Wednesday night at the Social Center Gymnasium, East St. Louis. Joe Miller of Germany opposes Harold Metheny of Wood River, Ill., in the one fall to a finish feature, while "Cyclone" Robinson of Oklahoma City meets Walter McMillian of Pine Lawn, Mo., in the 30-minute semi-final. Two other matches will complete the card.

GIANTS DEFEAT PIRATES, 1 TO 0, THEN LOSE, 7-2, BEFORE 27,000

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—The Pirates and the New York Giants divided today's doubleheader and ended their six-game series on even terms, as Carl Hubbell pitched the league leaders to a 1 to 0 victory in the opener and the Pirates batted out a 7 to 2 victory in the second game.

A crowd of 27,000, the largest here in three years, saw the twice-delayed double bill. The first game was interrupted in the eighth by a pop bottle shower as fans objected to Umpire Moran's decisions at first, while the second was halted for an hour by rain in the first inning.

The split was costly to both teams as the second-place Chicago Cubs won, to reduce the Giants' lead to 2½ games, while the Pirates remained four games behind.

Each team made six hits in the opener as Hubbell won his fifteenth game of the season and his seventh shutout. The only run came in the first inning when Hughie Critz singled and scored on Mel Ott's fly after walks to Bill Terry and Homer Peel had loaded the bases.

Cuyler's Homer Helps Cubs Defeat Phils, 4 to 1.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Heavy hitting by Kiki Cuyler and Babe Herman plus effective pitching by Charley Root when there were enemy runners on the paths, gave the second-place Chicago Cubs a 4 to 1 victory over Philadelphia today and sent the Phillies tumbling back into the cellar again.

Cuyler hit a homer and a double, tying the score at one-all with his four-base blow in the fourth and driving in Koenig who had singled, with his double in the eighth. Cuyler then scored on a two-bagger by Babe Herman, whose single in the sixth inning drove in Koenig with the other Chicago run.

SENATORS WIN AS YANKS LOSE, AND TAKE LEAD IN AMERICAN

WASHINGTON, July 22. — The Washington Senators again took top place in the American League by defeating Detroit, 4 to 3, in a hard-fought game that was not decided until the last of the ninth.

Each team scored one run in the first, Detroit made two in the sixth and Washington tied it up in the seventh.

In the ninth, Rice singled and took second on a single by Myer. Harris bunted, forcing Rice at third. Cronin walked and Myer scored on a single by Schulte.

In the meantime, the New York Yankees dropped into second place, a full game behind the Senators, through a 2 to 1 defeat from Cleveland.

Yankee Errors Bring Defeat by Indians, 2 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Yankee errors ruined a good pitching job for Charley Ruffing today and gave the Cleveland Indians a 2 to 1 victory that was a painful blow to the Yankees' hopes for capturing the American League lead.

SERGEANT BYRNE, 30 TO 1 SHOT, WINS THE EASTVIEW STAKES

JOCKEY CRUZ LANDS OUTSIDER LENGTH AHEAD AT EMPIRE CITY

By the Associated Press.

EMPIRE CITY RACE TRACK, N. Y., July 22.—Sergeant Byrne, a son of Stimulus which won a race in the mud at Jamaica only to be beaten off in two subsequent starts, sprang one of the biggest upsets of the local season when, at odds of 30 to 1, the John Simonetti colorbearer drove home a winner of the Eastview Stakes here today. Backers of little Howard Cruz cashed in on the outsider's victory, for the boy who recently lost his apprenticeship rode the colt home by a length to capture the winner's share of $2780 before a crowd of about 7000.

C. V. Whitney's Collateral was second by a length and a half over Mrs. Payne Whitney's Rose Cross. The latter and Soon Over, coupled as the Greentree Stable entry, went to the post favored at even money, but Soon Over was badly outrun.

Billy M., which won Youthful Stakes early in the season, again proved a disappointment, finishing last in the field of eight.

Sergeant Byrne was hustled right to the front and Cruz let his mount steal a healthy lead over Piety, a stablemate of Collateral's, Hawk Moth and Collateral. Piety stopped after entering the stretch but Collateral closed ground fast, although too late to seriously threaten the driving winner. Rose Cross also finished resolutely and was a good five lengths before Piety for show honors.

ABAD TO BOX AT BATTERY A WEDNESDAY

Davey Abad, Panama fighter, will be one of the principals in the feature 10-round match on Jack C. Tippett's professional boxing card Wednesday night at the Battery A arena.

Abad and Lou Terry, who were originally matched to meet, were dropped from the card last week when their managers' demanded larger purses.

Tippett, yesterday signed Abad at the matchmaker's terms, Terry was given another chance to come to terms but his manager, Bob Riley, again turned down Tippett's offer.

Mickey Cohen and Danny Delmont are included among the fighters Tippett is dickering with in an attempt to land a worthy foe for Abad.

The 10-rounder will be supported by three eight-rounders. In two of them, Joe Huff takes on Clem Reed of Quincy, Ill., and Elmer Savage battles Carl Schafer.

LATE DATE WINS HANDICAP AT LATONIA TRACK

By the Associated Press.

LATONIA, Ky., July 22.—Taking the lead at the first quarter pole, Late Date of the Audley Farms set a sizzling pace to finish first in the Enquirer Handicap today, six lengths in front of Bright Bubble, with Marmion, the favorite, barely lasting to take third money.

Late Date covered the mile and a sixteenth in 1:43 3-5, only 3-5 of a second off the track record, though a glaring sun sent the mercury to 102 in the shade.

The race, for three-year-olds and up, was worth $2225 and a silver trophy to the winner, and Late Date paid his backers $12 for $2.

Getting off to a perfect start, the field of eight was bunched up to the turn. Then Late Date shot to the front and stayed there.

Marmion of the Cold Stream Stud, meanwhile, lost ground on the far turn, dashed up on the outside to win it back again, passed Sam Furst's Bright Bubble, and was hard after the first going Late Date when she sputtered out, and was hard put to hold third from Ridgeview, winner last year.

City Elimination Bicycle Trials This Morning

City elimination bicycle trials, prior to the State championship event on Aug. 13, will be held this morning in Forest Park, starting at 7 a. m. The course will be on the drive around the bandstand opposite the Municipal Theater entrance.

There will be races in the senior and junior divisions. Competitors who will not reach the age of 16 on or before Sept. 17 will be eligible to compete in the junior class.

Senior events will consist of races at five miles, one mile, one-half mile, from scratch, and a 10-mile point race. Races for juniors will be at one-half mile, one mile and two miles, from scratch, and a five-mile point event.

The point race in each class will be a scratch event with a sprint for points at each mile. The first four in each point sprint will score, five for first, three for second, two for third and one for fourth.

ANGELICAS OPPOSE SUNSETS IN MUNY HORSESHOE LEAGUE

With 14 games separating them, the first place Angelicas and the second place Sunsets will meet in a 16-game match this morning at Fairground Park in Municipal Horseshoe League play. Gene and Joe Wors of the Angelicas and "Lefty" Steinman and Perle Keyes of the Sunsets, the league's four leading players, will meet in this match. In the other match the Kuhlmanns will meet the Gray's Grove team. The Plegges drew a bye.

Receiving Race Entries

Entries are being received for the "marathon" run sponsored by the Waverly Athletic Club in connection with a Knights of Columbus picnic at Lansdowne Park, in East St. Louis, Wednesday, Aug. 9. The starting time will be at 6 p. m. at Collinsville and the Bluff roads at Collinsville, Ill., to Lansdowne Park in East St. Louis, a distance of eight miles. With a payment of 25 cents for entry free, entry blanks are available at the Waverly Club headquarters at 1866 North Fortieth street, or for further details call Charles Trione, EAst 4564.

Program of River Sports Today at Century Boat Club

In order to maintain a tradition of many years standing as an active rowing club, the Century Boat Club will sponsor a program this afternoon on the Mississippi River.

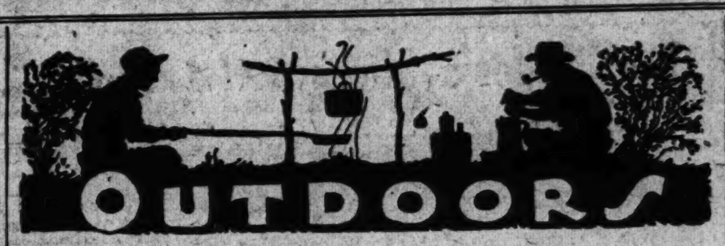
Century was forced out of activity last year when its boathouse, in which its rowing shells were housed, burned. Even though the means of competing was destroyed, directors of the club decided that a year should not go past without Century being represented by at least one regatta; hence this afternoon's program.

Two rowing races, two motorboat races and some exhibition events will be held opposite the clubhouse, 5500 South Broadway, starting at 3:30.

A parade of yachts will open the program, followed by an open single scull race, one mile, downstream and an open eight-oared shell race, at three quarters mile, downstream. Motorboat and exhibition events will follow. The program is free to the public.

The list of events follows:

3:30—Yacht parade.
4:00—Open single scull race, one mile, downstream.
4:15—Open eight-oar shell race, three-quarters mile, downstream.
4:30—Open five-mile outboard runabout race.
5:00—Doubles canoe race, half-mile, upstream.
5:15—Surfboard riding exhibition.
5:30—Open five-mile inboard runabout race.



Get Your Foot-Rule Ready.

Starting July 24, anglers in Missouri will find it necessary to include in their tackle kits some kind of measuring device as on that date the new State minimum size limit law enacted by the last Legislature becomes effective.

The most convenient method of making certain that fish taken are above the minimum size permitted to be kept is to mark a rule on one's fly or bait rod. Starting from the butt of the marks should be made at 5, 6, 8, 9 and 12 inches. An enamel or other waterproof paint can be used.

The five-inch mark would be for goggle-eye, six inches for crappie, eight inches for bass and trout and twelve inches for jack salmon. Measurements are to be made from the tip of the snout to the tip of the caudal or tail fin, the new law specifies.

Fish culturalists, however, compute the length of a fish from the tip of the snout to the point of the body where the caudal fin is attached. This, they point out, would be a better rule for sportsmen to follow in measuring fish under Missouri's regulations as the minimum size limit is low. Bass, they say, seldom have an opportunity to spawn until they are at least 12 inches long.

Fly fishermen who carry creels can put a measuring device on their fish baskets. Some fishing tackle cases have rules die stamped on them but as one often does not take his tackle box with him while moving along a stream or lake shore the gauge on one's rod will be found more convenient.

Sun and Moon Affect Fishing.

The moot question of when and how to fish is again being argued on all sides throughout the State.

It is "what should be the sun's position when one is fishing" that is causing the most argument on the Lake of the Ozarks. Many anglers say "fishing in the sun" is as much a matter of mere belief as "fishing in the moon." Strange as it may seem to anglers in general, fishermen who consider both the sun and moon have been proving their points.

Dr. John R. Ellison of Eldon is a firm believer that one should fish with the sun to one's back. Water fished with one's back to the sun is always more productive than water fished against the sun, he affirms. During the last few weeks he has convinced many skeptics. The rule applies to both fly and bait rod fishermen and to cane pole anglers as well, the doctor says.

There are half a dozen or more "old fishermen's" calendars being published for the enlightenment of anglers as to when the best time to fish. All of these guides have as their basis of computing the best fishing days the consideration of moon phases. "Fishing in the moon" is the common term for fishing with these guides.

Recent tests have shown that regardless of the old adage that "the best time to fish is when you have the time" fishing has been best when the moon was right. The darker the moon phase the better the fishing. A representative South Central Missouri fly fishing stream was whipped every day for more than a month with fish responding best when the moon was darkest.

On the basis of moon phases fishing this week would be best on July 24, 25, good on the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh and fair on the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth.

Good Quail Crop in Sight.

Bobwhite quail throughout the State have fared very well during the present breeding season, reports would indicate. Dry weather is beneficial to young quail providing there is ample dew which provides the normal water supply for young birds.

The quail shooting season does not open until Nov. 10.

Sportsmen in Atchison County recently saved the 4000-acre leased game refuge and game farm near Rockport by waging a successful license sales campaign. When the game and fish department's revenue began declining rapidly and other game refuges were being closed, sportsmen in Atchison County pledged enough licenses to more than provide for the continuance of the refuge and game farm.

This refuge is the only one on which a keeper is now being maintained.

The Most Desirable Bait.

THESE are dog days for most fishermen.

Fishing conditions have been holding up to normal for this season throughout Missouri, anglers report, but the bass are not hitting artificial lures with any degree of satisfaction. Waters are clear and in some instances low, creating situations which can be very perplexing to fishermen.

Minnows appear to be the most desirable bait now for game fish. Crayfish also are effective. Artificial lures that have been killing fish on stream and lake recently have been red and white flies and plugs and under the proper condition, dry flies. Where the water is abnormally clear, however, best bets are deep running lures and baits.

On hot days the big game fish prefer to lie in some secluded hole generally close to the bank and under willows. They are not easily coaxed to the surface to take a dry fly excepting in late afternoon and early evening.

Lake fishermen report that trolling has been the most effective means of killing fish lately.

Although there are many inexpensive lures, lines and other tackle, being offered to anglers at this time, sportsmen are rapidly learning that cheap tackle can be expensive. Veteran anglers frown upon cheap equipment.

Cheap, low poundage test line can be very expensive if it breaks when an attempt is being made to retrieve a fouled lure or a hooked fish. Many lines that are strong enough to hold a good-sized fish snap asunder when the panicky tyro underestimates his strength while trying to yank a fouled line from a weed bed or brush pile.

Fish Must Be Lured.

LURES which show a lot of flash on a display counter may not be so appealing to a fish as it is to the fisherman. A good lure has a balance and usually contains construction features which make for easy casting and retrieving. These features often cannot be easily incorporated in lures except with good workmanship.

Good tackle need not be expensive in either its first cost or upkeep if common sense is used in selecting lures, veteran anglers say. They recommend a half dozen standard dry or wet fly patterns for the fly-rod user and three or four standard lures for the bait-rod wielders. The fly fisherman can get by with a simple, low-cost reel, but needs a good rod and line, while the bait caster should have as good a multiple-action reel and line as he can afford, they say.

Sportsmen visiting the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia (Aug. 12 to 19) will again have an official meeting place. Wilbur Buford, State Game and Fish Commissioner, this week announced the department had definitely decided to have an exhibit at the fair again this year and that preparations for it were now under way.

30-DAY SWIM EVENT BEGINS NEXT SUNDAY

Promotors of the "swimathon," said to be the first event of its kind in the United States, if not the world, are busily engaged in working out the details in connection with the opening of the event next Sunday at Creve Coeur Lake.

As has been told, 12 to 15 teams, six men on a team, will engage in an endurance swim over a period of 30 days. Each team must be represented in the water 24 hours a day, according to the rules announced by the promoters and failure in this respect will cause the offending team to be eliminated.

Course at a Beach.

The swimmers will perform on a course marked off in front of Creve Coeur Lake Beach. The team that completes the most laps—250 yards to a lap—during the 30 days will be adjudged the winner. Spectators may watch their efforts for 25 cents on Saturdays and Sundays, and 10 cents on week days. Bleachers will be constructed on the beach and also on a float which is to be built around the outside of the course.

Swimmers will be required to take a physical examination before entering the water. A temporary hospital will be erected on the grounds, as will sleeping quarters and an eating establishment for competitors.

Two Races for Girls.

Three teams composed of girls will compete in a six-day race over the same course, also starting next Sunday. Another six-day race for girls will be held during the concluding six days of the men's event. The girls' teams will not be represented in the water 24 hours a day; they will be out of the water between 1 a. m. and 7 a. m. The promoters have announced that girls' teams from the Westborough Country Club, Y. W. C. A. and the Marquette Pool will compete in the girls' races.

Life guards will be on duty 24 hours a day. These will be Wendell Wishon, Harry Thuner and John Morrison of Washington U., and George "Chubby" Hook of the Missouri A. A.

Entries for the men's swimathon are still being received at the swimathon headquarters, Rumsey Building, 1906 Pine street. A. J. Shepard of Brooklyn is heading the promotion of the event.

Outfielder Allows Three Hits.

Como Cotelle, regular outfielder with Davenport, can also pitch. He pitched a full game against Springfield and allowed but three hits.

News of People From St. Louis At Resorts on The North Shore

Mrs. Nelson B. Gatch and Children Newest Arrivals At Swampscott — Cape Ann Colony Growing.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 22.—The newest arrivals on the North Shore this week were Mrs. Nelson B. Gatch of St. Louis and her four young children, who reached the New Ocean House in Swampscott Thursday, and are here for the remainder of the season. Mr. Gatch will arrive in another week to be with them. They are joining Mr. Gatch's father, Elias S. Gatch, his sister, Mrs. Lockwood Hill, and the latter's two children, Katherine and Stuart Gatch Hill, who have been at the New Ocean House for about two weeks. Calvin F. Gatch arrived there also last week, but is making only a brief stay. This is Mrs. Hill's first season on the North Shore of Massachusetts. They have the Mayflower cottage at the hotel, looking directly on the ocean front.

Mrs. Hill has spent almost every day since her arrival wandering around the quaint and historic towns which adjoin Swampscott, particularly Marblehead, with its narrow, crooked streets, and Salem. Last Sunday night she motored with a party of friends to Ipswich to inspect the old Burnham house, one of the earliest landmarks on the North Shore. Young Miss Katherine Hill and her brother, Stuart, have entered into all the activities of the young people in Swampscott, and the latter was a guest at a dinner and dance given a few nights ago at the New Ocean House in honor of Miss Dorothy Clough of Marblehead. Their father, Lockwood Hill, is expected to arrive in Swampscott about the first of August, and will remain with them until they all leave for St. Louis after Labor Day.

Mrs. Sidney Maestre is expected soon from St. Louis and will be at the New Ocean House for an extended stay.

Farther along the North Shore, at the tip of Cape Ann, the St. Louis colony is increasing with constant new arrivals. Mr. and Mrs. William L. R. Gifford have opened their summer home at Riverdale, near the famous Annisquam Willows, and are settled there for the season, and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Harrison are established not far away on Arlington street. They have a small white story-and-a-half cottage near the roadside, almost hidden from view by tall old trees.

W. Scott Hancock, with his daughters, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Deane, and his son, Walker Hancock, has opened his summer home at Lanesville, near Annisquam. Mr. and Mrs. Allan Preston Gamble of St. Louis will be in the Ames cottage at Bay View, which is not far away. Miss Louise French, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley French, of St. Louis, has arrived in Annisquam with Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Hayden, with whom she motored from Connecticut. She is staying with the Haydens at their home on the River road in Annisquam, as her parents are not here at their summer place this season. They expect to motor to Annisquam soon, however, and will take their daughter back with them to St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Flad of St. Louis have arrived at the Hawthorne Inn in East Gloucester, where they always spend the summer, and are enjoying daily drives around Gloucester and Cape Ann. Miss Alice Coit Day is expected soon from St. Louis and will be at the Moorland Hotel at Bass Rocks, farther along the shore.

Miss Helen Davis To Be Wed Sept. 11

MISS HELEN ELIZABETH DAVIS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis, 238 West Washington avenue, Kirkwood, has chosen Monday, Sept. 11, as the date of her marriage to John Bryant Rinehart Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Rinehart of Webster Groves. The date will be the anniversary of her parents' marriage.

The ceremony will take place at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon at Grace Episcopal Church, Kirkwood, with the Rev. Dr. Robert O. Kevin officiating.

Miss Davis will have as her maid of honor Miss Ann Armstrong and the bridesmaids will be Miss Betty Greenland and Miss Lucille Tralles. Mr. Rhinehart will have as his best man John W. Davis Jr., a brother of the bride. The groomsmen will be Robert Davis, another brother of the bride, Crombie Buckner and Robert Sexton of St. Louis.

Several parties have been arranged for Miss Davis and her fiance. The first will be a tea Saturday afternoon, Aug. 5, with Mrs. Thomas P. O'Malley, 125 Jewel avenue, Kirkwood, as the hostess. Mrs. O'Malley will be assisted by Mrs. Leone Conover.

Farther along the North Shore, at the tip of Cape Ann, the St. Louis colony is increasing with constant new arrivals. Mr. and Mrs. William L. R. Gifford have opened their summer home at Riverdale, near the famous Annisquam Willows, and are settled there for the season, and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Harrison are established not far away on Arlington street. They have a small white story-and-a-half cottage near the roadside, almost hidden from view by tall old trees.

W. Scott Hancock, with his daughters, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Deane, and his son, Walker Hancock, has opened his summer home at Lanesville, near Annisquam. Mr. and Mrs. Allan Preston Gamble of St. Louis will be in the Ames cottage at Bay View, which is not far away. Miss Louise French, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley French, of St. Louis, has arrived in Annisquam with Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Hayden, with whom she motored from Connecticut. She is staying with the Haydens at their home on the River road in Annisquam, as her parents are not here at their summer place this season. They expect to motor to Annisquam soon, however, and will take their daughter back with them to St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Flad of St. Louis have arrived at the Hawthorne Inn in East Gloucester, where they always spend the summer, and are enjoying daily drives around Gloucester and Cape Ann. Miss Alice Coit Day is expected soon from St. Louis and will be at the Moorland Hotel at Bass Rocks, farther along the shore.

Miss Helen Davis To Be Wed Sept. 11

MISS HELEN ELIZABETH DAVIS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis, 238 West Washington avenue, Kirkwood, has chosen Monday, Sept. 11, as the date of her marriage to John Bryant Rinehart Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Rinehart of Webster Groves. The date will be the anniversary of her parents' marriage.

The ceremony will take place at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon at Grace Episcopal Church, Kirkwood, with the Rev. Dr. Robert O. Kevin officiating.

Miss Davis will have as her maid of honor Miss Ann Armstrong and the bridesmaids will be Miss Betty Greenland and Miss Lucille Tralles. Mr. Rhinehart will have as his best man John W. Davis Jr., a brother of the bride. The groomsmen will be Robert Davis, another brother of the bride, Crombie Buckner and Robert Sexton of St. Louis.

Several parties have been arranged for Miss Davis and her fiance. The first will be a tea Saturday afternoon, Aug. 5, with Mrs. Thomas P. O'M:‥v, 125 Jewel avenue, Kirkwood, as the hostess. Mrs. O'Malley will be assisted by Mrs. Leone Conover.

MRS. LEO J. ERLER and her daughters, Frances and Mary Elizabeth, who, with Mr. Erler, have recently returned to St. Louis from Tampa, Fla., and are occupying the William O. Schock home. Mrs. Erler was Miss Frances Smith.

Notes of St. Louisans At Rye Beach, N. H.

RYE BEACH, N. H., July 22.

THE season at Rye Beach, although getting away to a slow start, is now well advanced and indications point to many social events in August.

St. Louisans who have been at Rye Beach the past several seasons will be interested to know that Appletree cottage, which in 1931 and 1932 was the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Elzey G. Burkham, this season is being occupied by James Roosevelt, son of the President. Mr. Roosevelt and his family originally leased the estate of Mrs. John W. Staley of Detroit at Little Boars Head, but fire damaged the place so that it was not habitable the remainder of the season.

Mrs. George L. Allen of St. Louis, her daughter, Miss Mary Allen, and her sons, Samuel and Wayman McCreery Allen, were among the early season arrivals here and are at their beautiful residence on Central road.

Mrs. John B. Shapleigh and her daughter, Miss Margaret Shapleigh of St. Louis, are passing the summer at the Stoneleigh Manor.

Dr. and Mrs. Harvey G. Mudd of St. Louis have arrived at the Farragut House.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. Papin of St. Louis are at their summer home on Central road.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Lansing Ray of St. Louis are at their summer home on the Sea road.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Generelly of St. Louis are again at the Beach Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Akin of St. Louis are expected to arrive soon at the Stoneleigh Manor.

This resort is again the summer home for two former New England Governors. Former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts and ex-Gov. Huntley N. Spaulding of New Hampshire are occupying adjoining estates at Little Boars Head.

Ewing Hill of New York, formerly of St. Louis, is at his home, Green Gables.

Dr. C. E. Eimer to Wed

THE home of Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Towner Senseney, 4555 Pershing avenue, will be the scene of a wedding Wednesday at noon, when Miss Agnes Stanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Stanley, Chester, Ill., becomes the bride of Dr. Charles E. Eimer of St. Louis, son of Charles G. Eimer of Belleville, Ill. Dr. Eimer is Dr. Senseney's partner.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Rufus D. S. Putney in the presence of the immediate families. About 75 guests have been invited to a reception following.

Unusual decorations of ripe summer wheat and colorful mid-summer flowers will be used throughout the house. The mantel ledge in the living room where the wedding party is to stand, will be concealed beneath a wide ruching of yellow wheat sheaves interspersed with poppies, cornflowers, larkspur and daisies. The room will be illuminated by the glow from honey-colored candles. Similar decorations will predominate in the dining room. The reception table will be arranged with a central decoration of wheat and flowers, and will be lighted by honey-tinted tapers.

The bride is a sister of Mrs. Em

Night Club Party Guests Enter Garden On a Slide

Novel Entertainment Given at Huntleigh Village by Mrs. Adalbert von Gontard, in Honor of Husband's Birthday.

MORE than 100 guests dined and danced at "Adie's Night Club," a gay party given Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adalbert Von Gontard in Huntleigh Village. It was planned by Mrs. Von Gontard in honor of her husband, who celebrated his birthday that day, and derived its title from an abbreviation of his first name. Among the guests was Mr. Von Gontard's brother, Baron Gert Von Gontard, who recently arrived from Germany for a visit and later will go to California to visit another brother.

After hors d'oeuvres had been served at the house, the guests were ushered through the dining room to the garden steps, where the night club sign was posted over closed doors. These doors, when opened, revealed a slide, down which the guests were compelled to slide in pairs to dinner. The lawn was transformed into a German garden with trellises silhouetted against the shrubbery. Hundreds of Japanese lanterns strung in the trees furnished the illumination.

James H. Platt was master of ceremonies, and the entertainment ranged from a song by the three young children of the host and hostess in Tyrolean costume, to music by professionals. There were banjo and xylophone solos and songs by a costumed orchestra. The climax was reached with the appearance of several attendants bearing an enormous birthday cake on a white paper-covered table, from beneath which a dancing girl emerged.

A dance floor was built in the center of the garden with a stand for the orchestra, over which appeared the painted figures of German musicians. Small tables were arranged about for the dinner which was served from steam tables. Red checked table cloths were used and on each table were sticks on which various kinds of pretzels were interlaced.

Miss Eleanor Knapp Wed to J. S. Newhouse

THE marriage of Miss Eleanor Knapp, 4619 Pershing avenue, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gilmore Knapp, and John S. Newhouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Newhouse of Hutton Park, West Orange, N. J., took place quietly at 6 o'clock last night at the home of the bride. The guests were limited to the immediate families. The Rev. Thomas M. Knapp, S. J., a cousin of the bride, performed the ceremony.

Miss Louise Knapp, sister of the bride, who has been living in New York, arrived Thursday to attend. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Newhouse were unable to be present because of his recent illness.

Following a honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. John Newhouse will live in St. Louis.

The bride is a member of an old and prominent St. Louis family, and is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blackwell Whittemore. She is a graduate of Mary Institute and made her debut here several years ago. Mr. Newhouse is a brother of Mrs. J. Lindsay Franciscus.

Janet Holliday Wear Gives Wedding Plans

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.

MISS JANET HOLLIDAY WEAR, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Holliday Wear of St. Louis, has announced partial plans for her wedding to William Farnam Sanford of New York, son of Dr. and Mrs. Leonard C. Sanford of New Haven, Conn. The ceremony will take place Sept. 30 in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church in Chestnut Hill, Pa. The Rev. Malcolm Endicott Peabody, rector, will officiate at the wedding, which will be followed by a breakfast for the families and close friends at Stonymeadows, the home of Miss Wear's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walker Wear, with whom she has made her home since the death of her parents.

Miss Wear is a graduate of Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and made her debut the season of 1929-30. She is a member of the Junior League. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. James H. Let MAVIS TALCUM Give You Summer Comfort

HERE is one of the greatest stories ever told. In two minutes time you can be assured of comfort throughout all the day or evening. The most eminent American authority on the effect of heat upon the human skin, first found this amazing benefit of Mavis Talcum. Now increasing thousands have verified his findings by the test of personal experience.

Do This For Comfort

For years Mavis has been accepted as the world's finest talcum powder. More men and women employ it than any other, by far. They have used it in the accepted way, to allay friction and irritation, to dust the body here and there, by men after shaving. Now comes wider usefulness. To guard against summer heat do this:

After your daily bath, widen its use, sprinkle your whole body, from head to heels with soothing, delightful Mavis. Cover your skin thoroughly. Lay it on thick. Then dress, and you may forget hot weather.

Body Heat Is Lessened

This is what modern science found. When Mavis Talcum is used this way, skin temperature is measurably reduced. The effect lasts for hours. All day comfort. For the special processing of Mavis assures a lasting, protecting film between your skin and summer heat. The ability of the skin to throw off excess heat increases. The protecting film guards against outside heat. No effect other than good can follow the constant use of Mavis, for the normal functioning of the skin is not interfered with.

A trial of Mavis Talcum used this way for a single day will prove all this to you.

Mavis Talcum is sold in three convenient sizes 25c • 50c • $1.00

Don't clog your pores with cheap Talcum. Your body deserves the best.

Leppert-Roos August Sale

BEGINS TOMORROW

A Few Sidelights on the SALE

FURS PURCHASED BELOW NORMAL COST

The tremendous demand for cheap furs has enabled our buyers to purchase thousands of dollars' worth of the finest peltries (the only kind that Leppert-Roos handles) at prices far below their actual worth. The coats, jacquettes and scarfs to be offered during our August Sale were made from these skins, hence are the finest quality obtainable anywhere. Yet these furs are comparatively much lower in price than cheaper furs. This is because while demand for fine furs decreased and prices went down, the stampede to cheaper quality forced prices up on skins of lower grade.

STILL DEPENDABLE

All during the depression we consistently refused to jeopardize our good name by selling furs of questionable quality. We have, instead, made greater efforts than ever to maintain our quality and lower our prices. We feel that we have succeeded and our forthcoming August Sale is the crowning achievement in this success. The finest furs from all parts of the world, the greatest selection of original and interpretative style in St. Louis, the widest selection of sizes and kinds of fur—these are important features of our August Sale. But above all in importance we hold a single claim—that Leppert-Roos furs are still dependable.

PRICES BELOW THE PRESENT MARKET

Fur prices have gone up approximately 25%, but prices on Leppert-Roos furs have remained the same. This saving, plus the 20% reduction for the August Sale, plus the original below-normal cost, offer you a total savings of at least 50% off present market prices.

Use Mercolized Wax For Natural Skin Beauty
For a skin of enchanting loveliness, soft, smooth and beautiful, use pure Mercolized Wax. It helps Nature to discard the outer layer of surface skin, in tiny particles, gradually bringing into view the lovely skin beneath, which is beautifully clear and velvety-soft. Use Mercolized Wax regularly and you will never be annoyed by freckes, tan, sallowness or other blemishes. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. Powdered Saxolite reduces wrinkles and other age signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel, and use as an astringent. At all drug stores.

FUR PRICES RISE ON AVERAGE OF 40%
Women's Coats in the Fall Expected to Be 25 to 100% Higher Than Last Year.
Decrease in the Dollar Abroad Also Blamed—Men's Wear, Too, Will Cost More.
By Leased Wire from New York Bureau of Globe-Democrat.
New fur prices are soaring, and women's fur coats will have advanced in the Fall from 25 to as much as 100 per cent over a year ago, trade authorities here said yesterday. Fur-trimmed cloth coats also are expected to show substantial increases in price, owing to the rises in trimming peltries. Men's clothing also is likely to share in upward price revision, and suits, ties, socks, shirts and shoes will all cost more.
Leading retail and manufacturing furriers here said that the average advance in furs since January has been about 40 per cent. As compared with the first of the year, the price of Russian sables has gone up 100 per cent, mink 65, caracul 40, white fox 65 to 75, silver fox 35, broadtail 60 and Russian ermine 40 per cent. In the popular-price furs, Hudson seal has about doubled in price.
Inflationary tendencies, the decrease in the value of the dollar as measured in foreign currencies and the brisk demand for domestic furs from European countries were cited as making for the upswing in prices.
Fine Skins Limited.
"The end is not yet," one fur expert said, "for as the dollar declines further there must be a corresponding increase in the cost of imported furs. Foreign buyers, favored by sterling and franc exchange, have purchased domestic skins very liberally."
The supply of fine skins in the markets here was described as limited, with cheaper pelts, however, available in fairly liberal quantities.
Foreseeing the advances which developed, many retail merchants throughout the country placed larger advance orders than usual for furs for August sales. The consensus in the trade was that the levels to feature these events will be lower than for some time to come. Garment manufacturers have been paying advances of up to 40 per cent for the popular-price furs to be used on cloth coats for Fall.

MARIONETTE SHOWS ON CITY PLAYGROUNDS

Children Make Puppets and Properties for Fairy Plays.

Puppet shows have been revived as a form of entertainment on the public school playgrounds this summer.

A long schedule has been arranged and within the next four weeks practically all of the 46 playgrounds will present a puppet show. Some began last week. The children have charge of the entire production, including the making of stage properties and the marionettes.

In the course of the summer almost all of the standard fairy-tale stories will be produced in these shows. The list includes "Goldilocks and the Three Bears," "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Snow White and the Dwarfs," "Hansel and Gretel" and "Cinderella."

Early in the summer each playground received shipments of papier mache, which was kneaded into condition for the modeling of puppet heads. The heads were painted and coiffures were attached. The girls then designed and sewed their costumes. The shows are under the direction of Viola Holland, Hallie Wharton and Margaret Probasco. The schedule of the shows follows:

July 25—Sherman, 3:30 p. m., "Jack and the Bean Stalk"; Woodward, 7:45 p. m., "Rumpelstiltskin."

July 26—Walnut Park, 8 p. m., "The Wishing Fairy"; Lindenwood, 8 p. m., "The Three Wishes"; Clinton, 7:45 p. m., "Jack and the Bean Stalk."

July 28—Cote Brilliante, 8 p. m., "Nursery Rhyme Fantasy"; Buder, 3 p. m., "The Tinder Box"; Columbia, 3:30 p. m., "Snow White and the Dwarfs"; Mullanphy, 7:30 p. m., "Puss in Boots"; Wyman, 7:45 p. m., "Rumpelstiltskin," "Little Black Sambo."

Aug. 1—Ashland, 7 p. m., "Jack and the Bean Stalk"; Walbridge, 7:45 p. m., "Jack and the Bean Stalk"; Mason, 7:45 p. m., "Cinderella."

Aug. 2—Emerson, 2:30 p. m., "Little Black Sambo."

Aug. 3—Mark Twain, 8 p. m., "Rumpelstiltskin."

Aug. 4—Laclede, 8 p. m., "Jack and the Bean Stalk."

Aug. 8—Blewett, 3:45 p. m., "The Snow Queen"; Arlington, 3 p. m., "Goldilocks and the Three Bears."

Aug. 10—Hodgen, 7:30 p. m., "Hansel and Gretel," "The Mad Tea Party."

Aug. 11—Scullin, 4 p. m., "Cinderella"; Oak Hill, 7:30 p. m., "Snow White and the Dwarfs."

Aug. 15—Gundlach, 8 p. m., "Hansel and Gretel"; Eliot, 7:45 p. m., "The Scarecrow Who Wished for the Moon"; Shepard, 7:30 p. m., "The Frog Prince"; Clay, 3:30 p. m., "Jack and the Bean Stalk."

Aug. 16—Fanning, 8 p. m., "Prince Darling."

Aug. 18—Cupples, 3:45 p. m., "Rumpelstiltskin"; Fremont, 7:45 p. m., "Rapunzel"; Longfellow, 3:30 p. m., "The Three Bears."

Aug. 22—Busch, 3 p. m., "Little Black Sambo"; Froebel, 3:30 p. m., "Jack and the Bean Stalk."

BACTERIOLOGISTS TO STUDY ANIMAL LIFE IN ARCTIC

They Will Seek Method of Adjusting Hunting Seasons for Sportsmen.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 22. —Arctic waste along the northwest shore of Hudson Bay will be the laboratory next month of a Minnesota scientist seeking solution of the problem of animal mortality.

Dr. R. G. Green, University of Minnesota bacteriologist, will lead an expedition to discover, if possible, a basis upon which wild life may be controlled and hunting seasons adjusted to preserve a supply of game for sportsmen.

With him will be his wife, also a bacteriologist, and W. J. Breckenridge, assistant curator of the University of Minnesota Museum. Dr. J. A. Allen, pathologist for the Province of Manitoba, is expected to join him at Winnipeg.

Specimens of wild life will be collected and at various points along the trip, autopsies will be performed and data accumulated for further study. The expedition will go as far north as Nonala, a small Eskimo village at the mouth of the Egg River.

'LEAVE TOWN' NOTE FOR PASTOR

Eldorado, Ill., Preacher Finds It in Bundle of Switches.

HARRISBURG, Ill., July 22.—A bundle of switches attached to which was a note saying: "Leave town—this means you, preacher," was found on the porch of the home of the Rev. J. P. Hughes, pastor of the Church of God at Eldorado.

The pastor in reporting the incident to the authorities here said he knew no reason why the warning was sent to him.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 22. — Neal J. Ross, State Securities Commissioner, today ordered Pennaluna & Co., of Wallace, Ida., to cease offering mining stocks for sale in Missouri. The company is not registered with the Missouri Securities Department, Ross said.

IN PARIS

sister of Miss Adele Hayes of St. Louis.

Mrs. Owen Aldis was hostess at a small tea earlier this week at which several St. Louisans were present, including Mrs. Neill A. McMillan, Mrs. Carl H. Langenberg and her mother, Mrs. L. Chauncey-Hamilton; Miss May Birkhead, Mrs. Nathaniel B. Ewing and Mrs. Walter K. Sturges.

Mrs. Neill A. McMillan of St. Louis has taken an apartment near Mrs. Nathaniel B. Ewing, at 83 Quai d'Orsay, where she will spend the summer, later leaving to take a cure either in France or in Germany. Mrs. Harry Potter of St. Louis, who arrived here with Mrs. McMillan about a month ago, has gone to Italy for a two months' study and painting trip and will rejoin Mrs. McMillan in Paris at the end of August.

Mrs. Eugene Ross McCarthy of St. Louis, accompanied by Miss Marjorie, Miss Carol and Miss Roblee McCarthy, arrived here from the Manhattan on June 26 and will spend the summer with Mme. Deletang at St. Symphorien, Indre et Loire, France.

Mrs. Birch O. Mahaffey, of St. Louis, is leaving for London on Monday and will sail for America the end of this month. With her are her daughters, Katherine and Adelaide, who have just completed studies at Mlle. Leboucherc's school, and Betsy and Dorothy Jane, who have been in school in Cannes, France, last winter.

Mrs. Mahaffey's sister, Mrs. I. D. Kelley, also of St. Louis, who occupies an apartment at the Meurice, may sail for home next week.

Mrs. Lawrence B. Pierce of St. Louis, who makes her home in Paris with her daughter, Mrs. Helen Breaker, suffered a fractured arm in a fall recently.

Mrs. Carl H. Langenberg is closing her apartment in the Quentin Bauchart on Saturday and will leave with her daughter, Miss Bonnie Langenberg, and her mother, Mrs. L. Chauncey-Hamilton, of Louisville, Ky., for the south of France, where they will embark for the Odyssey cruise. They will spend August on Lake Como and at the Lido in Venice, Italy, and will sail to join Mr. Langenberg in St. Louis in September. Miss Langenberg has finished school here.

Harry M. Pflager of St. Louis has arrived at Claridge's in London, where he will spend a few days.

The Fourth of July reception by the American Ambassador and Mrs. Jesse I. Strauss at their official residence in the Avenue d'Iena for Americans in Paris was one of the most brilliant and representative affairs seen here for some time. It was the first opportunity for the many Americans, resident or passing through Paris, to meet the new Ambassador, who arrived here only a few weeks ago.

Among the St. Louisans present were Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Dean Jay, Miss Zelina Thompson and her niece, Miss Violet Stanhope, Mrs. Neill A. McMillan and Mrs. Edward H. Miller and her children.

Miss Susanne Pfeffer of St. Louis has returned to Paris and is at 27 Avenue du Peupliers in the Villa Montmorency. She plans to leave on Friday for a trip to Switzerland and before her departure gave a tea having as her guests Stan Dardy, Charles Mangan, Lieut. Charles Bonesteel, Miss Call and Miss Jamieson.

Mrs. Edward H. Miller of St. Louis and her children, Edward, Robert, Martha and Dorothea, who have been residing at the Regina since their return from a tour of Italy, have returned to St. Louis. They sailed on board the Albert Ballin. Mrs. Miller spent the last year in Switzerland, where her children attended school.

She entertained at tea for Capt. Charles Vical and his daughter, also of St. Louis, who arrived here on Sunday. The latter will pass the summer here.

Miss Elizabeth Russe of St. Louis arrived in Paris a few days ago with her Smith College classmates, Miss Barbara and Miss Marion Kelsey and Miss Mary Morrison. They will leave Paris in two weeks for a month's tour through Brittany. Miss Russe attended school in Madrid last winter.

John M. Robertson of St. Louis arrived on the Continent June 26 after crossing on the Manhattan.

Arthur Grindon of St. Louis is leaving Paris shortly to visit friends in Vichy.

39 PCT. OF CITIES REPORT GAIN IN REALTY MARKET

Activity Less in 34 Pct. and About That of Last Year in 27 Pct., National Survey Shows.

PRICES GENERALLY LOWER, HOWEVER

Shortage of Dwellings Noted in One-Third of Towns of More Than 500,000 Population.

The semi-annual survey by the National Association of Real Estate Boards tabulates reports from member boards in various cities of the country. The current study covers 245 cities. Of the 245 cities, 39 per cent report a more active real estate market than that of last year at this time; 34 per cent report a less active market, 27 per cent state that activity is approximately on last year's level.

The February survey of this year showed 65 per cent of the cities with a market less active than the previous year, 24 per cent in a stationary condition, and 11 per cent with increased activity. The low of the four-year depression period was reached in July of 1932, when 69 per cent of the cities reporting showed declining activity and 9 per cent increased activity.

The recent gain is most general in the East South Central section, where 67 per cent of the cities show a more active market. In the West South Central section 53 per cent of the cities show an up movement; in the South Atlantic section, 50 per cent; in the Pacific section 55 per cent. The strongest pick-up so far is in the group of cities of between 200,000 and 500,000 population, of which 55 per cent report rising activity.

Prices Generally Lower.

Prices still are lower than those of last year in 78 per cent of the cities reporting. They are higher in 3 per cent and approximately on last year's level in 19 per cent. The West South Central section shows the most advanced pick-up, with 20 per cent of the cities here reporting higher prices. Cities between 200,000 and 500,000 population constitute the group registering the greatest gain. Of these, 10 per cent of the cities feel the change in price level upward.

In 90 per cent of the cities reporting there is still a shortage of money for real estate mortgage loans. In cities of more than 500,000 population 80 per cent report that loans are seeking capital. In cities of between 200,000 and 500,000 population, 100 per cent report loans seeking capital.

In 24 per cent of the cities rates on real estate mortgages are rising; in 65 per cent the rate holds steady; in 11 per cent it is falling. The east south central section has the steadiest situation, with 100 per cent of the cities reporting stabilized rates.

Dwellings More in Demand.

In 33 per cent of the cities of more than 500,000 population there is a shortage in single family dwellings, the survey says. Not one of the cities in this group showed such a shortage six months ago. An undersupply of one-family houses is indicated in 12 per cent of all the cities. This is 5 per cent more cities than showed such a situation in February. Many cities report that with return to normal buying power they would have a shortage of dwellings.

Rents have not yet followed the up trend of commodity prices. They are lower than last year's in a majorit yof cities reporting.

The most general movement for increased rents is reported in the cities of less than 25,000 population.

Outlying business sections have been harder hit than central business in the recession of use brought by the depression both to business and to office buildings, says the report.

In the subdivision market, 18 of the cities show a condition approximately the same as last year; 82 per cent report a less active market. But several cities report a more active demand for suburban acreage.

NEGOTIATES STORE LEASE TO PAINT AND VARNISH FIRM

Mullin-Walters Realty Co., Inc., has concluded negotiations for a long term lease to the Morris Paint & Varnish Co. on the ground floor of the building at 2718-20 Gravois. The Morris Paint & Varnish Co. will open this store about Aug. 15 with a complete line of wall paper, paints and varnishes. Leo Sophir is president of the company.

The lease was made for the account of A. H. Enger and Paul E. Pautler. Both parties in this transaction were represented by the Mullin-Walters Realty Co., Inc.

39 PCT. OF CITIES REPORT GAIN IN REALTY MARKET

Activity Less in 34 Pct. and About That of Last Year in 27 Pct., National Survey Shows.

Shortage of Dwellings Noted in One-Third of Towns of More Than 500,000 Population.

The semi-annual survey by the National Association of Real Estate Boards tabulates reports from member boards in various cities of the country. The current study covers 245 cities. Of the 245 cities, 39 per cent report a more active real estate market than that of last year at this time; 34 per cent report a less active market, 27 per cent state that activity is approximately on last year's level.

The February survey of this year showed 65 per cent of the cities with a market less active than the previous year, 24 per cent in a stationary condition, and 11 per cent with increased activity. The low of the four-year depression period was reached in July of 1932, when 69 per cent of the cities reporting showed declining activity and 9 per cent increased activity.

The recent gain is most general in the East South Central section, where 67 per cent of the cities show a more active market. In the West South Central section 53 per cent of the cities show an up movement; in the South Atlantic section, 50 per cent; in the Pacific section 55 per cent. The strongest pick-up so far is in the group of cities of between 200,000 and 500,000 population, of which 55 per cent report rising activity.

Prices Generally Lower.

Prices still are lower than those of last year in 78 per cent of the cities reporting. They are higher in 3 per cent and approximately on last year's level in 19 per cent. The West South Central section shows the most advanced pick-up, with 20 per cent of the cities here reporting higher prices. Cities between 200,000 and 500,000 population constitute the group registering the greatest gain. Of these, 10 per cent of the cities feel the change in price level upward.

In 90 per cent of the cities reporting there is still a shortage of money for real estate mortgage loans. In cities of more than 500,000 population 80 per cent report that loans are seeking capital. In cities of between 200,000 and 500,000 population, 100 per cent report loans seeking capital.

In 24 per cent of the cities rates on real estate mortgages are rising; in 65 per cent the rate holds steady; in 11 per cent it is falling. The east south central section has the steadiest situation, with 100 per cent of the cities reporting stabilized rates.

Dwellings More in Demand.

In 33 per cent of the cities of more than 500,000 population there is a shortage in single family dwellings, the survey says. Not one of the cities in this group showed such a shortage six months ago. An undersupply of one-family houses is indicated in 12 per cent of all the cities. This is 5 per cent more cities than showed such a situation in February. Many cities report that with return to normal buying power they would have a shortage of dwellings.

Rents have not yet followed the up trend of commodity prices. They are lower than last year's in a majorit yof cities reporting.

The most general movement for increased rents is reported in the cities of less than 25,000 population.

Outlying business sections have been harder hit than central business in the recession of use brought by the depression both to business and to office buildings, says the report.

In the subdivision market, 18 of the cities show a condition approximately the same as last year; 82 per cent report a less active market. But several cities report a more active demand for suburban acreage.

ST. LOUIS THEATER SOLD TO BONDHOLDERS

House Expected to Be Opened in the Fall With First-Run Movies.

The St. Louis Theater, Grand and Delmar boulevards, was sold at foreclosure yesterday at the Real Estate Exchange to the holders of $710,000 in second mortgage bonds. They submitted the nominal bid of $5000. The property was sold subject to a first mortgage of $620,000, held by the estate of David Sommers.

The second mortgage was held by Metropolitan Theaters Corporation, the owners of which are the Koplar brothers, Harry, Sam and Nat, Emil Strauss and the Sommers estate. Harry Koplar has announced the theater will be opened in the fall as a first-run movie house. It has been closed since January.

The St. Louis, with 4090 seats, was built by the Koplar Co. for Metropolitan Theaters Corporation in 1925. It was leased, and later sold, to the Orpheum Theater Co., a subsidiary of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, which is in receivership.

FIRST UNFAVORABLE TRADE BALANCE SINCE AUGUST, 1931

Six Months of 1933 Have $77,544,000 Advantage With June Falling Short.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The first unfavorable trade balance since August, 1931, was shown today in export and import figures for June announced by the Department of Commerce. Exports amounted to $119,900,000, while imports amounted to $122,000,000.

In August, 1931, there was an excess of imports of $1,871,000.

For the six months ending with June this country had a favorable trade balance of $77,544,000 as compared with $93,226,000 in the same six months of last year.

In the 1933 period exports totaled $669,475,000 and imports amounted to $591,931,000.

The United States lost $3,244,000 in gold in June, having exported $4,380,000 and imported $1,136,000.

It gained, however, $15,129,000 of silver, importing $15,472,000 and exporting $343,000.

The change in trade conditions was shown in several lines. Compared with May, hides and skins were imported in 33 per cent greater quantity with an increase of 54 per cent in value, while cocoa was up 22 per cent in quantity and 33 per cent in value.

Raw cotton was up 12½ per cent in quantity and 82 per cent in value, pulpwood 102 and 140, wood pulp 55 and 52, unfinished wool 334 and 278, raw silk 21 and 45, copper 11 and 30, tin 19 and 50, aluminum 133 and 145, burlaps 13 and 31.

On the other side of the ledger sugar from foreign countries was off 7 per cent in quantity and 3 per cent in value, newsprint 9 and 12, cotton cloth 20 and 19.

FARM LAND CREDITORS TOLD TO BE PATIENT

Morgenthau Responds to Appeal From Farmer About "Steady" Foreclosures.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Acting under instructions by President Roosevelt, Henry Morgenthau Jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration, today urged patience by farm mortgage holders contemplating court action to begin dispossessing farmers in default on mortgages covering their homes.

He renewed the appeal made by the President on May 12 when the farm mortgage bill was signed making $2,000,000,000 available for refinancing farm mortgages and $200,000,000 for special loans to farmers faced by foreclosure.

Already farmers in serious financial straits have applied for loans of more than $100,000,000 from the latter fund, administered by representatives of the Land Bank Commissioner through each of the 12 Federal land banks.

It was reported, however, that refinancing of mortgages under the larger plan is proceeding slowly, but mortgage holders, looking for financial improvement of farmers, are generally hoping that they will soon receive full payment of their due and over-due claims.

It was also reported that as a result of this changed outlook, mortgage holders are showing a decided unwillingness to scale down their debt claims.

Loans from the smaller fund, which are in great demand, can be made on second mortgages on land or on other property up to 75 per cent of the appraised value of the farmer's possessions after deducting the amount of the first mortgage and other prior liens.

Mortgage Holders Want 100 Pct.

This is essential in most cases before mortgage refinancing will be possible under the act, which limits the amount the Government can pay for first mortgages to 50 per cent of the appraised normal value of the land and 20 per cent of the insured permanent improvements. Many of the mortgages, due to the depreciation in land values, now represent a sum in excess of the amount which could be offered them for their claim under the appraisal limitation.

They can be made for sums up to $5000 to farmers facing foreclosure or whose farms have been foreclosed but who still have a period for redeeming their property.

Some Farmers Shut Out.

In many cases, however, it has been found that farmers facing foreclosure have virtually no remaining equity in either land or chattels and that they are not eligible for any loan, however small. The loans can be made for 13 years with no instalments on the principle to be paid during the first three and with interest at 5 per cent.

Morgenthau's appeal was made after John H. Bosch of Willmar, Minn., a vice-president of the National Farmers' Holiday Association, telegraphed President Roosevelt that foreclosures of farms by banks and insurance companies in the Central Northwest is proceeding steadily and that many farmers have lost their homes recently.

Morgenthau, replying to Bosch, said: "The President hopes that holders of mortgages and other claims against farmers will not press foreclosure at this time, but will give farmers additional opportunity to obtain refinancing."

C. M. M'DONALD CO. RENTS GARAGE AT OLIVE AND EWING

C. M. McDonald Real Estate Co. reports renting the fireproof garage in the Castle Ballroom Annex at Olive and Ewing to Vaughts' Garage, formerly at 210 North Ewing. Vaughts' feature 24-hour service, do general repairing and handle accessories.

KOPMAN GROCERY CO. TO ERECT NEW STORE

Purchases Site for Building on Clayton Road, Near Big Bend Blvd.

The Kopman Grocery Co. has purchased 80x140 feet of ground on the north side of Clayton road, 130 feet west of Concordia avenue, and 500 feet east of Big Bend boulevard. Henry R. Weisels handled the negotiations for the Kopman concern. M. H. Rodemyer & Co. represented the seller, Irma N. Binsharler.

The grocery company will improve the site with a modernistic one-story building, 60x100 feet, with drive-in and parking facilities. The store, which will be equipped with the latest in air conditioning, will include a modern bakery, delicatessen and fish department. There will be special cork enclosed chilled rooms for fresh vegetables and fruits, and delivery service. The meat department will be patterned after the most approved in the country. Night and day service is contemplated.

Contracts will be let within a few days for this building, which will be occupied entirely by the Kopman Grocery Co., which has been at 1017 Big Bend road, near Clayton road, for the last 10 years. The rapidly increasing business of the company has necessitated the erection of the proposed building. The Kopman Co. will invest about $50,000 in the cost of the lot and building.

LIBERTY FOUNDRY CO. BUYS ASSETS OF LANGENBERG CO.

Purchase of assets of the Langenberg Manufacturing Co., 4525 North Euclid avenue, by the Liberty Foundry Co., was announced yesterday by William T. Mellow, vice-president of the Liberty company.

The purchase was made from John T. Hicks, lawyer, receiver for the Langenberg company since April 5, 1931. It includes good will, business, machinery and other assets, except the plant on Euclid. The price is understood to have been about $25,000.

The purchaser will move the machinery to its factory at 5000 South Thirty-eighth street to continue production of Front Rank steel furnaces, made by the Langenberg concern for 47 years. The Liberty company, of which Thomas Mellow is president, has a foundry at 7600 Vulcan street.

171 BUILDING PERMITS FROM JULY 1 TO 14

83 Issued for New Structures Here — Total Construction Cost $208,130.

A total of 171 building permits for an estimated construction cost of $208,130 have been issued in St. Louis for July 1 to 14, inclusive. There were 83 permits for new buildings estimated to cost $134,920, and 88 for alterations costing $73,210.

This compares favorably with July, 1932. Figures for the corresponding half month last year are not available, but for the entire month 355 permits for an estimated building cost of $390,053 were issued. Building activities for June, 1933, exceeded those of the corresponding month in 1932 for the first time this year.

BUNGALOW ON EXHIBIT IN DEPARTMENT STORE

Architectural Firm Co-Operates to Produce Model of Moderate-Price Home.

The firm of Maritz, Young & Dusard, architects, has co-operated with Stix, Baer & Fuller to produce a dwelling for a family of moderate means. There is a brick bungalow of the eighteenth century type on the street floor of the department store. It is a model of a six-room home. The cost, including architect's and builders' fees, would be $6500.

The little house has reception hall, living room, two bedrooms, bath, dining room, den and kitchen. It is equipped with lights, heat, ventilation, plumbing and refrigeration.

The furnishings could be bought for $4000, including draperies and floor coverings.

The living room walls, woodwork and ceiling are in one color—cobalt blue. In one of the bedrooms the canary colored woodwork and ceiling match, while the walls are white. The kitchen floor is covered with white linoleum that has a border design of red.

J. K. WALLACE BUYS TRACT NEXT TO PRESENT HOLDINGS

Albert T. Terry Son & Co., through Whitelaw Terry, has sold a tract of several acres to John K. Wallace of the Cupples Co. This property adjoins that which Wallace now owns and enlarges his present tract, which is in the vicinity of Lindbergh boulevard and Spoede road.

Wallace is building a home, and his brother-in-law, Chapin Newhard, is building a residence in the same community.

BUNGALOWS FOR SALE—Northwest

BRAND NEW
BUILT OF THE FINEST MATERIALS BOUGHT WHEN PRICES WERE LOWEST
4000 Marcus avenue is now practically completed.
Materials for this distinctive 5-room bungalow were purchased 90 days ago—when prices were at their lowest ebb and just before the rises started.
Hence the price $5950! (and how long will you be able to buy such a home at such a price?)
Shades, screens, fixtures, garage, etc., included—ready to move in.
You may find bungalows cheaper—but if you are looking for "sound construction" plus "ideal arrangement" and "fine finish," you MUST be interested in this home.
Builder on premises day and evening.

FINANCIAL NOTES

NEW YORK, July 22.—Unfavorable dividend changes last week dropped considerably in number from the average of recent weeks. According to the Standard Statistics Co. there were 17 adverse changes compared with 30 the week before. Favorable announcements numbered 14 against 22 in the previous week.

A seat on the New York Curb Exchange was reported sold today at $50,000, unchanged from the previous sale.

Stockholders of the National Distillers Products Corporation will vote Aug. 16 on a proposal to increase common shares to 829,587 shares from 629,587. If the increase is approved shareholders will receive subscription rights on terms to be determined later.

Stanolind Pipe Line Co., subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, has called for redemption Oct. 1 at 103 and interest its outstanding 5 per cent bonds due Oct. 1, 1942. At the end of 1932 approximately $11,204,500 of the issue was outstanding.

Municipal Financing scheduled for next week totals $7,169,168 compared with $25,624,847 for the past week, ehe "Daily Bond Buyer" announced today.

Tide Water Oil Co., a subsidiary of Tide Water Associated Oil, reports for the quarter ended June 30 net profit of $1,167,078, equal to 41 cents a common share compared with $1,151,300 or 41 cents a year ago.

LEAD, ZINC AND COPPER

Lead and zinc prices were nominally unchanged.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Metals nominally unchanged.

Youngstown Steel Summary.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 22.—Steel production in the Youngstown district will continue at about 67 per cent of capacity, making an average output for July of 65 per cent, the highest of any month since May, 1930, and the highest July since 1929.

Next week the mills here will distribute the largest pay in three years.

The burst of steel production has caused a shortage of iron in some instances, and open hearth furnace activity will be curtailed in some units until the blast furnaces output of iron catches up.

Coates, broker, said the transfer of stocks will be two shares of Big Missouri for one share of the new corporation.

The corporation is interested in properties in Nevada, Montana and British Columbia.

W. M. Archibald, vice-president and general manager of the consolidated mining and smelting company, will be among the directors of the new corporation.

LOSSES REDUCED LATE ON CURB EXCHANGE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Selling pressure lifted considerably on the curb exchange today and despite a few scattered weak spots, the rank and file absorbed offerings well, and early losses of 1 to more than 5 points were reduced at the close.

Selling in the alcohol shares was checked, most of the group working slightly higher in the final trading. Canadian Industrial Alcohol closed the gap of a 3-point loss and finished a net fraction higher. Schenley Distillers was up more than 2 while Distillers Corporation-Seagrams closed steady. Hiram Walker canceled all but a fraction of a 4-point drop.

Oils were mixed, Humble and Gulf Oil lost 3 points each but Standard Oil of Ohio gained 2, while Standard Oil of Indiana was slightly improved.

Transfers approximated 648,000 shares compared with 662,000 for last Saturday.

VALUE OF ZINC AND LEAD ORE SHIPMENTS BEST SINCE 1931

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., July 22.—Value of zinc and lead ore shipped from the Joplin district this week exceeded a quarter million dollars, the greatest in the tri-state area since the first week in 1931.

The zinc shipment was 5714 tons valued at $199,990, while 531 tons of lead brought $27,877, for a combined value of $227,867.

Prices remained unchanged despite drastic reductions this week in the stock and commodity markets, zinc bringing $35 a ton and lead selling from $50 to $55 a ton.

Purchase of zinc was reported at 6150 tons, while production slightly exceeded 5000 tons.

Boston Wool Market.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 22 (U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—Trading in wool started out very slowly this week, but picked up after the first few days, when several mills renewed buying. Moderate buying was fairly well distributed over the various grades of fleece and territory wools, while average combing 64s and finer territory wools predominated. A few price advances were realized in the middle of the week. During the past two days the advancing tendency was halted as a result of caution arriving from unsettled conditions in several commodity markets.

CARD OF THANKS

WE wish to express our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends for the kindness and sympathy shown us during our sad hour of bereavement in the loss of our dear husband and father, Emil Fuchs. We wish to especially thank the Rev. Theo. Braun for his comforting service, the pallbearers and neighbors for the many kindnesses shown us, the Firemen and Oilers' Union No. 6, and Switzer Bund, for their kind attention; Math. Hermann & Son, funeral directors, for their efficient service and thoughtfulness of detail, and for the kind remembrances expressed through the beautiful floral offerings.
MRS. MINNIE FUCHS AND SON CHRISTIAN.

We, the undersigned, wish to extend our most sincere and heartful thanks to our many relatives and kind friends, for all the kindness and sympathy shown us in the late sad loss of our dear husband and brother, Joseph C. Duba, who departed this life July 14, 1933. Especially do we thank the Rev. Wm. Hamtil for his kind and consoling words, the pallbearers, the Kutis Undertakers for their kind and courteous service, and all for the beautiful floral offerings.
FRANCES DUBA, Wife, and ROSE IGNATZ, Sister.

I wish to extend my sincere thanks to my relatives, many friends and all who stood by me in my sad bereavement in the loss of my dear wife, Ellen Honig. Especial thanks to the Rev. A. S. Baillel for his consoling words, the Women's Relief Corps (G. A. R.), the Christ Church Cathedral Sewing Club and the many other clubs. Many thanks for the many beautiful floral offerings, also my heartfelt appreciation to the Bopp Undertaking Co., and the pallbearers for their efficient services rendered.
LOUIS HONIG, Husband.

We hereby wish to extend our sincere thanks to our many relatives and friends for their kindness and sympathy, as well as for the many beautiful floral and mass offerings tendered us in the sad hour of bereavement at the loss of my dearly beloved wife and our dear mother, Gertrude Finke. Especially do we wish to thank the Rev. Father Benton and the Rev. Father Eichenauer of St. Cecilia Church, the pallbearers and Wm. J. Roberts Und. Co. JOHN S. FINKE AND FAMILY.

OUR sincere and most heartfelt thanks are hereby extended to all our relatives and friends for their kind expressions of sympathy as well as the beautiful floral offerings tendered us in the time of sorrow caused by the death of our beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Anna Thirolf. Especially do we wish to thank Rev. Jerrie Johnson for his kind and consoling address and Ziegenhein Bros., undertakers, for their excellent services.
THE BEREAVED THIROLF FAMILY.

WE wish to acknowledge, with deepest gratitude, the kindness and sympathy extended to us in our hour of sorrow in the loss of our dear brother and son. We especially thank our many relatives, friends, the Rev. H. F. Carl Haas, pallbearers and Ziegenhein Bros., undertakers, for their consoling works, efficient services and floral offerings.
MR. HERMAN FLEBBE AND BROTHERS.

WE wish to extend our sincere thanks and appreciation to our relatives and friends for their floral offerings and kind sympathy shown us in the loss of our dear brother, John E. Wynn, also thanking Rev. Kennedy of St. Margaret's Church and E. J. Schnur, funeral director. The bereaved brothers,
RICHARD AND PETER WYNN.

I WISH to extend my heartfelt thanks to friends for their beautiful floral offerings; the Rev. Frix for his consoling words and John L. Ziegenhein & Sons for their kind service rendered in the bereavement of our dear brother, brother-in-law and uncle. EMMA HEINZ, Sister.

IN MEMORIAM

ECKELKAMP, JOHN—In loving memory of John Eckelkamp, who passed away July 19, 1931:

Surrounded by friends, I am lonesome,
In the midst of my joys I am blue.
With a smile on my face, I have a heart-ache,
Longing, dear husband, for you.
Sadly missed by wife,
MRS. JOHN ECKELKAMP.

EICHENLAUB, REV. MICHAEL—In loving remembrance of my brother, Rev. Michael Eichenlaub of Germany, who passed away July 20, 1924 and Frank Eichenlaub of St. Louis, who passed away July 25, 1927. Sadly missed by PETER EICHENLAUB AND FAMILY.

HEINRICH, ROBERT J.—In memory of my dear husband and loving father, who passed away July 17, 1932:

Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
But love's remembrance outlasts all.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, DAUGHTER AND SON.

IN MEMORIAM

KILLES, ARTHUR L.—In loving memory of Arthur L. Killes, who departed this life July 23, 1932:

His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND RELATIVES.

KUEBLER, HENRY—In sad but loving remembrance of my beloved husband and my father, who died July 25, 1930.
WIFE AND SON.

LARE, ISABELLE NOYES—Dear wife of Dr. Harry Lare, departed this life July 20, 1932:

God giveth His beloved sleep.

LARSEN, E. ROY—In loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, who departed from us July 22, 1932. Sadly missed by WIFE, CHILDREN AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

LUTZ, JOSEPH F.—In loving memory, who passed away July 24, 1931:

There is a link death cannot sever,
Love and remembrance last forever.
Sadly missed by WIFE.

MITRA, CHARLES P.—In memory of Charles P. Mitra, who died five years ago, July 13, 1928.

Sad and sudden was the call,
For our dear Charles, loved by all;
Long days and nights you bore in pain
To wait for freedom that never came,
So God alone knew what was best,
He took you home and gave you rest.
Sadly missed by one that loved him.
JEAN BAGBY.

MUELLER, LOUISE—Died July 24, 1931:

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by EMELIE PUETTMAN, Daughter; WILLIAM MUELLER, Son., and GRANDCHILDREN.

MUELLER, LOUISE—In memory of my dear mother, who departed this life July 24, 1931. Sadly missed by daughter, LOUISE.

Sadly missed by his wife,
ANTOINETTIE SCHNECKO.

STECHER, MARGARETHA — In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away one year ago today, July 23, 1932. Sadly missed by her DAUGHTERS.

WEIERBACH, MRS. B.—In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away July 23, 1930:

The depth of our sorrow we cannot tell,
In the loss of our mother whom we loved so well.
But while she lies in peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.
Sadly missed by HER CHILDREN.

ZEMAN, CHARLES—In loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, who departed from us July 25, 1930:

Time rolls on; it will not stay,
What grief we've felt since that sad day.
With one so loving, kind and true,
How hard it was to part with you.
Sadly missed by
WIFE LILLIAN AND DAUGHTER ARLINE.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN

WE WILL START A LIMITED FEW ADDITIONAL MEN IN OUR ST. LOUIS BRANCH AT ONCE. IF YOU WANT FULL TIME WORK IN A PERMANENT POSITION AND HAVE GOOD CHARACTER REFERENCES, COME IN MONDAY FOR AN INTERVIEW.

If you are adaptable to this work, if you have the disposition to study and strive to acquire skill in what you do, and if you have good reputation and the will to succeed, we will employ you and back you in permanent work that is regularly paying qualified men in all parts of this country and thoroughout the world $4000, $5000, $6000, $7000 and $8000 per year and higher. These incomes are cash—and just as stable and permanent as any business or professional positions possibly could be. Such earnings represent success, and they are available to men who can think and work successfully.

This company is now in the greatest success of its history. This has been its most progressive year, and its men throughout the nation have consistently grown stronger, happier and more and more prosperous. 1933 will be our fourth consecutive record sales year.

Those who are inexperienced in specialty sales work must take the necessary time to learn and acquire skill. During this time they must be willing and satisfied to get along on nominal earnings of $125.00 to $200.00 per month (some men $105.00 to $200.00.) We cannot tell you how long it will take you to do this—whether one month or six months—but we do know that if you have the qualifications to satisfy our requirements to secure a position with us, you can, with reasonable study, practice, good character and diligence—with these things you can be genuinely assured of making a success which will afford you the higher incomes.

We are not interested in men satisfied to get along on part time earnings. A minimum schedule of 48 hours' work per week is required, with several hours additional for instruction.

If you feel you can qualify and if you really would like to learn how to do this work and to make the kind of money successful men in this company are making, call for personal interview at our branch general offices, Monday morning, 9:15 to 1:15, at 561-564 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive Sts. Ask for MR. FAULKNER.

IN an ideal world, where of course there get along without a navy. But in the pr call civilization, every nation which values i peace and security at home does need a navy

There are many very sincere people who regard warships as not only a superfluous luxury but actually consider them as an incentive to war. The navy does not ask for anything that is calculated to threaten the peace of this or any other country. It is concerned only with the welfare of the United States and the protection of its citizens and the promotion of its commerce and general interests.

We know that when emergencies come they are likely to develop with surprising speed. No householder is expecting or hoping to have his place of business or residence burned down. Nevertheless, he feels it incumbent on him to carry adequate insurance. That, to a large extent, is what a navy is—insurance against invasion of our national rights and the liberties and well-being of our people—insurance for our great business on the sea which is so closely interwoven with our security and economic welfare.

Need Greater Now.

History plainly tells us the necessity for a well balanced navy, and the many difficulties and disasters averted by naval strength.

The need for an adequate navy is more urgent now than at any time in the past, owing to uncertainty in world conditions. We are no longer an isolated nation, and having become a world Power we must accept and perform our work and responsibility. Our national safety, commercial prosperity, and industrial development are interwoven with retaining control over our home waters including the great trade route through the Panama Canal. Our position in all these vital respects is as strong as, and no stronger than, our navy.

A former President said that while preparation might not keep us out of war, lack of preparation would not only insure war, but utter disaster.

In the words of the late Admiral Moffett, that gallant officer lost in the Akron tragedy, "in time of war the second best navy is no better than the second best hand in a poker game."

There is no use having a second class navy or a third class navy. Unless the navy is sufficient to take care of our rights and defend them, it is a useless expense.

All Agreements Fail.

I believe that our navy should be maintained at the ratio provided in the London treaty. There are two ways of arriving at the treaty ratio. One is through the scaling down of the navies of other signatories to the treaty to meet the size of our reduced naval establishment.

The other is through the building up of the United States Navy to conform with the ship-building programs of other countries. If it were possible to maintain treaty strength through the scaling down of armaments of all the countries involved, that method would be preferable.

But the attempts of the last few years to accomplish this through agreements for further reduction of naval armaments have failed. In view of this failure it is imperative that our navy be built up in proportion to those of the other leading Powers as defined by treaty.

The recently authorized program of construction, by which 32 new vessels will be financed with $238,000,000 of public works money, is an important step in the right direction. But with the completion of these 32 ships, as well as 17 which are already laid down, our navy will still be far

Secretary Swanson Says Our Need For Adequate Navy Is Greater Now Than at Any Time in Past

Subscribes to Admiral Moffett's Maxim That Second-Class Fleet in an Emergency Is No Better Than the Second Best Hand at Poker.

By CLAUDE A. SWANSON,
Secretary of the Navy.

WASHINGTON, July 22.

IN an ideal world, where of course there would be no war and where commerce would never need protection, a country might get along without a navy. But in the present state of what we call civilization, every nation which values its foreign trade and its peace and security at home does need a navy.

There are many very sincere people who regard warships as not only a superfluous luxury but actually consider them as an incentive to war. The navy does not ask for anything that is calculated to threaten the peace of this or any other country. It is concerned only with the welfare of the United States and the protection of its citizens and the promotion of its commerce and general interests.

We know that when emergencies come they are likely to develop with surprising speed. No householder is expecting or hoping to have his place of business or residence burned down. Nevertheless, he feels it incumbent on him to carry adequate insurance. That, to a large extent, is what a navy is—insurance against invasion of our national rights and the liberties and well-being of our people—insurance for our great business on the sea which is so closely interwoven with our security and economic welfare.

Need Greater Now.

History plainly tells us the necessity for a well balanced navy, and the many difficulties and disasters averted by naval strength.

The need for an adequate navy is more urgent now than at any time in the past, owing to uncertainty in world conditions. We are no longer an isolated nation, and having become a world Power we must accept and perform our work and responsibility. Our national safety, commercial prosperity, and industrial development are interwoven with retaining control over our home waters including the great trade route through the Panama Canal. Our position in all these vital respects is as strong as, and no stronger than, our navy.

A former President said that while preparation might not keep us out of war, lack of preparation would not only insure war, but utter disaster.

In the words of the late Admiral Moffett, that gallant officer lost in the Akron tragedy, "in time of war the second best navy is no better than the second best hand in a poker game."

There is no use having a second class navy or a third class navy. Unless the navy is sufficient to take care of our rights and defend them, it is a useless expense.

All Agreements Fail.

I believe that our navy should be maintained at the ratio provided in the London treaty. There are two ways of arriving at the treaty ratio. One is through the scaling down of the navies of other signatories to the treaty to meet the size of our reduced naval establishment.

The other is through the building up of the United States Navy to conform with the ship-building programs of other countries. If it were possible to maintain treaty strength through the scaling down of armaments of all the countries involved, that method would be preferable.

But the attempts of the last few years to accomplish this through agreements for further reduction of naval armaments have failed. In view of this failure it is imperative that our navy be built up in proportion to those of the other leading Powers as defined by treaty.

The recently authorized program of construction, by which 32 new vessels will be financed with $238,000,000 of public works money, is an important step in the right direction. But with the completion of these 32 ships, as well as 17 which are already laid down, our navy will still be far under treaty strength. A comparison of our building program with those of the other signatories to the naval treaty will clearly show this.

3 Fleets Compared.

Under the present program, after including the 32 vessels just authorized, we will have built and projected in 1936 108 under-age naval ships of all classes; England will have built and projected in that same year 161 under-age ships; and Japan will have built and projected 183 under-age ships.

This means that unless we provide for further shipbuilding we will still be 101 vessels under treaty strength on Dec. 31, 1936, the date of the expiration of the London treaty. On that same date, according to present building plans, England will be only 64 ships under treaty strength, and Japan will be up to full naval strength allowed by the treaty.

The weakest spots in our navy at present are in light cruisers, destroyers and submarines. In the light cruiser class we will be five ships, or 47,100 tons under treaty strength. In all classes of destroyers we will need 65 ships, or 99,200 tons to bring us to treaty strength.

Unless further construction is authorized, we will be 30 submarines below treaty strength.

While it is impossible to say that one part of the navy is more necessary than any other part, the importance of the destroyers, submarines, and cruisers, in which we are so woefully behind, cannot be overemphasized.

85 Per Cent to Labor.

The fact that 85 per cent of the money spent on ship-building goes to labor makes it a particularly fitting form of activity right now, when the whole country is engaged in a campaign to create jobs for the unemployed. Of this 85 per cent, about 40 per cent is spent at the ship yard, and the remainder is spent throughout the nation. Every state benefits.

But still more important is the immediate adoption of a sane policy of building and maintaining the navy at the necessary strength, year in and year out.

There is no more striking example of false economy than the policy which has allowed our navy to lapse from time to time until it was much below the strength needed to protect our commerce, only to engage in a hasty, feverish, and tremendously expensive building program when emergency threatened.

In 1917 our navy was hopelessly below the demands of wartime. Immediately on our entry into the World War we laid down and built, at wartime prices, something over 350 destroyers. That our unpreparedness was not more disastrous was due in large measure to our strong navy allies, who protected our merchant marine.

Year and Half to Build.

Under ideal conditions it takes about a year and a half to build a destroyer. During the war we built one in 90 days. Under such conditions the vessels cannot help but suffer, and the taxpayer suffers much more acutely than he does when ships are built in a businesslike manner, in the most economical time and place.

Moreover, very few of those wartime built destroyers were completed in time to be of any service during the war, again demonstrating the truth, that naval wars are largely fought with navies as they exist at the beginning of the conflict.

There is another disadvantage to

How Sweden's "Reserve Works" Program Is to Be Expanded to Meet Increasing Unemployment Due to the Depression

STOCKHOLM.

HAVING had to a large degree a planned domestic economy, the countries in the north of Europe have been able to withstand the inroads of the world depression more successfully than those countries in which capitalism was almost completely uncontrolled and unregulated. But now the stagnation of world trade has made itself felt everywhere. The chief difficulties in Russia today, where the state is absolute master of the economic life, arise, according to most authorities, from the chaotic condition of international trade.

Russia must sell her wheat and timber to get machinery to carry on the five-year plan. England must sell her coal and cotton goods to get the necessaries of life. Sweden must sell her iron and lumber, Norway must sell her fish, Denmark her butter and bacon in order to receive in return essential products not found within the country's own borders. Every European state is far from being a self-sustaining, complete economic unit.

SWEDEN'S future King, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, chatting with Per Albert Hansson, Premier and leader of the Social Democratic party.

How Sweden Is Facing Unemployment Problem.

But here in the north because the government, the co-operatives, and the trade unions have organized certain fields with a coherent, carefully planned economy — as the writer has attempted to show in the three preceding articles—the worst effects of the world depression have been felt only within the last year and a half. Now, however, the situation, as with the rest of the world, is admittedly very serious.

At the end of March of this year there were approximately 185,000 persons unemployed in Sweden. This was in contrast with about 1,000,000 persons gainfully employed in all occupations, including workers on wage on farms and in timbering operations. This ratio of unemployment to employment is proportionately less than that in the United States or Great Britain, but it is large enough to consitute a very serious problem which the present Social-Democratic Government proposes to solve by a plan that is relatively more drastic in its intention than any scheme yet contemplated seriously by any other nation.

Reserve Works Plan In Operation Since 1914.

Until the number of unemployed grew to such proportions the established plan of "reserve works" was sufficient to take up the industrial slack. This system of "reserve works" is in itself very interesting and it will be well to explain it here before outlining the Government's present proposals. Since 1914 Sweden has had in practice this system of state-community "made" work to take care of normal or seasonal unemployment. It was sufficient to carry the heavy burden of the depression of 1921-22.

Curiously enough, for such a socially advanced state, Sweden has never had a system of unemployment insurance. There is a striking disparity between the legal status of the man who is unemployed through no fault of his own and his treatment in actual practice. Under the system of "reserve works" he receives a job at a living wage. Under the poor law, similar in kind and origin to England's primitive poor relief law, he is entitled to nothing and receives a dole only out of the bountiful goodness of the community. Poor relief of the old type, before the appearance of wholesale unemployment, was largely done away with in Sweden by compulsory general old-age and invalid insurance, compulsory insurance against industrial accidents, state-subsidized sickness insurance and other measures organized by the state.

Cost Shared Between State and Communities.

In 1914 state authorities realized that the unemployment which set in with the outbreak of the World War was beyond the poor law dole of the communes. There was established then the National Unemployment Commission, whose function was to organize unemployment relief. Almost from the first there was laid down the "work principle" as against the "maintenance principle." During the early years of the war an attempt was made to extend the state construction program as a means of providing employment in the ordinary labor market. It was soon found that it was impossible to do this on a sufficiently large scale in the communities where the need was greatest.

Then the Unemployment Commission began to map out a long-term program of "reserve works" on which only the unemployed would receive work at a rate of pay about 20 per cent less than the highest wage of the unskilled worker in the locality in which the work was to be carried out. The state was to pay, by subsidy, about half of the total cost of wages, the community the balance of the cost. Through 1917 and 1918, when unemployment was slight, this system was evolved. It functioned so well in caring for the mass unemployment from 1921 to 1923 that only a small amount of direct relief was necessary. Between the years 1924 and 1930 the "reserve work" was sufficient to take up industrial slack, without any recourse to direct relief. Even when it became necessary, in the winter of 1930-31, to resort to direct relief again "reserve works" remained the basis of the system. The "reserve work" plan functions in this way.

National Commission Chooses And Directs Projects.

The National Unemployment Commission, which enjoys great freedom of action, decides upon the projects and then directs the undertaking. In deciding on a project, the Commission observes certain general principles: the work must benefit the state, a commune or other public body and must be justified for economic or cultural reasons, but must not be such that it might be carried out normally in the immediate future by ordinary means; wages must form a comparatively large proportion of the cost; it must be possible to carry on the work in winter; and it should be possible to start, stop, extend or restrict the operation in accordance with the fluctuations of unemployment. These conditions have been met for the most part by various kinds of construction, road, railway, port and harbor and power stations and the regulation of water courses for timber floating, land drainage and forestry. But projects during the last eight years have included as well the laying out of sports grounds and the preservation of historical monuments. There has never been any lack of proposals. Between October, 1931, and February, 1932, the commission organized 75 new reserve works.

When a project has been decided upon, the Commission draws up a contract with the local body responsible for the scheme. This legally binding contract specifies a number of things. The local body must provide plans, a survey of the site, stone and gravel pits, necessary machinery, supervision, legal and other preliminary work. On the other hand, the Commission agrees to carry out the work contracted for in accordance with an agreed plan and to complete the work to the extent needed for the relief of unemployment.

Free Housing for Workers and Neediest Come First.

The workers are provided with adequately equipped housing accommodations free of charge. Workers are taken from the unemployed register, those who have been unable to obtain employment through the public employment exchanges. Workers whose needs are greatest are the first to be sent to the reserve works. The wages have ranged, depending upon the locality in which the work has been carried out, from 95 cents to $1.90 a day, with the majority receiving about $1.15 a day.

The balance sheet of the Unemployment Commission for July, 1930, to June, 1931, shows that the average cost a man-day of the state reserve works was about $1.90. Of this, 4.7 per cent went into central administration, including the whole cost of the Commission; 75.8 per cent for labor costs, 6.3 per cent for management and the remaining 13.2 per cent for tools, materials, transport of the workers, and so forth.

In 1921 there were 21,000 unemployed on reserve works, in 1922, 31,100, and in 1923, 14,700. These are maximum figures. Wherever one goes in Sweden one sees the work

Mussolini Says World Conferences Are Futile, and London Meeting Should Be the Last of Them

Anticipated Failure There and at Geneva by His Four-Power Pact—Declares Crisis Calls for Decisions, Not Recommendations.

By BENITO MUSSOLINI,
Premier of Italy.

ROME, July 22.

THE London conference on which so much hope had been concentrated can be considered as virtually ended. But I believe that, with the London conference, the system is also ended.

It is not quite right to think that this system was born only after the war. Even before the war, there were long and memorable conferences where very important European and world problems were discussed.

But such conferences were rare. They were very minutely prepared through normal diplomatic channels and were limited in their discussion to one question in order not to turn the universe upside down. They were also limited, in those participating, to the countries directly interested in the question.

The present procedure is absolutely erroneous. Conferences are not prepared. That at London was much less prepared than all others.

A Thrust at Democracy.

When scores and scores of nationals are participating in conference, it inevitably assumes the aspect of a parliament with all the inconveniences generally known and deplored.

How could any illusions be entertained as to the results of a conference at which were present 2000 delegates from more than 60 countries? It is an external pretense or conventional falsity to burn incense to democratic equality, that neither exists in nature nor has ever existed in history.

Instead of convoking scores of countries whose circumstances have no great influence in determining the course of life, it would have been much better to call together those countries which have world interests and which do not number more than a dozen.

When these countries reach agreement on economic peace, it would be given to at least 75 per cent of the total population of the globe. This fact would have had effective repercussions, even in the other minor countries.

In this, I do not wish to ignore or diminish the importance of certain states. I mean to say that they have legitimate interests, though limited, and can only be properly cared for if the great states, which have major responsibilities and a greater number of inhabitants, first come to agreement.

What Happened at London.

Besides, conferences are destined to fail when, added to the danger comprised in an excessive number of delegates, there is uncertainty concerning the agenda. In such a case, conferences slide into academic discussions.

That is what happened at London, where inconsistency in work provoked, after so much hope and despite Prime Minister MacDonald's tenacious efforts, a sense of universal boredom.

It must still be thought that these conferences do not arrive at determining precise responsibilities. They do not have men who make decisions, but men who talk and argue and report to their respective governments. This is the reason why, instead of decisions, they make "recommendations" and the latter are usually shelved.

Two conferences are now dying and it is not given to me to prophesy by what miracle they can be called to life—that at London and that at Geneva. Two noteworthy failures in European policy can, therefore, be spoken of.

Four-Power Pact.

Without the four-Power pact, Europe would have had the feeling of standing on the edge of an abyss and one of war. With the four-Power pact, Europe has a breathing spell. There is a feeling now of respite in all Europe and the first, though not too certain, signs of economic recovery, are noticed.

The four-Power pact, in fact, anticipated the eventual failure of the two conferences and pledged the four states which has signed it to collaborate in disarmament and in the economic field.

As I said in my address to the Senate, June 27, there is no need, not even in regard to the four-Power pact, to indulge in excessive illusions. The importance of the four-Power pact, in fact, is that it averts the formation of antagonistic blocks in Europe. It also offered to the four countries of Western Europe that, with their colonies, represent a third of the population of the globe the possibility of collaborating in the aims of peace.

This collaboration will not always be easy, but it will always be helped by better atmosphere, with true and real relaxation of the nerves, an atmosphere which has been noticeable in Europe now for the past two months.

For Embargo on Conferences.

The idea that for 10 years Europe will be quiet constitutes a strong incentive for improvement in the general condition. Not 2000 delegates will meet about a table to argue, but representatives responsible for the four units. Their work will previously have been elaborated in the chancellories and through official contacts.

I believe that, for the moral and political prestige of the nations, it would be advisable to place an embargo on conferences. For some years this word must disappear from the dictionary of contemporary international politics. It must be forgotten. Only by abstinence is an abuse corrected. I have had some curious political experiences in this regard.

Today the conference idea is in disrepute. In a few years it will be of interest again and may be of some use, though always limited to determined problems and designated countries, particularly if it will consummate in solemn form agreements reached beforehand.

Even here it is a matter of correcting abuses and the degeneration of misunderstood democracy, according to which, not the pilots should steer the ship, but the ignorant, who do not even know how to read a compass.

The Parody of Democracy.

It is time to speak out and to say that these systems lead states to sure ruin and with them their peoples. This is the parody of travesty of democracy.

At another time, in answer to an inquiry by the great sociologist, Gustave le Bon, I defined it as: "The doctrine of a regime in which an intermittent illusion of being sovereign is given to the people."

Thus, at London, it was the intention to create the illusion before a crowd of men more or less prepared that it was possible to direct the destinies of humanity.

Democracy, in the last analysis, can only think. It lives by and for words. But in times of crisis the people do not ask to be propagandized. They wish to be commanded. The time of useless argument must then surrender the pace to the tempo of ready obedience. History, even in this case, is the teacher, but men are often very negligent and incorrigible pupils.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong; whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

President Green of the A. F. of L. Answers Post-Dispatch Editorial.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I AM writing to tell you that some friend in St. Louis sent me a clipping from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of July 11, containing your editorial entitled "A Challenge to American Labor."

I read this editorial with a feeling of satisfaction and of deep interest. In this editorial, you emphasized the tremendous opposition which organized labor has been forced to contend with, and which it is now meeting, notwithstanding the enactment of the Recovery Act.

As you have well stated, the organized labor movement has been strongly opposed by many powerful employers of labor. These opponents of organized labor have been ruthless in their opposition; they discharged workers because they joined labor unions; they persecuted them through the application of the blacklist; families were evicted from company houses and, as a result, men and women who dared join unions have been forced to suffer from hunger, distress and persecution.

Of late years, many employers of labor have opposed trade unionism through the establishment of company unions. Through such organizations, the management of the company was able to control and dominate completely the economic and social life of the workers.

It is perfectly proper in the light of all these facts to ask the question: How has it been possible for trade unions to survive at all?

Membership in trade unions on the part of the workers employed by many of these corporations is not a matter of indifference, but instead a matter of fear—fear of economic persecution. This fact is being clearly demonstrated now. When the door of opportunity to organize has been thrown wide open and working people have been made free through the operation of Section 7 of the Recovery Act, hundreds of thousands of workers are breaking away from the restraint and fear which controlled them and are stepping out, joining bona-fide, independent trade unions.

Your criticism of the craft idea of unionism may or may not be well founded. There is a wide difference of opinion as to this particular question of procedure. Labor has not yet forgotten the experience of the Knights of Labor. When workers were accepted into membership in one big union, and because such plans proved to be unworkable, the Knights of Labor passed out. On the other hand, the American Federation of Labor, founded upon the trade plan of organization, has lived for more than half a century, has met the opposition to which I have herein referred and has continued to exercise tremendous influence in the economic and social life of the nation.

Please bear in mind that labor is just as militant and aggressive as it has ever been. Even the unorganized, controlled by desperate fear, look to the American Federation of Labor to speak for them.

It was the organized labor movement, which you deprecate in your editorial because it has not succeeded in organizing all the workers in the mass production industries, which secured the enactment of the injunction relief measure, which succeeded in preventing the confirmation of the appointment of Judge Parker, and which prevailed upon Congress to write Section 7, guaranteeing the right of workers to organize, into the Recovery Act. It is this labor movement that is now speaking for the workers at the public hearings in Washington, assembling data, facts and information and presenting them, not only in support of the economic claims of the organized workers but of the unorganized as well.

Again, may I ask you to look around about you? There is no opposition to the church, no hostile corporations persecuting the people because they join church organizations, and yet the church has not persuaded all to become members. Fraternal organizations have suffered. In fact, most every line of organized effort has failed during the last four years. Even company unions, fostered, financed and sponsored by corporations, have failed. Many of them passed out altogether. They are now being revived simply because corporations wish to use them in order to oppose establishment of bona-fide, independent trade unions.

I am conscious of the failure of the American Federation of Labor to measure up to every standard set by friends and foes. I know what a great work there is to do and I know of the great need of organization among the workers. I, too, become impatient, especially when great corporations use their money, their power, prestige and influence in persecuting defenseless workers because they dared exercise their American right to join a trade union.

Perhaps the failure of organized labor may be traced to the incompetency of its leadership, as you state in the editorial, myself included, and you may be entirely right in this respect. Perhaps the rank and file of labor may discover this fact, which you seem to emphasize, and accept your advice. When they do, I presume they will select other leaders who may be regarded as far more capable and competent.

WILLIAM GREEN,
President, American Federation of Labor.

Missouri and Recovery

As the Federal Government begins its great fight against the depression under the Recovery Act, the State of Missouri finds itself totally unprepared for that co-operation essential to the success of the program. All that has been done is the appointment of a Public Works Committee to advise the Governor on necessary procedure. The committee has published no findings; nevertheless, the larger aspects of the problem are plain enough.

There are two main sections to the Recovery Act, one relating to industry, which is under the direction of Gen. Johnson, and the other to public works, in charge of Secretary Ickes. It is with the latter that Missouri, as a State, is concerned. Under the public works section, the Government has appropriated the vast sum of $3,300,000,000 for expenditure on all types of public works.

Of this sum, $400,000,000 has been allocated for highway grants to states; $50,000,000 for roads, trails and bridges in national parks, forests and other public lands; $25,000,000 for subsistence homesteads, particularly to relieve the distress of coal miners; $100,000,000 for farm relief. There remains $2,725,000,000 for other purposes, including gifts to states for conservation work, slum clearance, construction of public buildings, sewer systems, schools or whatever kinds of improvements states desire.

These gifts are limited to 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials on any eligible public works project. The remaining 70 per cent must be raised by the states, except that for fundamentally necessary improvements, such as water systems, the Government may lend the 70 per cent, at 4 per cent, the loan to be retired in 30 years or less. For states to take full advantage of the Recovery Act, however, they will have to be ready to put up their own funds to obtain the 30 per cent outright grant.

To this end, we suggest for Missouri an expenditure of $100,000,000 or more, 70 per cent to be raised by State bond issue and 30 per cent to be received from the Government, the money to be spent on the State University, the schools, penal and eleemosynary institutions, the State parks and rivers and other projects, as many of the last as possible to be self-liquidating. In this connection, we regard as self-liquidating money spent to develop the resort features of the Ozarks, hitherto sadly neglected, which would greatly increase the influx of tourists into Missouri. As it happens, the basis for a large capital expenditure by Missouri exists in the seven-volume report of the State Survey Commission, made in 1930, advising a 12-year program of vital improvements in State institutions.

Boiled down, what the Federal Government has done is this: (1) It has balanced the budget, so far as current running expenses are concerned; (2) it has authorized the issuance of bonds; (3) it has provided through new taxes for their amortization; (4) it has offered 30 per cent grants to states and other governmental units willing to co-operate; (5) it has set up an administration to promote recovery.

If Missouri is to participate fully in the national program, and it is unthinkable that it should not, it must follow the lead of the Federal Government in all these particulars. Our State budget, it is true, is theoretically, at least, in balance. The other steps remain to be taken. Like the Federal Government, the State might offer to counties, municipalities and other units a 30 per cent grant as an incentive for new construction. Surely, it must have a bond issue, it must provide for its retirement and it must proceed to set up an administrative system.

We should like to point out the serious consequences of Missouri's failure to act. In income taxes, excise taxes and the like, Missouri pays out many millions a year to the Federal Government, and it will continue to do so, regardless of what action we take under the Recovery Act. If we take no action, Missouri will find itself paying for improvements in other states, improvements of no conceivable benefit to our citizens. For it is certain that other states are not going to overlook the opportunity to obtain public works of all kinds at a 30 per cent discount. Moreover, Missouri will continue to pay vast sums for relief of the unemployed, now said to aggregate $1,000,000 a month, a condition the recovery plan is designed to eliminate.

We submit, under the circumstances, the only sensible and business-like course for Missouri to pursue is to get on the national recovery bandwagon, even at the price of a temporary increase in taxation. That increase, if the recovery program is successful, will be like bread cast upon the waters. It will be returned a hundred-fold. As former Senator Wadsworth pointed out in a recent speech before the United States Chamber of Commerce, new construction has been a powerful factor in pulling the country out of all previous depressions, and it is what we must have to pull us out of this one. That is a postulate which commands, we believe, the almost universal support of economists.

It is up to Gov. Park to set in motion the necessary machinery. If he will follow the national leader, he can electrify the State. Whether the procedure should be to call a special session or to proceed through the initiative is perhaps a secondary matter, though the first method would be quicker. The important thing is for the Governor to announce a broad program and to show the determination necessary to put it over. Missouri cannot stand on the sidelines. It must get into the game.

News of Lottery Winners

When Louise Popp, 27-year-old telephone operator of New York, won $118,500 last month on her $2 Irish sweepstakes ticket on the British Derby, it was news by any definition of the term. Whatever one's personal feeling might be on the morality of horse-racing or of gambling pools, it was of interest to know how this chance investment had brought the young woman a fortune. Yet, under the interpretation of the Federal laws made two years ago, any newspaper that informed its readers of such an unusual incident would have been subject, at that time, to being barred from the mails.

The New Deal at Washington takes a more commonsense view of the matter. Postmaster-General Farley has issued a new and liberal interpretation of the law, which, he promises will not interfere with publication of such human interest items as Miss Popp's stroke of fortune. "The only publicity I would object to would be outright advertisement of the lotteries," Mr. Farley said, emphasizing that papers going to this extreme would still be held accountable under the law. This is a reasonable restriction, of course. But as to the previous ban on printing accounts of unusual winnings, we agree with Mr. Farley when he says: "If it is going to impair our morals to know what goes on in the world, that is a problem for our pastors, not the Postoffice Department." Lotteries are forbidden in this country, but they can be kept out only by the vigilance of the authorities, and not by suppression of legitimate news about them. Mr. Farley is to be commended for the rational attitude he has taken on the subject.

Patriots and Prosperity

America is soon to see a campaign of patriotic propaganda such as it has not witnessed since the Liberty Loan drives of war days. This time the enemy is hunger: the motivation is not hate but hope.

President Roosevelt has invited all business, pending the formulation, consideration and adoption of specific industrial codes, voluntarily to subscribe to "a universal covenant" which will govern hours, wages and prices. The proposed agreement outlaws child labor; fixes maximum hours of factory workers at 35, of white collar workers at 40; sets a minimum wage of 30 to 40 cents per hour for the former group, of $14 to $15 per week for the latter. It requires pay and a third for work beyond the maximum hours and calls for an increase in the wages of better-paid employes proportionate to the increase in the minimum. It pledges business not to profiteer by advancing prices more rapidly than costs increase. The agreement would become effective Sept. 1, remain in operation until Jan. 1 or until superseded by a specific trade code.

Gen. Johnson has said that "there is no force here except conscience and opinion." But he is going to see to it that this opinion is organized in such a way as to make itself effective. Employers who sign the voluntary agreement will be given an emblem of N. R. A. membership which they can display in their advertising, in their windows, on their goods, on their delivery trucks and on their smokestacks. Employers who decline to participate will be denied use of the emblem. Consumers will then be approached over the radio, through the movies, in the press, at the lodge, through chambers of commerce, service clubs, women's clubs and churches. They will be asked to sign an agreement to purchase goods only from those firms which display the N. R. A. emblem and they will be given badges which will tell the world that they will not traffic with slackers.

Despite all the efforts of the recovery administration to hasten the submission of trade codes, some industries are still holding back. No codes have yet been presented by the meat packers, the machine makers, the furniture manufacturers, the shoe or tobacco industries, among the major business groups. In certain quarters there is evidence of passive resistance. Business men are reluctant to raise wages without raising prices. Some of them fear too great an extension of trade unionism. They were alarmed by the stipulations by which the President tightened the labor provisions of the textile code. They hope to take advantage of low material and labor costs to make large profits out of mounting prices. The economic revival has lessened their enthusiasm for Government regulation. They even hope that rising prices may render the recovery program unnecessary. So they have adopted a policy of watchful waiting.

Such a policy is as short-sighted as it is selfish. It endangers the whole prospect of business revival. If some industries co-operate in increasing wages and reducing hours, while others lag, they will experience higher costs and restricted markets and be compelled again to reduce their scale of operations. If all industry is permitted to pile up new stocks without reducing hours or raising wages, it will create unsalable surpluses which will again drag us into depression. Recovery can be carried forward only if all business and all labor advance together.

The administration possesses the power to require licenses of all businesses which sell their products in interstate trade; to impose codes on those industries which do not voluntarily submit them. It can prosecute under the anti-trust laws those concerns which employ monopolistic practices without the benefit of code. It can and, if necessary, it will coerce co-operation. But the application of these coercive powers would take time. Advancement of wages and purchasing power cannot wait upon the swinging of the big stick. And if industry can be persuaded to co-operate voluntarily, it may not be necessary to bring the big stick into play. This is the reason for the administration's new campaign.

The fate of industrial revival, the future of political progressivism are bound up in this experiment. Another reversal at this point might well endanger our whole social structure. The administration's plan will give every man, woman and child in the United States an opportunity to enlist in the war on the depression. Support of the recovery program provides, as Gen. Johnson has said, "a test of patriotism." America cannot fail to meet this test.

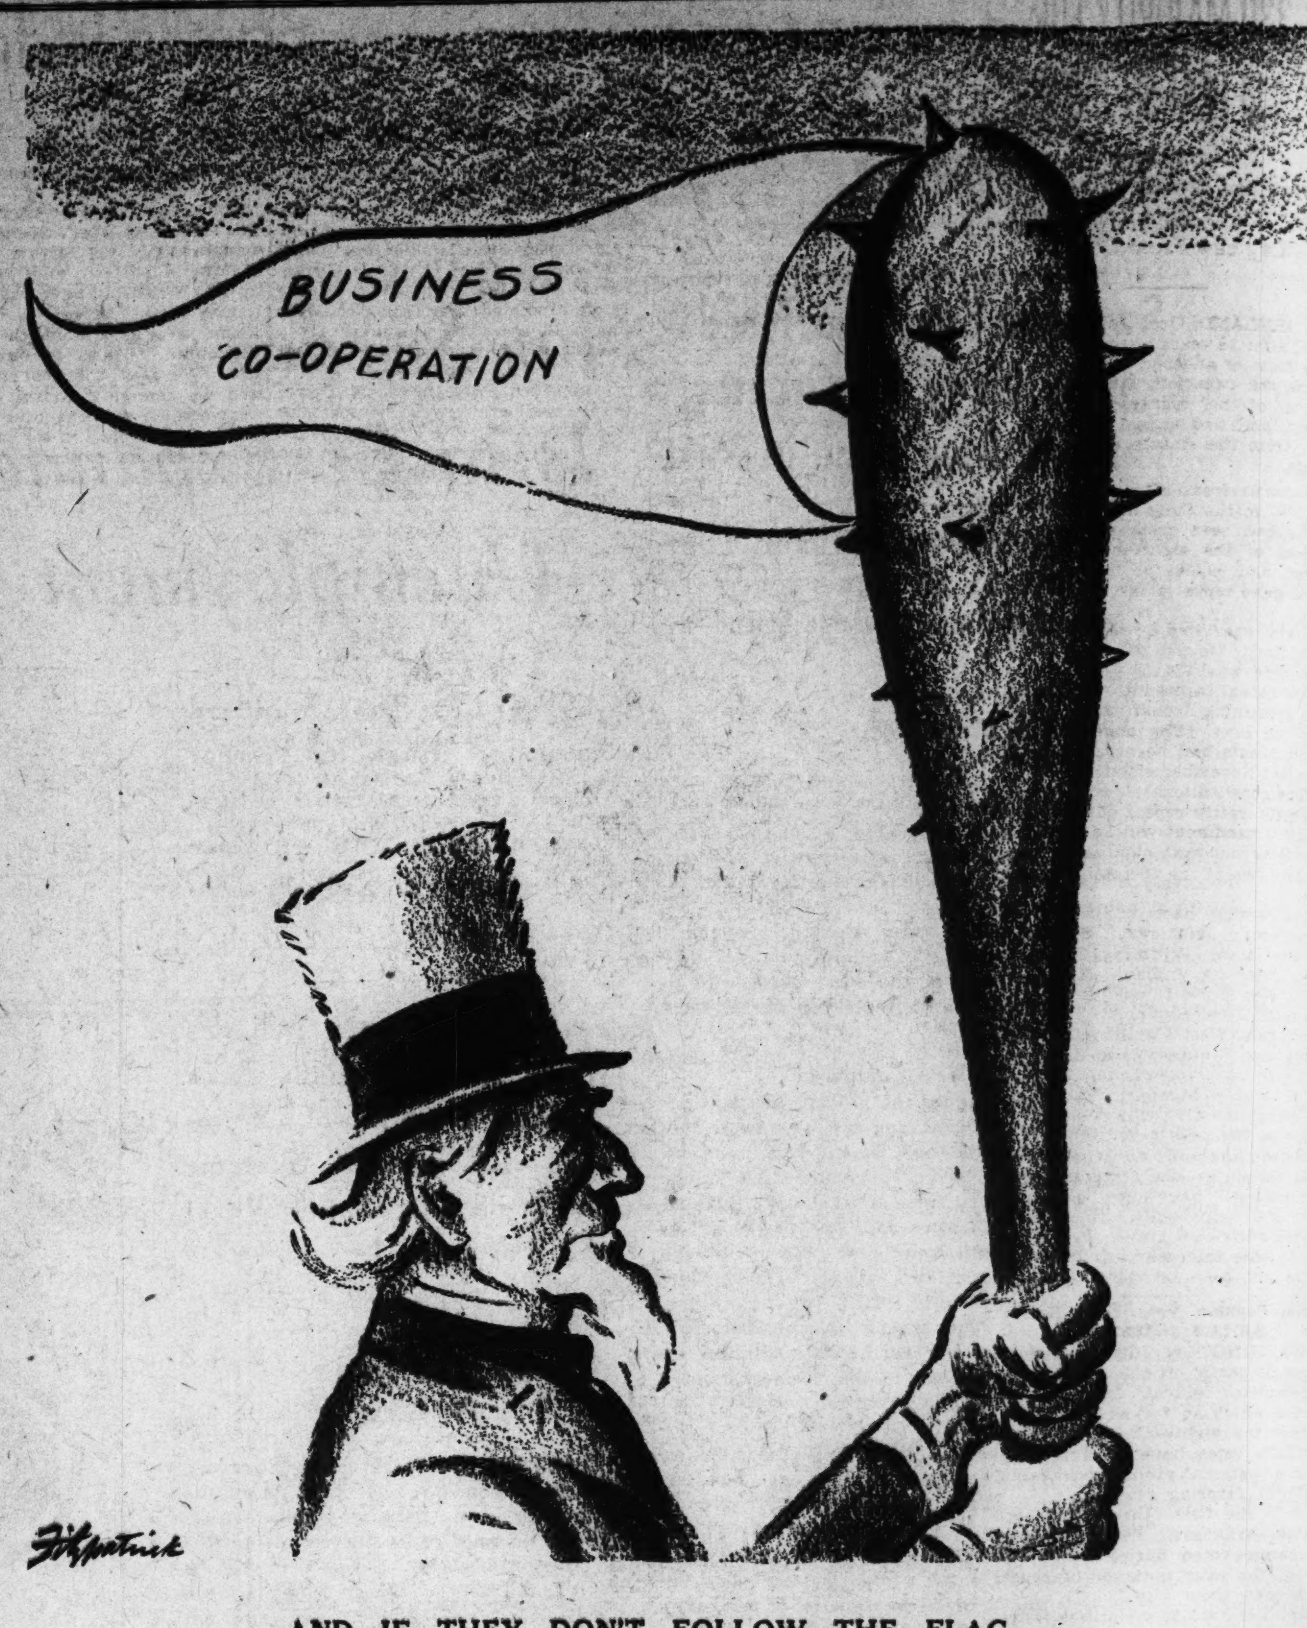
Down in the Hills

Good times have come again to the Missouri hills. A region in which lumbering, mining and raising livestock are essential industries, the Missouri hills have suffered from the depression as has no other part of the State. For the first time in memory, the man who was willing to work could not find a job.

It is different now. The upturn started when beer came back. The beer revival started the stave mills up. In a little while, the lumber mills resumed. After more than three years of idleness, industry all over the hills returned to life. Mines resumed. Railroad loadings increased. Business picked up at the stores. Livestock began to move. After want and suffering, often penury, the people can buy food and clothes.

The reforestation work instituted in the Ozarks in Missouri is immensely important. It cannot fail to leave the State with a reforestation policy. The Ozarks are an ideal forest country. They were originally rich in pine and hard woods. They can be made to produce lumber again. In Europe, the forests are planted and cut when they mature. It is a commonplace in Germany and France to see the forests stepped up from the small plants to the tall trees. To a degree, we are going to have the depression to thank for having got at it in America.

The hill country in Missouri can never again experience such an economic pause as that which has afflicted it for a decade. When the timber was cut out, we should have undertaken reforestation at once. We are doing this now. It is the way of wisdom.



AND IF THEY DON'T FOLLOW THE FLAG——

Why Conferences Fail

London parley again proves that world conferences are futile unless preparation is thorough and program limited and specific; with each nation, under present system, driven by forces that forbid sacrifices for common good, only generalizations may be expected, writer says; confusion is increased by domestic situation of U. S.

Harold J. Laski, Professor of Political Science, London University, in the Nation.

IN the first fortnight of the World Economic Conference, certain general truths about all international conferences emerged with striking force: (1) It is a mistake to hold such a conference unless the preparation has been complete enough either to lay down the broad lines of agreement or to confront its members with decisive alternatives. In the present case, it is clear that there has been no such preparation. (2) It is a mistake to hold such a conference unless its terms of reference are limited and specific. Otherwise, the inevitable result is that all national divergences come forthwith to the surface, and in the effort to secure some kind of agreement which may save the conference's face, broad general resolutions are passed in which the reservations are so many, the vagueness so profound, that these resolutions cease to have definite meaning.

It is already obvious that the character of the present conference involves this outcome of its deliberations. At the most, it will pass pious resolutions of principle which seek to obscure the inherent conflicts now daily expressed; and each state will be asked to implement their general tenor in its own way. To regard the conference as a gateway to recovery is impossible to any observer who wishes to be taken seriously.

That fact emerged in the first general debate. No speech contained a specific program. We knew, without a conference, that wholesale prices ought to rise, that currency needs to be stabilized, that tariffs are too high, that international debts are a menace and economic nationalism a disaster. Often Ramsay MacDonald repeated his well-known plea for co-operation, without any indication of how it was to be obtained; and most other speakers offered the news that the conference met at a grave crisis and urged that something must be done. Commissions were set up on currency and commercial policy, which have given birth to enough subcommissions to provide all the more important delegates with either a chairmanship or the position of a rapporteur.

The conference has not yet seriously confronted its first great dilemma. Tariff reductions are essential if the wheels of international trade are to be set moving; but tariff reduction cannot be contemplated until currency stability has been achieved. The domestic situation of America renders any early settlement of this latter issue unlikely; and it is apparent to most delegates that, until Mr. Roosevelt's policy of inflation has reached some equilibrium, no state is likely to risk the invasion of its market by goods whose power to penetrate is simply a function of depreciated currency. Washington's rejection of the central bankers' settlement has brought into the open a divergency of interest between Europe and America which prevents any decisive outcome of the crisis for a considerable period.

The depth of the economic nationalisms here in conflict is obviously profound. The attitude of the British seems to be that, while they will make some concessions for a stable currency, everyone's tariff is open to question except their own. France wants a return to gold, and appears to have no other predominant interest; her plea for a great program of international public works, and for shorter hours, struck a dumb note on the conference piano.

The Germans, through Hugenberg, put forward, and then repudiated, a fantastic memorandum demanding colonies in Africa and territory in Russia, seemingly on the basis that Germany, in terms of the Spenglerian philosophy, is a "virile" nation. This apart, the only German contribution appears to be Dr. Schacht's comprehensive effort to avoid German inflation by repudiating, so far as he can, all foreign indebtedness. Russia contributed, through Litvinoff, an excellent essay on the contradictions of capitalism; and Mr. Soong said simply and truly that an increase in the Chinese standard of life would go far to promote world recovery by the new purchasing power it would create.

America's position has not been wholly clear. Mr. Hull made a speech on the evils of economic nationalism; but his proposal for a 10 per cent cut in tariffs—if it was his—was promptly repudiated by Senator Pittman. The latter has applauded plans for the remonetization of silver; and Senator Couzens has emphasized what Mr. Hull has denied, the divergence between the President's policy and that of recovery by international action.

What exactly America really wants, no one seems to know. I think it is fair to say that, so far, her delegation has merely increased the confusion of an already confused conference. It is a great pity, for a decisive and concrete lead from America was the only hope of the conference discussing its issues in an atmosphere of reality. As it is, no one can now say where the conference is drifting; it has become a rudderless ship. Mr. MacDonald harangues the press to the effect that he is optimistic despite "little setbacks"; but he has revealed to no one the grounds upon which he bases his optimism.

The course of the economic conference in London has resembled notably that of Geneva on disarmament. So long as it remains on the high plateau of vague generalization, its members can give ardent utterance to the stock commonplaces of the day. Once it descends to the problem of concrete application, it becomes obvious that economic nationalism has created a body of vested interests whose claims are irreconcilable.

The British Government dare not make a free-trade gesture for fear of the Tory eagerness for tariffs and the economic imperialism of Ottawa. The French will not abandon their complex system of quotas and embargoes for fear of endangering the unsteady equilibrium they have maintained through the depression. Germany has no economic policy; and Japan must, somehow, flood the markets of the world with sweated goods in order to pay for her imperialist adventure in China. Southern and Eastern Europe tremble on the abyss of economic disaster, unable to move effectively in the absence of international agreement by the great states. America is too preoccupied with her own internal problems to act decisively upon any problem, from debts to tariffs, which implies a limitation of the domestic policy to which her main attention is given.

This is, in effect, a conference called to secure international planning as the necessary condition of a unified and interdependent world. What it reveals is the impossibility of any such achievement in a world of capitalist states. The distribution of the results involves hazards for the interests upon which their governments depend too dangerous for them to incur. None is able to confront the necessary implications of economic internationalism because each confronts internal forces which are too zealous for their own chance of individual well-being to make sacrifices for the common good.

There can only be international planning, whether in the realm of disarmament or of economic matters, when the interests of states in the result is an equal interest. The inherent logic of a capitalist world is inequality; and this conference is merely a supreme illustration of the contradiction between world needs and an institutional system which denies their title to primary consideration.

Forest Reserves in Missouri

From the Kansas City Star.

AFORESTATION opportunity of a most inviting sort to this State and to the Federal Government is set forth in the program for Missouri participation in public works, soon to be undertaken. The report of the State committee is the most thorough ever made on this subject. It reveals that all of Missouri, and particularly the Ozarks region, would benefit heavily from even a moderate expenditure, making something more than 125,000 acres of land now of little value for other purposes into national forest reserves.

It is a notable fact that, while this State has a potential public forest area of 8,000,000 acres, it is wholly without any Federal, State or county reserves. Yet in the Ozark region there are a score or more counties with huge tracts that are sparsely timbered, poorly cultivated and unprofitable, even to the limited populations in them.

It is estimated that the cost to the Government of the slightly more than 500,000 acres would be $1,000,000 or less, or only about $2 an acre. The soil in these areas, it is shown, is well adopted for forestation and of scant value for any other purpose. If these areas were set aside as desired, Missouri, which now consumes more than four times its annual timber production, would be afforded in future years a timber supply of immense worth.

The counties affected are so grouped that the Federal requirement of at least 100,000 acres in any forest reserve could be reconciled with the State limitation of 25,000 acres for such use in any single county. Besides, the State limitation may be raised still further, the present representing an increase from only 2000 acres which was authorized b. the last Legislature. The first county land-use conference recommended that the State restriction on Federal forest reserves be removed altogether.

Tracts of marginal or submarginal land are subjected to wasteful erosion, the checking of which cannot be left to the individual owner. All the tracts contribute in some measure to surplus production. They fit into the administration program of removing such land from cultivation.

It is proposed that these tracts, from 40 acres upward, be taken over at small cost to the Government, both for prevention of erosion and for forestation. The benefits would include added employment for communities badly in need of it, increased land values, profitable leasing where desired, enlarged timber resources and the lessened farm production.

61,330 MAJORITY FOR REPEAL IN OREGON

State Also Votes 136,238 to 69,295 to Wipe Last State Dry Law From Books.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 22.—Oregon, after 18 years of prohibition in one form or another, today had become the twentieth state to vote repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and had erased every dry law from the statute books of the State.

Returns from 1643 precincts out of 1787 in the State showed 130,456 votes had been cast yesterday for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and 69,126 for its retention. This gave repeal a majority of 61,330.

State repeal had a greater margin of victory. On this proposition the yes vote was 136,238; no, 69,295. State repeal threw into the discard the remaining "constitutional" prohibition laws. The bone dry enforcing acts had been repealed in the last November election.

The constitutional convention to formally ratify repeal of the eighteenth amendment will be called by the Governor next month.

Only two of the 36 counties voted dry.

States that have voted for repeal are: Michigan, Wisconsin, Rhode Island, Wyoming, New Jersey, Delaware, Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, Illinois, Iowa, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Nevada, California, West Virginia, Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee and Oregon.

Arizona will vote on Aug. 8. Three other states—Missouri, Texas and Washington—also will decide the issue at the polls next month.

Before the end of the year at least 36 states—the required three-fourths—will have acted on repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Three additional states are expected to vote this year but the dates have not been set definitely.

Total Popular Vote for Repeal, 8,672,625 to 2,575,761.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—On the basis of partly official and slightly incomplete returns from the 20 states which so far have voted to repeal the eighteenth amendment, 8,672,625 votes have favored abolition of national prohibition against 2,575,761 favoring retention.

Until the first three Southern states—Arkansas, Tennessee and Alabama—voted during the last week, the ratio in favor of repeal had been about 4 to 1.

Smaller popular majorities for repeal in the three Southern states and in Oregon yesterday brought the ratio for repeal down to slightly more than 3 to 1.

Final votes in several states are still awaiting official canvass.

MAYOR REQUESTS LOCAL LABOR ON NEGRO HOSPITAL BUILDING

Contractor Says He Will Comply Except in Dressing of Indiana Stone.

A request that local labor be used wherever possible in construction of the administration building of the new Negro City Hospital was mailed by Mayor Dickmann yesterday to the Murch Bros. Construction Co., 4111 Lindell boulevard, which was awarded the general contract for construction on its low bid of $251,500. Work will begin in a few days.

The Mayor said he has been "besieged with requests" that local workers and materials be employed and asked that the firm use its good offices with sub-contractors toward that end.

A. J. Murch, president of the company, told the Post-Dispatch last night his firm's policy is to use local labor and materials whenever possible. "We are buying steel from a company whose main office is in St. Louis and whose plant is just across the river. Local stonecutters ask that we have the stone dressed here, but that is impossible. The local industry simply cannot compete with Indiana prices. With that exception, however, all of the major construction materials are being bought here."

PAPERHANGERS AND PAINTERS TO CONSIDER WORKING CODE

Contractors to Be Asked to Subscribe to Agreement of Master Craftsmen.

A joint meeting of organizations of painting, decorating and paperhanging contractors will be held at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the Washington Hotel, Kingshighway and Washington boulevard, for consideration of a code of fair competition under the industrial control act drafted by the Associated Contractors of Painting and Decorating.

A tentative code has been prepared by the organization and the Master Painters and Decorators' Association of Greater St. Louis, and the Associated Paperhanging and Decorating Contractors, Inc., will be asked to subscribe to it.

Speakers will include officers of the organizations, L. M. Rafferty, secretary of the Painters' District Council, and Charles Eisenring representing the paperhangers' union. John Ehrhardt is president of the organization which drafted the code, and Martin P. Walsh is secretary.

Col. Everett W. Foster Dies.

WATSONVILLE, Cal., July 22.—Col. Everett W. Foster, 98 years old, commander of the G. A. R. here and one-time door-keeper of the United States Senate, died today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank L. Sellecko. A native of Massachusetts, Col. Foster fought in the Civil War, and afterward was surveyor-general of Louisiana. The body will be cremated and the ashes sent to Bloomington, Ill., for burial.

State Also Votes 136,238 to 69,295 to Wipe Last State Dry Law From Books.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 22.—Oregon, after 18 years of prohibition in one form or another, today had become the twentieth state to vote repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and had erased every dry law from the statute books of the State.

Returns from 1643 precincts out of 1787 in the State showed 130,456 votes had been cast yesterday for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and 69,126 for its retention. This gave repeal a majority of 61,330.

State repeal had a greater margin of victory. On this proposition the yes vote was 136,238; no, 69,295. State repeal threw into the discard the remaining "constitutional" prohibition laws. The bone dry enforcing acts had been repealed in the last November election.

The constitutional convention to formally ratify repeal of the eighteenth amendment will be called by the Governor next month.

Only two of the 36 counties voted dry.

States that have voted for repeal are: Michigan, Wisconsin, Rhode Island, Wyoming, New Jersey, Delaware, Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, Illinois, Iowa, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Nevada, California, West Virginia, Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee and Oregon.

Arizona will vote on Aug. 8. Three other states—Missouri, Texas and Washington—also will decide the issue at the polls next month.

Before the end of the year at least 36 states—the required three-fourths—will have acted on repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Three additional states are expected to vote this year but the dates have not been set definitely.

Total Popular Vote for Repeal, 8,672,625 to 2,575,761.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—On the basis of partly official and slightly incomplete returns from the 20 states which so far have voted to repeal the eighteenth amendment, 8,672,625 votes have favored abolition of national prohibition against 2,575,761 favoring retention.

Until the first three Southern states—Arkansas, Tennessee and Alabama—voted during the last week, the ratio in favor of repeal had been about 4 to 1.

Smaller popular majorities for repeal in the three Southern states and in Oregon yesterday brought the ratio for repeal down to slightly more than 3 to 1.

Final votes in several states are still awaiting official canvass.

Contractor Says He Will Comply Except in Dressing of Indiana Stone.

A request that local labor be used wherever possible in construction of the administration building of the new Negro City Hospital was mailed by Mayor Dickmann yesterday to the Murch Bros. Construction Co., 4111 Lindell boulevard, which was awarded the general contract for construction on its low bid of $251,500. Work will begin in a few days.

The Mayor said he has been "besieged with requests" that local workers and materials be employed and asked that the firm use its good offices with sub-contractors toward that end.

A. J. Murch, president of the company, told the Post-Dispatch last night his firm's policy is to use local labor and materials whenever possible. "We are buying steel from a company whose main office is in St. Louis and whose plant is just across the river. Local stonecutters ask that we have the stone dressed here, but that is impossible. The local industry simply cannot compete with Indiana prices. With that exception, however, all of the major construction materials are being bought here."

PAPERHANGERS AND PAINTERS TO CONSIDER WORKING CODE

Contractors to Be Asked to Subscribe to Agreement of Master Craftsmen.

A joint meeting of organizations of painting, decorating and paperhanging contractors will be held at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the Washington Hotel, Kingshighway and Washington boulevard, for consideration of a code of fair competition under the industrial control act drafted by the Associated Contractors of Painting and Decorating.

A tentative code has been prepared by the organization and the Master Painters and Decorators' Association of Greater St. Louis, and the Associated Paperhanging and Decorating Contractors, Inc., will be asked to subscribe to it.

Speakers will include officers of the organizations, L. M. Rafferty, secretary of the Painters' District Council, and Charles Eisenring representing the paperhangers' union. John Ehrhardt is president of the organization which drafted the code, and Martin P. Walsh is secretary.

Col. Everett W. Foster Dies.

WATSONVILLE, Cal., July 22.—Col. Everett W. Foster, 98 years old, commander of the G. A. R. here and one-time door-keeper of the United States Senate, died today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank L. Sellecko. A native of Massachusetts, Col. Foster fought in the Civil War, and afterward was surveyor-general of Louisiana. The body will be cremated and the ashes sent to Bloomington, Ill., for burial.

SWEDEN EXPANDS "RESERVE WORKS" PROGRAM

of these years. And the communities take a pride in what was done then. The local Mayor makes a point of driving the foreign visitor by a round-about road so that he can say: "There is the bridge we built in 1922, our reserve work."

Through 1931 and 1932 the number of unemployed increased very rapidly. This increase was so rapid that only about 35 per cent of the unemployed on the register were given aid through reserve work. Of the balance, approximately another third received direct relief. And the remaining third was provided for through private institutions or received unemployment benefits from trade union funds. The last has been an important factor, for the strongly organized unions were able during prosperous times to amass considerable sums for unemployment benefits.

New Party Seeks Means to Restore Buying Power.

When the Social-Democrats came into power, the heads of the Government decided it was time to make a positive move not only to relieve unemployment in a more complete and systematic fashion, but, also, and perhaps more important, to restore dwindling buying power. As explained to the writer by Gustave Moeller, Minister of Labor and the Interior, and Prime Minister Per Albin Hansson, the plan was intended to put virtually the whole number of the unemployed to work for one year on a wage scale virtually equivalent to the trade union scale.

The Government would re-employ on a series of State projects and by means of subsidies to private industry about 130,000 men. While the total of the unemployed in March was 185,000, this figure would drop, as a result of seasonal employment, during the spring to about 140,000. This gives an idea of the bold scope of the Government's plan. And these figures must, of course, be taken relatively, for when contrasted with America's millions they seem small. Yet in relation to the size of the country, and the extent of resources, the measure is bold, indeed.

Financing Plan Brings Outcry From Capitalists.

To finance this year's program the Government must raise about $42,880,000. This would be found through the sale of short-term Government obligations carrying a guarantee to repay within about six years. To repay these obligations the Government would impose new taxes, chiefly inheritance taxes, increasing the present high of 20 per cent to 42 per cent, the latter applying on the largest fortunes where there was no direct heir.

This radical plan caused an immediate outcry from the conservatives. The proposed taxation was confiscatory of capital, they said. There are relatively few capitalists of large fortune in Sweden and they are dominated by one family—really by one man, Knute A. Wallenberg, the head of that family. Wallenberg is 80 years old. Should he die within the next six years, the proposed inheritance tax would strike very heavily at his great fortune.

While in the past the Wallenbergs and other capitalists have offered some resistance to the various steps toward socialization, state ownership, state monopoly, co-operation, they have for the most part been content to operate in the field of heavy industry for export and shipping, leaving the domestic field to become relatively socialized. It has even been said that the Wallenbergs have given a hand in helping the co-operatives, believing that they were a means of strengthening the internal economy and increasing the contentment of the people. Political parties have been in violent opposition from time to time, but in almost every issue there was achieved a working compromise, a middle ground, which in the end both Right and Left parties accepted with a good grace. In effect, the whole people worked for the common good of the country. There is a kind of sanity here so that pretentiousness and display of wealth have had little place. There has never been the shocking disparity between extreme rich and extreme poor that exists in many parts of the world.

Reaction in Germany Helped Stiffen Conservative Opposition.

The Social-Democratic unemployment program called forth, however, a new kind of opposition. Many persons in the right said, in effect: "Now the time has come to unite and put a stop to this process, for, you see, it menaces private wealth in those very fields that have hitherto been reserved, even by the Socialists, for private wealth." This stiffening of the conservatives was abetted by the violent reaction in Germany. Throughout Europe the capitalist-owning class and all its dependents have welcomed the German reaction. There have been many rumors that capitalists in many countries have seen fit to invest with Hitler in stability. In Sweden there has always been a strong German element, a group of industrialists and upper middle-class who have imitated German methods and manners. During the war the presence of a larger German element in the court, due partly to the fact that the Queen was a German Princess, gave a pro-German cast to the upper class. But even if these factor could be dismissed, there is the very tangible fact that Swedish banks have an amount estimated at $200,000,0000 invested in German loans of one kind and another.

The conservatives in the present controversy resorted to tactics hitherto considered beneath their contempt. They staged a demonstration intended to rival labor's demonstration on May 1. Counts and Countesses and aide-de-camps to the Crown Prince and aide-de-camps to Prince Eugen and employes of Stockholm's largest department store and many, many people who wanted the honor of marching with Counts and Countesses took part in this demonstration. All through April and May those who were most anxious to see the conservative front strengthened inflexibly against the Social-Democrats and the other parties of the Left predicted that there would be no yielding on this question.

Labor and Farm Parties Work Out a Compromise.

But eventually the Social-Democrats worked out a compromise agreement with the Farmers' party. This is the first time that labor and the farmer have come to an understanding on a major program. The Conservatives held aloof, but their opposition was passive rather than active. They gave indication of realizing that the compromise agreement was the most satisfactory which could be worked out for the good of the whole country. That is the way things are done here. Once the course has been chosen there is neither recession nor recrimination; the ultimate action is accepted by all as representing the best that could be achieved. Both the Conservatives and the Social-Democrats have agreed that the extreme of Hitlerism and the extreme of Communism have no place in Sweden.

To secure the support of the Farmer party the Social-Democrats made certain concessions. They agreed that the wage-scale paid to the unemployed should not be the scale of the trade unions. Instead, the unemployed are to receive the highest wage paid to unskilled labor in the locality in which the state work is to be carried out. Further, the Social-Democrats agreed not to abolish the Unemployment Commission, which was one of the objectives of their original measure. These are the chief concessions they have made. The essentials of their program remain the same. This program carried in the first chamber of the Parliament by a vote of 81 to 49 and in the second chamber without a roll-call. An unemployment insurance scheme was defeated, or, rather, postponed until the emergency program should be at least in part carried out.

Minister of Interior Discusses Future of Plan.

"The wage scale was not the thing of essential importance," Moeller said to the writer. "What we wanted to do was to re-employ the whole number of the unemployed. Even though we do not secure the union scale of wages, we will nevertheless pay a good wage—that is, we shall restore buying power for one year to very nearly the level of 1930. That has been the primary aim.

"What world conditions will be at the end of the year I can't attempt to say. But I don't believe we will have lost anything from having tried this means of combating the depression. At least we will have put about $40,000,000 into circulation. If conditions throughout the world have not improved at the end of a year, then it is possible that our program will have failed to effect any permanent good, and we may have to consider far more drastic measures. And perhaps this program will have prepared the way for the next steps which we must take."

All Parties Work Together in Full Co-operation.

The final result is a program on which all parties unite. That is the interesting and important thing to the outside observer. Throughout the economic history of Sweden, Norway and Denmark one may trace this effective, working compromise. It has been in this way that progress had been achieved; through co-operation, between Socialists and Conservatives; between capital and labor; and always to the end that the whole people may live in a large measure of comfort and peace. There has been nothing grandiloquent, nothing fanatical, nothing even, in the strictest sense, idealistic about the modest economic reforms that have been achieved here; they have been practical and effective.

It is easy in certain respects to dismiss the contribution of Sweden and the other Scandinavian countries; to point out that they have never had to maintain the status of a major Power; that they have a homogeneous people who are of a stable and educable nature; that they are small in size and simple in economic structure. But when one has made these and other qualifications that occur, the fact of their contribution still remains.

Says Rigid Economic Concepts Are Outmoded.

There are those here in Sweden who say, of course, that the process of evolutionary socializing has gone further in other European countries. Prof. Eli Heckscher of the University of Commerce in Stockholm, a conservative economist, holds that England has gone farther than Sweden. He points to the strength of the co-operative movement in England. It is true that in almost every country in Europe social experiments similar to those in Scandinavia have been tried and successfully tried. Austria, for example, has co-operative and communal housing on a large scale.

"We will not have a capitalist or communist or socialist 'system,'" says Prof. Heckscher, talking of the economic future of the world. "In my opinion the economic state of the future will be a patchwork, made up of borrowings from all systems. It will be apparent that it will be impossible to compress economic and social life within a mold by virtue of a formula. We shall take what is good from each system, modify it, alter it to suit our needs. It seems to me that the sooner we rid ourselves of rigid economic concepts, the better off we shall be. We have been trained to think in terms of formula and system. And it is difficult to make human life conform. There is no reason why we should make human nature conform.

"That may be the contribution of this country. We are masters of summation. We borrow an idea, a form, a pattern, and we sum it up in an entirely new way, so that it may almost be said to be a new form. We have done this in our economic life and in our artistic life. We take the economic form and we change it to suit our own purposes, to suit the best interests of all the people. If we have made a contribution to economics that, in my opinion, is it; to borrow the concept, the form, and to show how it may be altered to fit the needs of people living together in our complex modern world."

Sweden has, as well, made many direct contributions. The state power system here has been the model for many nations. The methods of the co-operatives in wholesale and retail trade have had a wide influence outside of Scandinavia. Just the other day Hitler asked Albin Johannson, the head of the Co-Operative Union, to go to Germany to assist in shaping German co-operation along Swedish lines. Hitherto the co-operatives in Germany have operated in a fashion almost as wasteful, because of the existence of competing wholesale co-operatives, as private, profit-making corporations, and the consequence has been that the German consumer has benefited very little from co-operation. Denmark's agricultural co-operatives have served as model for many far larger countries.

What Sweden Has Contributed Toward Sanity in Living.

But more important than these direct contributions has been the example that Scandinavia has given the world of the art of peaceful living. There is saneness here. A balance has been struck between man and the machine; between the individual and society; between nature and civilization; between anarchy and tyranny; between capitalism and socialism. It is a good place to live. One sees that, in an index that is truer than any economist's graph—the faces of the people in the streets. They are calm faces on which there is a kind of placidity that seems to the foreign observer to be comprised of contentment and resignation and understanding and pride. It is a modern world—none more so in Europe; more telephones, more motor cars, more electric washing machines; but it is not neurotic, it is not strained, it is not staccato.

The world depression, intolerably prolonged, has brought changes during the last three years. There are beggars and panhandlers in the streets of Stockholm. In the north there are areas where unemployment is widespread and distress has begun to be grave. But these phenomena cannot be compared with the inroads the depression has made elsewhere in Europe and in America. Here in the north the fundamentals of a good life have been preserved. It is a good place to live, and not only for the upper middle class and the middle class, but for the worker, too. By state competition in numerous fields of industry, a check on the excesses of capitalism—this stern, northern land has been brought under the rational control of men living in a complex society.

Secretary Swanson On Need for More Adequate Navy

a sporadic building policy. All the ships built at one time become overage at the same time, presenting anew the problem of an emergency building program or an overage navy. Still another fault with such a practice is that it makes it impossible for a navy to keep up with scientific developments in warships.

Under a revolving building program, such as other Powers have worked out, by which an average number of vessels is laid down every year, this year's ships benefit by each previous year's program, and by this and past years' scientific development.

Need of Man-Power.

Equally important with the ship strength of a navy is its man-strength. In this respect also we have fallen far behind. The 79,700 men who make up the present personnel of the navy constitute only 83 per cent of the number required to man our ships to full peace time strength. It takes a certain number of men to keep the immense amount of machinery of a fighting ship in condition.

One of the chief jobs of the crew is to see that the mechanical equipment of a vessel is kept in first-class order, ready for any demands that may be made upon it. When a ship is only partially manned something is found to suffer. Either the vessel will deteriorate more rapidly than she would with proper care, or, if the reduced crew spends extra hours in upkeep of the ship, maneuvers and training time of the men must be cut down. Again, false economy.

Fully as important as the peace-time strength which we must have to keep our fighting ships in condition is the war-time strength we must be able to mobilize in short order on demand. With seafaring nations, where so many boys go to sea at some time or other, the enlisting of an efficient naval personnel in a hurry does not present much of a problem. But American boys do not go to sea as a rule, and an inexperienced youth, bright though he may be, must spend a year or a year and a half on board ship before he can become really useful.

Work of Reserve.

The naval reserve program has for a number of years encouraged former navy men and members of the merchant marine to keep in training for emergency duty on fighting ships. The new naval reserve act of 1925 provided for 48 drills a year and a two weeks' cruise with pay on a naval vessel every summer. The reserves are subject to call in time of emergency.

This program has proved very successful in keeping a source of reserve strength in readiness for duty on ships in time of need. However this year's naval reserve appropriation has been reduced, necessitating a reduction in the number of drills for the reserves from 48 to 24 annually.

The reserve is a very essential part of our naval establishment, particularly so when the navy is short of its regular personnel.

No one understands the needs for, and the requirements of the navy better than does President Roosevelt. I am sure the country will fully sustain him in all his efforts for a navy adequate to protect the territory, commerce, and rights of the United States.

RELIEF AGENCY'S FARM HELPS FEED 2800 DAILY

80-Acre Tract Furnishes Vegetables for Cafeteria of Bureau for Homeless Men.

Fresh vegetables from the 80-acre truck farm of the Bureau for Homeless Men at Ballwin, St. Louis County, are supplying the bureau's cafeteria at Sixteenth and Pine streets with food for 2800 needy men every day.

G. Myron Gwinner, secretary of the bureau, estimated yesterday the truck farm saves the bureau $1500 a month. It has enabled the cafeteria to serve a well-balanced meal for 8 cents, he said.

Aside from its value as a source of food, the truck farm is regarded as desirable because it affords a means of permitting those helped by the bureau to pay for that assistance. All able-bodied men on its rolls are required to work at the farm two or three days a month.

Each day about 75 men are taken there in trucks. For the day's work they are allowed a credit of $3 against relief extended to them, and are given 25 cents in cash. Transient boys sent to the farm, Gwinner said, have entered into the work in holiday spirit, improving the morale of the older men who work with them.

Recent dry weather has retarded crops, but the men have been busy each day cultivating and harvesting. Among the products the farm has yielded are potatoes, cabbage, tomatoes, string beans, corn, peas, green peppers, carrots, turnips and lima beans.

FLYING PLANS OF MATTERN

To Go to Terrace, B. C., Then to New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Irving Friedman, who financed an expedition to seek Jimmie Mattern in Alaska when the Texas flyer was missing, said today he had arranged for Mattern to fly at once from Nome to join the group at Terrace, B. C.

Friedman said he had sent Mattern funds to charter a plane for the flight. When the Texan reaches Terrace, he and William Alexander, chief pilot of the expedition, will fly back to New York. The aviators are expected here Monday or Tuesday. From Terrace their route will be to Edmonton, Saskatoon and Winnipeg, Canada, and thence to Duluth, Buffalo and New York.

9 SEA SCOUTS ARRIVE TOMORROW BY CANOE

Making Trip From Chicago at Rate of 35 to 40 Miles a Day.

Nine St. Louis Sea Scouts and their skipper will arrive here tomorrow morning in four orange and white canoes after a 400-mile trip by river from Chicago. The scouts will dock at the foot of Washington avenue.

Those on the trip are members of the Sea Scout Ship "St. Louisan," which is sponsored by West Park Baptist Church, Hodiamont and Wells avenue. They left St. Louis by bus on July 8, spent several days at the World's Fair and set out for home in the Chicago Drainage Canal on Friday July 14. The two-week trip is costing each boy about $15.

The scouts' route lay via the Drainage Canal and the Des Plaines, Illinois, and Mississippi Rivers. They paddle about 35 or 40 miles a day and camp along the route. A slight storm which came up when they were at Lockport at the end of the canal delayed them for a day.

Irvin Keefer is skipper of the crew and Robert Rothenberg is first mate. Others on the trip, all Wellston boys, are Stanley Horn, Homer Simpson, George Bagot, Jack Talley, Porter McAdams, Robert Kirchner, Charles Fox and Henry McGuire. The boys are all between 16 and 18 years old.

The trip is financed by benefits and barbecues given by the boys. They worked and saved hard all during the winter and finally were able to buy the canoes.

Another groups of Sea Scouts, from Milwaukee, Chicago and Aurora, Ill., came through St. Louis last week in their yacht "Blow-me-Down," on their way to New Orleans. They stayed only long enough to be greeted by members of the Young Men's Chamber of Commerce.

Troop Notes

The St. Louis World Jamboree scout troop was scheduled to be in Interlaken, Switzerland, today on its leisurely journey from England to the jamboree, which opens Tuesday, Aug. 1, at Godollo, Hungary. From Interlaken the troop will go by way of Montreux, Switzerland and Milan, Italy, to Venice, Italy, where it will stay Wednesday and Thursday.

From Venice there will be a one day's journey to Vienna and Saturday and Sunday will be spent in the Austrian capital. From there the troop will go by boat on the Danube to Budapest, which is only 17 miles from Godollo. The last cablegram, like all previous ones, said all scouts were well and "having much fun."

An Indian pageant will be staged by the 200 scouts at the scout reservation at Irondale next Sunday afternoon. In past years this affair has attracted many parents from St. Louis and residents of the Iron Mountain district. The pageant will bring to a close a special two-week section of the camp devoted entirely to Indian lore, customs, manners and food.

Scouts and their parents from Troop 198, St. John's Episcopal Church, held a picnic and campfire gathering at the scoutmasters' lodge near Fenton last Thursday. About 75 scouts and parents attended. After a basket supper the scouts and fathers lined up for a ball game in which C. H. Laemmli, field commissioner, pitched for both sides.

Three of the patrols performed stunts around the campfire and Scoutmaster L. John Lewis told campfire stories.

Troop 14, Alhambra Grotto, will hold a father and son overnight hike to the scoutmasters' lodge this week-end. Troop Commissioner C. H. Boss is in charge of the outing.

JEAN IRENE CAMPBELL, FORMER ST. LOUISAN, DIES

Once Newspaper Woman Here; Succumbed Last Sunday in New York.

Friends in St. Louis learned yesterday of the death of Jean Irene Campbell, former newspaper woman here. Miss Campbell, 43 years old, died of peritonitis Sunday in New York, where she was employed in the promotion department of the New York American. The body was cremated and the ashes sent to her mother, Mrs. Jane C. Hunter of Los Angeles, the former Mrs. Jesse A. Campbell of St. Louis.

Miss Campbell figured in the news in St. Louis more than 20 years ago when she and her divorced husband, Harry Hyland Lyon, disputed over the custody of their three children. She finally obtained custody of the oldest son, Hyland, but another son, Hugh, and a daughter, Betty, were adopted by other families. She was reunited later with Hugh, but died not knowing that her daughter had only recently found her maternal grandmother in Los Angeles.

FLINT CHEVROLET BANKRUPT

Company at 4714 Delmar Files Voluntary Petition.

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in Federal Court yesterday by the Flint Chevrolet Co., 4714 Delmar boulevard.

The company, through its president, Frank A. Flint, says it is unable to pay its debts and wishes to surrender its property for the benefit of creditors. No schedule of assets and liabilities was filed. The company was founded in 1919, with capital stock of $60,000.

CHURCH ELECTION IN GERMANY TODAY

Chancellor Hitler Makes Last-Minute Appeal for Support of Nazi Candidates.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 22.—On the eve of general church elections, Chancellor Hitler tonight told Protestant Germany he wanted the results to be in support of the new political rule.

With his speech the Chancellor concluded an unparalleled campaign in which the entire political machinery of the National Socialist party, now tantamount to the state, has been working on the side of the German Christians, an organization of Nazi churchmen.

Some 400,000 church elders and members of church governing boards are to be chosen. They in turn will elect delegates to provincial synods, and from these will emerge delegates to the national synod to choose the Reichs Bishop.

The Catholic Chancellor, whose anticipated conversion to Protestantism has been officially denied, admonished Protestants that they had obligations toward the state for its protection of the church against Bolshevism.

"I am not interested in questions of faith, dogmas or teachings," he said. "These are pure church matters. But superseding these are problems which force the leader of the state to take a stand."

Combating Bolshevism.

"The church expects protection from the state which in turn is entitled to expect allegiance from the church. A church which is unable to support the state is just as worthless to the state as a state which does not protect churches is to the church.

"Every political evolution affects the churches. Only the insane believe triumph of Communism would have left the Catholic and Protestant churches unscathed.

"Neither the Catholic, Protestant nor Russian churches have combated or could combat Bolshevism."

The Chancellor hailed the Vatican concordat as a defensive measure against Bolshevism similar to the Lateran concordat.

"As a Nazi I have the most urgent wish to have a no less clear understanding with the Protestant church," he asserted. "The state is not interested in consulting 20 or 30 churches when it is possible to consult one."

Comparison With Priests.

Touching on opposition to Nazi Christians within Protestant churches, the Chancellor said some pastors were acting "in the same most sharp and often fanatical way against Naziism as had the Roman priests."

Basing his plea on domestic unity as the easiest way to solve Germany's problems, Hitler concluded with an appeal that the faction supporting the Government be elected tomorrow.

Nazi Christians paraded in Berlin today, showing banners that read, "Away with baptized Jews, away with Jew pastors."

Officials in Mecklenberg-Schwerin forbade any election activity by non-Nazis.

Nazis Ordered to Vote.

Chancellor Hitler's right-hand man, Rudolf Hess, has ordered every Protestant Nazi to go to the polls and to cast his ballot for German Christians as a matter of duty. Opposing is a determined group of men known as the Young Reformatory Government, headed by such men as the Rev. Friedrich von Bodelschwingh, original choice of non-political groups for Bishop.

The ticket of the latter group was to bear the slogan "Evangelical Christians," but by Government order it had to be changed to "Gospel and Church."

All men and women over the age of 24, whose baptismal certificates indicate they are Protestants, are entitled to vote. Since balloting by the Nazis has been made mandatory, thousands who have not seen the inside of a church since the day they were confirmed are expected to be on hand at the conclusion of the morning services.

CRYSTAL CITY PLANT RAISES WAGES 10 PCT.

1000 Employes of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. Get Increase in Hourly Rate.

One thousand employes of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. plant at Crystal City, Mo., received a 10 per cent wage increase, effective last Sunday.

The increase, for employes paid by the hour only, places the wage scale slightly higher than that of 1929, as there has been but one wage cut during the depression, a 7.4 per cent reduction last October, according to G. W. Oakes, plant superintendent.

Income of workers, however, has been sharply reduced in the past three years, as many have been laid off and others placed on half-time or quarter-time basis. Most of the employes are working a full eight-hour day now, Oakes said, with a few working overtime and others six hours a day.

About 100 "white-collar" employes probably will receive salary increases next week, Oakes said.

Ford Car and Truck Sales Up 19 Per Cent Over June a Year Ago

Month Best for Company Since It Began Making V-8 Cars a Year Ago.

Sales of Ford eight-cylinder cars and trucks in the United States in June exceeded those in June a year ago by 19.4 per cent, according to a message from Detroit to M. N. Johnson, St. Louis manager of the Ford Motor Co.

"June was the biggest month in eight-cylinder car sales since the Ford Motor Co. began producing them a year ago," said Johnson. "We were certain that the June increase would be large because we had been experiencing the same increase in demand for Ford V-8s in the St. Louis area.

"Another evidence of the growing popularity of the eight-cylinder car is reflected in the sales of Ford cars for the month of June in Wayne County, Michigan, in which Detroit is located. County registrations show that 2555 Ford V-8s were delivered to customers during the month." The 2555 deliveries were an increase of 25 per cent over May sales.

"A decided increase in the use of eight-cylinder engines for haulage units is shown in the sale of Ford V-8 commercial cars and trucks in the United States since the first of the year.

"Sales of Ford eight-cylinder commercial cars and trucks in June showed an increase of more than 60 per cent over May."

Aluminum Used Extensively in New Ford V-8 Autos

One of the first to use expensive, long-lasting steels and fine alloys, it was but natural for the Ford Motor Co. to watch and study the development of light alloys in the aluminum field.

"The fact that aluminum costs considerably more than iron is not the point with us," said a Ford executive.

"If the newer light alloy has advantages which will benefit the motorist, that is the only factor to which Ford gives consideration."

"Today the Ford organization is one of the largest users of aluminum in the industry.

"In the matter of pistons for example: For several years Ford has used aluminum pistons. They cost more than iron, but aluminum pistons improve the all-around performance of a car. Much of the speed, getaway and pep of the new Ford is traceable to aluminum pistons."

"Then Ford reasoned as follows: As aluminum pistons have made possible such a high degree of efficiency in the bottom half of the combustion chamber, it seems reasonable to assume that if the cylinder head were made of aluminum, the engine would gain marked operating advantages.

So today the new Ford comes with aluminum alloy cylinder heads.

"Some of the advantages of the aluminum cylinder head are improved performance, higher engine output with lower fuel consumption, higher compression, slower and lighter accumulation of carbon deposits, smoother operation, increased valve life, lower oil temperatures, elimination of ping, reduction of weight.

"In addition to aluminum pistons and aluminum cylinder heads, the new Ford has an aluminum valve chamber cover and aluminum distributer bracket, a die cast aluminum carburetor and other aluminum items of equal importance."

Says Boulder Dam Is World's Toughest Place for Truck Tire

"The toughest place in the world for tires is Boulder City, where the gigantic Boulder Dam is being built to harness the power of the Colorado River," according to F. R. Harris, St. Louis branch manager for the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co.

"Boulder Dam,' he declared, "combines everything that the most imaginative automotive engineer could think of to give a test to tires. The heat of the place is terrific. From the bare, rocky canyon sides the glare of the sun is magnified onto the roadways used by the trucks.

"The roads, in addition to being intensely hot from this focused sunlight, are merciless on tires. They are winding and steep, requiring strenuous braking. To top these things off, the tires must bear tremendous weight.

"The very heaviest types of trucks are employed on the job. These are used day and night to haul tons of rock and dirt blasted from the canyon sides. In all, with the heat, the roads and the loads, the tires used must stand more punishment than can be given on any man-made tire testing ground yet devised.

"Kelly-Springfield tires are now being used in the Boulder Dam project. Kellys won first place in competition and are now being used almost exclusively.

"The lake reservoir is to be 115 miles long, and will contain enough water to cover the State of Connecticut to a deph of 10 feet. It will be able to irrigate more than 1,000,000 acres, and will furnish a domestic water supply for 10,000,000 people. In addition, it will develop a million horse-power in electricity."

No Cross Roads on Super Highway.

A super highway has been completed in Germany, after three years' construction. The road, near Wesseling, is more than 55 feet wide, and is approached on ramps running in the direction of moving traffic. It crosses all feeder roads on bridges.

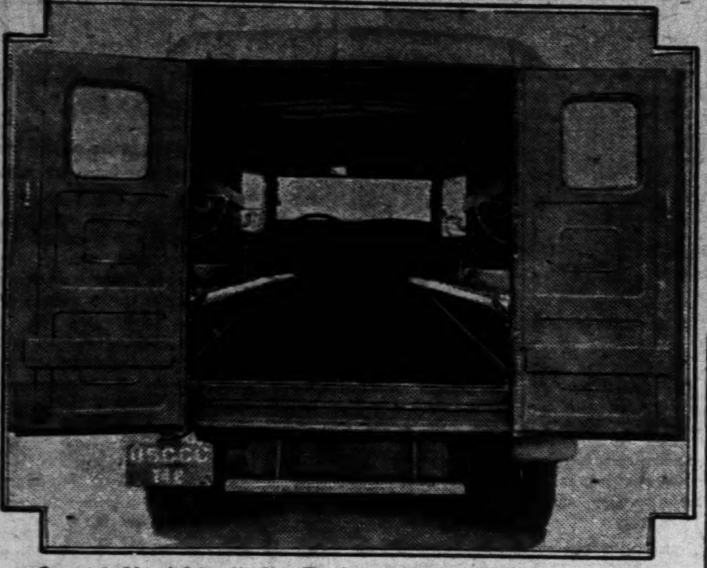
Ford Ambulances for Army



One of 30 eight-cylinder Ford ambulances delivered recently to the United States Army for use in Forest Service camps throughout the country.

The standard Ford all-steel 131-inch de luxe panel model served as the basis for the ambulances. The interior equipment is a development by the Medical Department Equipment Laboratory at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania. Space is provided to seat ten patients. If recliining patients are to be carried, accommodations are available for four stretchers and two sitting patients.

High road speed and exceptional riding qualities arre provided by use of the Ford V-8, 75 horsepower engine and special rear springs.

Looking Over The Cars

Hudson's super-six engine has the highest compression ratio in the company's line. It is 6.21 to 1, making it one of the highest on passenger car list.

Hupp's running boards may not be the longest in the field, but they look it in conjunction with those small, highly arched fenders.

Graham does things by threes this year. It has three lines of cars with three body types in each; two coupes and a sedan.

Changes in the transmission gearing makes the 1933 Chevrolet faster in both low and second gear.

Reo's new automatic transmission, a four-speed type, is said to be the predecessor of others which will have an even greater number of speeds.

Oldsmobile uses cowl ventilators in addition to the no-draft arrangement in the windows of its various body styles.

Nash still goes in for a maximum number of engine main bearings, with nine on the eights and seven on its six-cylinder lines.

DeSoto is another car which has an independent mounting for radiator and fenders.

Chrysler's latest model reflects the corporation's conviction that there are buyers who have big families and small purses. It is the seven-passenger sedan just introduced on the Royal 8 chassis. The wheelbase is stretched to 128½ inches.

The basic difference between Pierce-Arrow's power brakes and those used by other car makers is in the source of the power. It comes from the rear wheels on a Pierce-Arrow instead of the engine, as in other cars using such systems.

Rubber, rubber everywhere in today's automobiles. Packard, for instance, uses it in its radiator mounting.

The wheels of an Austin are as large as those on most passenger cars, larger than those on a majority. They are 18 inches in diameter as compared with 17 on the average car.

Graham is another car which utilizes metal in the under construction of its bodies—on the two smaller members of the line.

The windshield of the Oldsmobile is locked in place. It makes no difference, however, for, in addition to the no-draft ventilators in the windows, there are the usual ones in the cowl.

Hupp uses a rubber mounted strut at the rear of the engine to prevent fore and aft movement of the power plant when the gears are being shifted.

Another feature that makes Nash cars easier to drive is the treadle-type accelerator.

Pontiac's water pump bushings carry enough lubricant to last six months.

Hudson-Essex cars are not standardized as to auxiliary light location. On some models the small lights are placed on the fenders while on others they are to be found quite low on the sides of the cowl.

Rockne's two-door models live up to the Studebaker tradition that doors shall be wide.

Know why Chevrolet abandoned chromium plated door-type hood louvers? Because an investigation of what the public wanted indicated that it desired less ornamentation in this year's automobiles.

Here's an easy way to tell the Auburn "eight" from the "12"; the salon series, that is. The radiator grille of the former is vertical; in the case of the latter, the lines are horizontal.

Continental's Ace series has an entirely different type of automatic clutch. It is predicted that the mechanism is destined for wider use among passenger cars.

Marmon's "16" gets along very well without any radiator ornament.

Plymouth's 1933 models carry a very simple series designation. It is just "1933."

Alcohol-Gasoline Blend Report Made To Auto C. of C.

The following report on the technical aspects of the utilization of alcohol-gasoline blends as automobile fuels has been prepared by a special subcommittee of the Co-operative Research Committee at the request of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce:

"Comparing gasoline and the proposed 10 per cent alcohol mixture in the same gasoline, the following are established facts:

"Acceleration is the outstanding performance characteristic demanded by the public, and carburetors are set for this. For equal acceleration, the fuel consumption with the blend is approximately 4 per cent higher than with the straight gasoline. This statement is based on measured performance in cars and corresponds to the heat content of the respective fuels.

"Engine starting is more difficult with the alcohol blend. The tendency to vapor lock is greater with the blend, and still greater if adjusted to give equal starting ability.

"The alcohol blend has a higher anti-knock value of approximately five octane units, but at a much higher cost per unit than by other available means.

"The tendency of alcohol to absorb moisture from the air and the water which normally accumulates in gasoline during storage and service is frequently sufficient to cause separation of the alcohol from gasoline.

"The committee desires to point out that there are other problems arising from the use of alcohol blends, such as corrosion of engine and fuel pipe lines, and the effect of the solvent action of the blends. It also calls attention to the fact that less horsepower hours are available per dollar in blends than in gasoline, but refrains from stressing these economic facts or such other aspects as law enforcement, tax evasion, or reasons for using alcohol in countries which have no petroleum sources.

"The above facts are drawn from a mass of contributing data, collected from the automotive and petroleum industries and the Bureau of Standards."

Auto Traffic Death Decrease Reported By 50 U. S. Cities

Fatalities due to motor vehicle accidents decreased 16 per cent in 50 cities in the past six months, according to returns made by municipalities entered for the Sinclair national safety award. These cities reported 1072 motor vehicle fatalities in the period from October, 1932, to March, 1933. This total was 211 below the figures for the corresponding period a year ago.

Thirty-five cities of 200,000 population and under reported 247 fatalities and 7649 persons injured in motor traffic accidents. Nine cities of 500,000 population and under made returns showing 285 fatalities and 9073 persons injured. Six cities with population above 500,000 reported 540 fatalities and 17,546 persons injured. For all 50 cities, fatalities during the six months' period average 8.2 per 100,000 population, and injuries, 263.9 per 100,000 population.

The safety award of $10,000 made through the Sinclair Refining Co., is offered by H. F. Sinclair, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Consolidated Oil Corporation. It will be made to the two cities and the state having the best motor vehicle safety records. Besides accident figures, the determining factors will include population, motor vehicle registration and the element of traffic risk. The award period will close with September ,1933.

Both Terraplanes Climb in High Hill Hitherto Unconquered

One more hill previously unconquered has been climbed by a Terraplane car at Alton Bay, N. H., at the foot of Lake Winnepesaukee, is a hill which has a reputation throughout New Hampshire for never having been climbed by any car in high gear. Hundreds of attempts had been made in the past 10 years in vain until natives, hearing of the Mount Washington climb, invited Chet and Al Miller to make the attempt.

Taking with them Bill Taylor, the A. A. A. observer who accompanied the cars on the Mount Washington climbs, the Millers drove to Alton Bay. Official records will show that not only did Al Miller make the climb in high gear in the Terraplane Six, but he did not even unload some 400 pounds of baggage carried in the rear deck of the car, making it on the first attempt with Taylor seated by his side.

Following the official run with Taylor, Al Miller made the ascent in high gear 11 more times accompanied by residents of Alton Bay.

With the Terraplane eight it was possible to start the car in low gear at the bottom and make the ascent. The hill is three quarters of a mile long with a grade which reaches a maximum of 22 per cent. The road is dirt with a sharp bend, a twisting turn at the bottom which makes it impossible to get much of a start. After that, it is a straight climb to the top.

According to a member of the Society of Automotive Engineers the next five years will bring about the complete operation of an automobile by one small dial on the steering wheel.

Cities Service Map Shows All Routes to Chicago World's Fair

Cities Service Company has prepared a special souvenir road map celebrating the 100th anniversary of Chicago. It is printed in four colors, and contains a complete layout of the World's Fair with all buildings shown. Included in the map is a brief description of the fair grounds, the main points of interest, and the most spectacular exhibits.

On the inside cover is a large United States map with the main highways, improved roads and other important data indicated. The State map shows the location of golf courses, points of interest, information booths, tourist camps and Cities Service Stations.

These maps are available at Cities Service Stations and dealers.

Ford Producers' Club Membership Increases

The National Ford Producers Club membership in the St. Louis territory increased 45 per cent this month, when M. N. Johnson, St. Louis manager, and Ray Allen, assistant manager, held meetings to welcome Ford salesmen into the newly formed organization.

The new members were given solid gold pins, indicative of their membership, and substantial checks.

Women Rated Safest Drivers.

Records of the National Safety Council of the Committee on Safety of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers show that only one out of 86 women drivers in the United States has accidents, while one of 21 men motorists have to call wrecking crews.

Tire Wear Twice As Rapid at 50 As at 35 M. P. H.

Hot, Dry Roads Much Harder on Treads at High Temperatures.

"Tire tread wear on an automobile going 35 miles per hour is 50 per cent less than on a car going 50 miles per hour," according to George H. Kemmerer, St. Louis manager for Goodyear Service, Inc.

"More powerful motors, quicker pickup and increased speed cause tires to wear out faster on today's cars. At 50 miles per hour, for instance, the rate of tread wear is twice as fast as at 35 miles per hour. Furthermore, the demand for low, speedy cars has required manufacturers to use wheels with smaller diameters. Naturally, the smaller the wheel diameter the more times it must revolve to the mile, according to Goodyear tire engineers.

"In addition, they point out, hot, dry roads cause tires to wear faster than cool, damp highways. For example, in driving on a dry road at temperatures around 90 degrees the rate of tread wear is more than twice as fast as at 50 degrees.

Engineers of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. point out five things to watch to insure getting the full mileage from tires:

"First, avoid over-inflation, getting too much air in tires, which make the driving wheels bounce and spin on the road, creating fast tread wear. Avoid under-inflation, not keeping enough air in tires, because this causes scuffed treads and uneven wear. Check inflation in tires each week, because at the comparatively low pressures at which tires are inflated now, a pound or two makes a great deal of difference in results.

"Second, have car wheels checked at least twice each year for misalignment and other mechanical irregularities, so tires ride the road properly.

"Third, keep brakes in proper adjustment; avoid sudden stops, slow down gradually whenever possible.

"Fourth, avoid starting the car too rapidly, and drive at a moderate rate of speed around turns.

"Fifth, when you replace your tires with new ones, always put in new tubes, because the old ones, worn, stretched and wrinkled, will cause pinching and chafing, resulting in leaks or blowouts."

Dodge Dealers' Sales Gain 338 Per Cent for A Week Over 1932

Dodge dealers, for the week ending Juyl 15, set a six-day record of 4926 retail deliveries, an average of 821 sales a day. Of this total, 2305 were Dodge passenger cars, and 625 were Dodge trucks. The remaining 1996 sales represented Dodge dealers' share in the sale of Plymouth Sixes.

Compared with the preceding week, the figures mean an increase of 11.4 per cent for Dodge passenger cars, an advance of 6.3 per cent for Plymouths, and a gain of 12 per cent for Dodge trucks. Checked against retail sales the corresponding week of 1932, Dodge dealers' over-all deliveries, that is, deliveries of Dodge and Plymouth passenger cars and Dodge trucks, show the increase of 338.3 per cent.

Dodge dealers' retail deliveries from Jan. 1 to July 15 this year were 209.8 per cent of last year's for Dodge passenger cars, 136.2 per cent for Dodge trucks, and 149.8 per cent for Plymouth Sixes marketed by Dodge dealers.

Chrysler Motors' Sales in 6 Months Exceed 1932 Total

By July 11, They Pass Those for Entire Previous Year, by Four Per Cent.

Sales to distributers and dealers of Chrysler Motors in the first six months of 1933 almost equaled total sales in the entire year of 1932, since when they have increased until by July 11 they exceeded by 4 per cent the total number of cars shipped the previous year.

In the first half of this year, 217,614 passenger cars and trucks were built and shipped by the Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto and Chrysler divisions, as against 222,512 units in all of 1932.

Plymouth and Dodge, in the first six months of this year, exceeded their total sales in 1932. Plymouth in six months sold 4.6 per cent more than it sold in all of last year. Dodge sold 45.8 per cent more passenger cars and 17 per cent more trucks than in all of the preceding year. Plymouth's six-month sales this year were 77.6 per cent more than in the first six months of last year, and Dodge's six-month sales were 133.1 per cent greater.

June sales, totaling 66,448 units, were greater than in any month in the history of Chrysler Motors, and were 22 per cent higher than in the previous month.

Besides exceeding June sales of 1932 by 161.7 per cent, June sales this year exceeded the combined sales of Chrysler Motors and Dodge Brothers in any month before or since the acquisition of Dodge by Chrysler Corporation.

Chrysler Motors increased its percentage of all automobile retail sales in the first five months from 17.8 per cent in 1932 to 21.8 per cent in 1933.

Pierce-Arrow Sales Going Over 1932 Total

Pierce-Arrow shipments in June increased 60 per cent over those in June a year ago, according to Roy H. Faulkner, vice-president in charge of sales.

The month's gain is a continuation of the improvement in production and sales which began several months ago and was reflected in a 45 per cent increase of May shipments over April.

Chevrolet Already Ahead of Its 1932 Production Total

Builds 394,005 Cars and Trucks in 15 Days Over Six Months.

In only 15 days more than half of the year, production of new Chevrolet cars and trucks equalled the full 12 months' production in 1932 when car number 394,005 came off the assembly line at Flint, Mich., it is announced by W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

By July 1, production this year had reached the 358,741 mark, leaving only 35,264 to be completed to pass the 12-month total of 1932. The rapid rate of manufacturing at the company's 20 plants is attested by the fact that these 35,264 units—more than the July total of last year—were completed in 15 working days.

On the basis of present schedules, July production this year will compare favorably with that of May and will be the best in July since 1929. July production this year will be approximately 2½ times the production in July, 1932. Knudsen said that production in every month of this year, except March, surpassed production in the same months of 1932. March production, although retarded by the national bank holidays, fell short of March, 1932, production by only 226 cars.

Early in the year an output of 450,000 cars was fixed for 1933. But this figure was revised upward to well over 500,000 units. By the end of July about 75 per cent of this objective will have been attained

Chevrolet employment totals have ascended from 32,922 in the week ending Jan. 7, to 40,643 in the week ending Saturday, July 8.

Braking Safety Code For U. S. Adopted by Brake Lining Makers

Four-Wheel Brakes Excellent if They Stop Car in 20 Feet at 20 M. P. H.

Working with Police Departments and with State and municipal automobile authorities all over the country, the Asbestos Brake Lining Association, the national organization of brake lining manufacturers, announces a new simplified official code of safe stopping distances for automobiles.

The association has started a nationwide campaign to reduce motor car accidents and will endeavor to have the code adopted by police and motorists in every city and town in the United States.

The safety code, which is the result of five years' intensive field observation and laboratory research by association experts and the engineering staffs of the member companies, covers stopping distances of cars at 20 miles per hour as follows: Four-wheel brakes, excellent, 20 feet; good, 25 feet; unsafe, 35 feet.

Two-wheel brakes—Excellent, 30 feet; good, 37 feet; unsafe, 45 feet.

These tests at 20 miles an hour, the association feels, will reveal the safe or unsafe condition of brakes in traffic at its present high speed. The directors believe that more elaborate brake tables tend to confuse officials and motorists and are too quickly forgotten.

The association has sent copies of its new simplified code to 5000 police chiefs, state motor vehicle commissioners and automobile clubs, together with detail suggestions for the conduct of brake inspection campaigns and a model brake performance ordinance for large and small communities.

Additional copies or more technical information will be supplied to any one requesting it from the association's headquarters, 7 East Fifty-fourth street, New York.

De Soto Plant Moved to Facilitate Expanded Operation

Growth of Car Sales Cited as Necessitating More Factory Space.

All manufacuring operations of the De Soto Motor Corporation have been removed from the plant at Lynch road and Mt. Elliott avenue in Detroit, which De Soto has shared with Plymouth, to larger quarters East Jefferson avenue.

This move was made necessary by increased sales that have taxed plant capacities. Sales of De Soto cars at retail by dealers the week ending June 3 showed a 22.3 per cent increase over the previous week, and retail sales of De Soto cars by dealers in May were 38.2 per cent greater than in the previous month.

Changes are being made in the Jefferson Avenue Plant which, when completed, will give De Soto what is declared to be the industry's most modern equipment for car manufacturing.

Hupp Shipments, Deliveries Increase

Hupp's June shipments increased 19 per cent over the same month last year, continuing the upward trend that brought a 20 per cent gain in May over May, 1932, according to Rufus S. Cole, vice-president of Hupp Motor Car Corporation.

"Actual deliveries by dealers in June showed a gain over the previous month," said Cole, "and set a new high monthly total for the last 12 months."

Chapin Addresses Distributers

ROY D. CHAPIN

President of the Hudson Motor Car Co., who addressed Hudson-Essex distributers who met in Detroit last week for a sales meeting.

Hudson's President Tells Distributers Of Business Outlook

"Definite proof is at hand that we are in for an era of improved business," Roy D. Chapin, president of the Hudson Motor Car Co., told distributors who were in Detroit last week for a two-day sales meeting.

"There is every indication that the second half of 1933 will be better than the first half," said Chapin. "No more bank holidays will occur to interrupt our advance. The fundamental conditions which control business are better. There is a greatly improved spirit among people which will encourage buying. As for our own organization, we are putting more vim and vigor into our advertising and sales policy than ever before. We are in for a good summer and a good fall."

Chester G. Abbott, general sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co., cited statistics to show that the improvement was part of a world-wide advance, basing his remarks on an industrial survey of the eight leading countries.

Abbott pointed out that sales for the Hudson company had improved steadily since the beginning of March and that the week ending July 1 was the best in two years for the company.

Monark Petroleum Moves to Plant on Manchester Road

The Monark Petroleum Corporation recently moved from East St. Louis to 5100 Manchester.

B. Wides is president of the Monark Petroleum Corporation, which is the exclusive distributor of Midcontinent Petroleum Co. products in Greater St. Louis and the surrounding territory.

The Monark Petroleum Corporation has had the exclusive Midcontinent franchise since 1922. Wides said that in the firm's first month of business he sold one tank car of gasoline. In June of this year, sales were 58 carloads.

The company now operates 22 company-owned and re-sale service stations in East St. Louis and approximately the same number in St. Louis.

The new and enlarged operations of the company at 5100 Manchester provide storage facilities for over 250,000 gallons, with a warehouse 60x100 with direct trackage facilities to accommodate 20 cars. The company operates 10 trucks.

Wides said that the new Midcontinent D-X gasoline, which has "Q Ethyl" and has been on the market in St. Louis since June 1, has accounted for a 22 per cent increase in sales. Midcontinent Diamond 760 motor oil, he said, will not begin to vaporize in a crankcase until the temperature exceeds 760 degrees. He also pointed out that this same oil flows freely at zero temperature.

Dual Mufflers Quiet Exhaustion Nash Cars

Nash dual mufflers have a resonator-type exhaust silencer which virtually eliminates motor noise and back pressure. The exhaust travels in a straight line instead of through a conventional baffle plate muffler.

The thermostat in the head of a Nash car engine insures a faster warm-up by allowing the water to pre-heat around the motor before the rest of the water in the cooling system can circulate.

Oldsmobile Book Tells How to Judge Car Performance

At the request of Oldsmobile, the General Motors proving ground engineers have incorporated the results of long, trained observation of passenger cars under every conceivable kind of test in a book, "How to Test to Performance of a Motor Car." The book is written in simple, non-scientific language.

Methods by which the performance of any motor car may be accurately measured are outlined, and by following them out, the owner may know just how good a car is in terms of performance.

Oldsmobile dealers the country over are supplied with these books, one of which may he had for the asking.

New Motor Truck Model.

An army truck of new design to haul heavy loads has been developed in England. The vehicle has eight wheels, one of a pair following the other. "No wonder more people buy Buicks than all other eights in its price range combined!"

Public preference for Buick today is so overwhelming that—with 11 eights in its price range to choose from—more people buy Buicks than all of the other 10 combined.

To the man or woman who is not familiar with the new Buick Eight, such dominance may seem almost unbelievable; but to those who have driven this car, and gained even the most casual acquaintance with its capabilities, the reasons for Buick's leadership are crystal-clear.

"What," you may ask, "is so different about Buick? Why do so many people consider it superior to any other car selling at similar prices?" The answer lies chiefly in principles of design.

For example, Buick uses the torque-tube drive, an important factor in rigid, compact chassis construction. And it is the torque-tube drive which accounts for much of Buick's superb road-steadiness. Few other manufacturers use valve-in-head engine design. Yet the valve-in-head type is admittedly the most efficient type of design—and Buick engineers have had more experience with valve-in-head engines than the designers of any other medium or higher priced cars.

Bodies by Fisher also play their part. Handsomely fashioned along modern, windstream lines, Buick's bodies by Fisher are unusually comfortable and inviting to ride in. Seats are pitched at just the right angle. Cushions are deep and restful. Upholsteries are choice materials, selected for their pleasing appearance and their long-wearing quality. And, of course, there is the new Fisher Ventilation System, a boon in both summer and winter driving, and exclusive to Buick in its price range.

These are examples of the differences in Buick, which give it such wide preference among buyers. Because of its more enduring design and its finer quality, you will enjoy driving a Buick more years and many more thousands of miles than you would want to drive most automobiles. And a Buick is easy to pay for on the liberal G. M. A. C. plan. As a result, selection of a Buick is an economy as well as an assurance of thorough satisfaction.

Come in and inspect the new Buick Eight—and take a trial drive. When you have done this, we believe you'll say, "No wonder more people buy Buicks than all other eights in its price range combined!"

Here And There On The Air

By J. L. S.

Public Discussions Of Interest on Air.

CHARLES A. LEE, State Superintendent of Schools, will deliver two addresses this week over KSD—one at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon, the other at 10:15 Tuesday morning.

Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General assigned to prosecute racketeering, will speak over KWK and WJZ chain at 8:45 tonight on the general topic, "Uncle Sam's Answer to the Gangster's Challenge."

President Roosevelt will make another radio talk at 10 o'clock Tuesday night, a message to the Governors of 24 states, gathered in San Francisco for the conference of Governors. He will speak from the oval room of the White House, probably for about 15 minutes, and the Governors and others will hear him through speakers in a hotel in San Francisco.

Donald A. Richberg, general counsel to the National Recovery administration, will speak over the CBS chain at 6:15 Tuesday.

Premier Ramsey MacDonald of Great Britain, chairman of the World Economic Conference, will summarize conference results in a speech from London that will be carried by KMOX at 2:10 Thursday afternoon.

The opening of the Conference of Governors at San Francisco will be broadcast by the CBS network at 12:30 tomorrow noon.

A summary of developments at the convention of the American Institute of Co-operation, at Raleigh, N. C., will be broadcast during the Farm and Home Hour, at 11:30 next Saturday morning on KWK.

Programs planned to report effects of the Industrial Recovery and Agricultural Adjustment Acts on consumers are being carried by the WJZ chain at 3 o'clock Thursdays. The speaker July 27 will be Julia K. Jaffray, chairman of the Public Welfare Committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Three prominent Orientals will speak in a series at 12:30 Saturdays, beginning July 29. The first speaker will be Hu Shih, professor at the National University at Pieping, China.

KSD Program News and Notes.

PAUL WHITEMAN'S two-hour programs will be condensed into an hour, starting July 31, for broadcasting over a country-wide chain. KSD will join the hook-up Aug. 3 when the time shifts to 8 to 9 o'clock Thursday nights. Deems Taylor acts as master of ceremonies, and Jack Fulton, Ramona, the Rhythm Boys, Peggy Healy and Roy Bargy are the soloists. . . . Fred Allen, the comedian, Ferde Grofe's orchestra and other entertainers, including Portland Hoffa, Allen's wife, are billed for a new series on KSD and the WEAF chain at 7 o'clock Friday nights, starting Aug. 4. Grofe will continue his present programs. . . . An interview with Paul Robeson, the Negro actor and singer, is set for 3:30 Tuesday on KSD. . . . At 2:30 Thursday, KSD will carry interviews on "What I Think of Radio" with Princess Kropotkin, the writer; John B. Kennedy; Mrs. Mary A. Fox, a Staten Island, N. Y., housewife, and Joie Lee, a Bronx taxicab driver. . . . Bert Lahr, the comedian, has signed a long-term contract for a series with George Olsen's orchestra effective Oct. 4, when their program will succeed on KSD now starring Fannie Brice and Olsen's band. Lahr will remain on the Rubinoff program Sundays through Sept. 3. Eddie Cantor is scheduled to return to this program on Sept. 10. . . . The flight of Gen. Balbo's Italian air armada will be dramatized in the Lives at Stake broadcast over KSD at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. . . . The roles of Lum and Abner in the KSD programs are played by Norris Goff and Chester Lauck, who began their radio work in benefits for flood victims in Arkansas, their native State, in the winter of 1930-31. Since then they have been featured by many stations. They are carrying on their WEAF chain broadcasting from the studios of WTAM, Cleveland. . . . Jessica Dragonette will not take a vacation this summer. . . . Fred Huffsmith, tenor, has been singing with the Cavaliers while Frank Parker has been in Chicago on other programs. . . . Walter Tetley has been added to the cast for Winnie the Pooh, playing the "Tigger." . . . "The Little Man," a play that has been broadcast successfully in Germany, will be performed over KSD at 8 o'clock Thursday night.

Petey Knox, singer and piano monologist, who has broadcast over KDKA, WLW and NBC networks from Cleveland and on the Pacific Coast, is billed at 5:45 on KSD Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The 150th anniversary of the birth of Simon Bolivar, the South American liberator, will be observed with a broadcast by the Pan-American Union at 10:15 tomorrow morning over KSD and the WEAF chain. South and Central American diplomats will take part. The marine band will play.

Gus Haenschen's orchestra; Ohman and Arden, two-piano team, Arlene Jackson, singer; Conrad Thibault, baritone; the Songsmiths and Nightingales, and Arthur Boran, impersonator, are billed for a new series at 8:30 Monday nights on KSD, starting July 31. Graham McNamee will be the announcer.

Stratosphere Broadcasts on NBC at Intervals Today

SEVERAL broadcasts about the Piccard stratosphere flight, which is tentatively set for late tonight, are planned over the WEAF and WJZ chains. A description of the scene of the preliminary preparations is set for 5:45. The christening of the balloon and gondola is set for 8:15. At 9:45, another preliminary broadcast is scheduled. At 10:45, there will be a description of military ceremonies. At 11:30, it is planned to describe the final preparations and the start of the balloon's ascent, and then, at intervals, to broadcast from the balloon. This schedule is wholly tentative, and no list of stations has been announced. However, listeners interested might watch KSD, KWK, WMAQ (670kc).

Adventures in Use Of Spare Time Programs.

A SERIES of programs called "Adventures in the Use of Spare Time" is being broadcast over KWK at 9:30 Tuesday mornings under the auspices of the St. Louis Community Council. The programs are part of the campaign against lowered morale and unemployment despair. They take the form of interviews and dialogues, practically suggestive of activities which can be indulged in at a minimum of expense. A special feature will be made of hobbies. Persons having particularly valuable and dramatic interests will be interviewed. Such sparetime amusements as gardening, study and music, will be described in interviews with experts. While the programs are intended to appeal to the unemployed, they will have a practical interest for all, especially those about to be effected by the movement for shorter working hours.

Report Against Station Moving to East St. Louis.

DENIAL of the application of WTAD, Quincy, Ill., for permission to remove to East St. Louis has been recommended to the Federal Radio Commission by Examiner Ralph L. Walker. He held that adequate service now is received in that area from St. Louis stations, and that there was no need for additional radio service. Walker also recommended that the application of WMBD, Peoria, Ill., for full time on the channel it divides with WTAD be denied. He urged that the two stations continue on their present operating schedule. His recommendations are subject to action by the full commission.

ORIGINAL RADIO PLAYS will be performed over the CBS chain at 7 o'clock Monday nights, starting July 31, under the title, "The Theater of Today." There will be no music or announcements to set the scenes. Sound effects and direct action will be relied on for transitions from scene to scene. New forms of dramatic framework have been devised. Distinctiveness of voice will be a factor in selecting actors for the roles. Stephen Fox and Ray Collins will be in the casts.

Program News, Network Gossip.

DEPARTURE OF THE ESKIMOS from the NBC networks after seven and a half years of broadcasting leaves the Gypsies the only old-timers on the networks, according to the Associated Press. In all the time the Eskimos have been on the air they have had only one orchestra, that led by Harry Reser. The Gypsies are in their ninth year as WEAF chain entertainers. They have used only Harry Horlick's orchestra. . . . Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" will be performed by the Radio Guild at 2 o'clock tomorrow over KWK and the WJZ net. . . . The first jinriksha race held in this country is set for 2:30 Tuesday at the Chicago Fair. It will be described over the CBS chain. The race is being promoted by Robert ("Believe-It-Or-Not") Ripley. College athletes will pull the jinrikshas over a mile course with college girls as passengers. . . . Charles Lyon, NBC announcer, left Chicago by plane Wednesday for Alberta, Can., to be on hand for a broadcast of the arrival of Wiley Post from Siberia. . . . Two "John Henry-Black River Giant" episodes are billed this evening on KMOX—one at 5:30, the other at 6:15. . . . The Voice of Experience was scheduled to sail the past week for a vacation cruise on the Caribbean Sea and to be off the air for seven weeks. His chain programs are to be resumed in the fall.

Nino Martini's concerts over the CBS chain will go on a once-a-week schedule on Tuesdays, beginning this week. The time will be 7:30. His last Friday night recital was that of July 21.

William Holbrook, dancing production director for the Muny Opera, will be interviewed on WEW at 2 o'clock today.

A vocal octet, trained to give the impression of eight differently toned voices, has been developed by Carl Hohengarten, musical director of KMOX. The effect is gotten by treating each voice as if it were one of a group of instruments. Doris Shumate, "blues singer," is soloist with the octet.

Edwin C. Hill will be off the air the week starting next Sunday. When he returns he will broadcast his news comment at 8:45 Wednesdays and Friday nights.

ED WYNN declares that more than 30 stations in the South and Southwest, which are operating outside the national networks, are to join his new Amalgamated Broadcasting System network, and that within a year at least 100 stations will be linked in it.

Referring to his "radio theater" plans in connection with the new chain, Wynn said "we are to present full-length dramatic successes and the classics of music and light opera in a form hitherto only hoped for by radio listeners and never yet realized."

PRICES OF WOMEN'S APPAREL TO BE HIGHER IN FALL

So Far Advance By Retailers Is Only Slight—Wholesalers Jump Costs.

NEW YORK, July 22. — Retail prices of women's apparel have only fractionally reflected the advances in wholesale prices. Women's apparel quotations at retail on July 1 show a gain of only 2 per cent as compared with the May 1 low, with the greatest increase in furs which approximated 7 per cent. The gain in women's hosiery prices was 3.8 per cent during same period with aprons and house dresses gaining 2.6 per cent. The increases in other women's apparel items have been comparatively slight, according to a report given out by the Research Division of the publishers of Women's Wear.

As compared with the retail price gain of 2 per cent to date, wholesale prices of textile fibers have advanced about 60 per cent from the low with the gain in fabric prices about 27 per cent. The increase in raw fur prices has aggregated about 35 per cent.

Thus far the retailer has passed on to the consumer the advantages gained through buying at the low prices. However, from now on it will be necessary, manufacturers say, for retailers to raise prices to correspond with the present replacement markets which are sharply above the low recorded several months ago.

Fall prices for women's apparel will average at least 50 cents higher on cheap dresses and at least $1 to $1.50 higher on the expensive dresses. Hosiery and underwear prices will be marked up at least 20 to 25 per cent before the end of the year. The gain in retail prices has just begun and will naturally follow closely the movement of wholesale prices.

AMERICAN RETAILERS TO HOLD CONVENTION HERE AUG. 7 TO 14

Fashion Pageant to Be One of Features of Semi-Annual Gathering.

Plans are being made for the twentieth semi-annual convention of the American Retailers' Association, Aug. 7 to 14. Headquarters will be at Hotel Jefferson. Business sessions, at which there will be a number of speakers, will be held in the evenings, giving members opportunity to deal with local business houses and entertain themselves in daytime.

There will be a fashion pageant, to be held after the business sessions, at which new styles for women's ready-to-wear clothing, millinery and shoes will be displayed by mannequins. There will be entertainment features also. The annual election of directors and officers will be held.

Railroads have granted a rate for the round trip to St. Louis of a fare and one-third, with a stopover privilege. Thousands of retailers are expected to attend. Ben Allen of Washington, Ind., is president of the association.

just where you want it!

"Fisher Controlled Ventilation"—here's a magic phrase that means more than you can believe till you've experienced it yourself.

At a turn of a handle you adjust ventilators—get the breeze just where you want it, and in just the volume you want.

And speed of travel doesn't make any difference—for a turn of the wrist adjusts the breeze to suit you. It is really controlled ventilation, you see—and you, yourself, control it, not the speed of the car or the direction of the breeze.

This one feature alone would make Pontiac an outstanding car compared with others at or near its price.

But Pontiac gives more. It is a Straight Eight, with a 77-horsepower engine that gives 78 real miles per hour.

It is a big car—115-inch wheelbase, and due to its balanced weight and design, it gives you safety, comfort, durability.

All this may lead you to think of Pontiac as a costly car. But its first cost is low and as for operating, ask any Pontiac owner, and you'll learn that it is giving 15 miles or more to the gallon.

Try a demonstration. Note how easily it handles; how smooth it is; how comfortable and roomy. And don't forget that it takes a Straight Eight to give Straight Eight performance.

Be sure to try Fisher Controlled Ventilation. You'll be amazed and delighted. No car can be really modern without this comfort feature.

Your NEW CAR —be sure it is— MODERN —as well as— NEW!

The 4-door Sedan, $695, f. o. b. Pontiac. Body by Fisher. Special equipment extra.

'Naughty Marietta' in Park

Victor Herbert's Delightful Old Musical Romance, Always a Great Favorite With Municipal Opera Audiences, to Be Sung Tomorrow Night—Ilse Marvenga to Have Title Role, Which She Has Played Many Times, and Clifford Newdahl Is Cast as the Captain Warrington.

WINDING up the week of probably the poorest production in its 15 years in Forest Park with the final performance tonight of "The Nightingale," the Municipal Opera Company tomorrow evening will present Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," a musical romance which has always been tremendously popular with the summer night audiences. In the title role will be charming little Ilse Marvenga, who played the part many times in New York and on tour, and Clifford Newdahl will have his first leading role of the season as Captain Richard Warrington, the young American officer, in whose arms naughty Marietta finds her fate, after a succession of gay adventures in the old Louisiana of which St. Louis was once a part. Surrounding these two is a cast, which includes among its singers Joseph Macaulay, Hannah Toback and John Barclay, while Jack Sheehan, Hope Emerson and Larry Rich will contribute an accompaniment of laughter to Victor Herbert's melodies; Rosemary Deering, Nick Long Jr., Tom and Ray Romaine, Marie Starner, Sally Argo and other dancers will add to the entertainment of the production.

"Naughty Marietta" is the most sprightly and the most tuneful of the more than 40 operettas with which Victor Herbert added to the gayety of this country. It contains "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," known as Marietta's "Dream Song," one of the most familiar of all his melodies, as well as such other well remembered favorites as "'Neath the Southern Mooon," "I'm Falling in Love With Someone," "Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!" "Tarsez Vous," "Naughty Marietta," "It Never Can Be Love," "If I Were Anybody But Me" and Italian street song, "Live For Today."

THE picturesque life of old New Orleans in the 1870's when that city of France had passed with the rest of Louisiana—including the little settlement far up the Mississippi River where Laclede had established his village then called Pain Court and destined it to be known as St. Louis—into the control of Spain, forms a background of the story of "Naughty Marietta," the book and lyrics of which are by Rida Johnson Young. It is a story of Marietta, Comtessa d'Altena, who had been educated in a Paris convent and is by her stern parents destined to a loveless marriage with a wealthy greybeard. She escapes from the convent and joins with a boatload of girls, young women who, as wards of the King of France, are to be sent to New Orleans to become the brides of the settlers in America. Upon her arrival at New Orleans, Marietta passes through a succession of gay adventures and assumes many disguises. In boy's clothes which she wears in order to escape a forced wedding as one of the cargo of brides, she appears as a street urchin, as the son of an organ grinder, as an aide in a marionette show; back in feminine garb again, she dodges pirates, but not until she is on the verge of marriage with their leader; she helps the Spanish Governor in a search for herself and finally brings everything to a happy conclusion.

"Naughty Marietta" was first presented in New York in 1910 and had a year's run in that city before St. Louis saw it with Madame Emma Trentini in the title role at the historic old Olympic Theater. It was first presented by Municipal Opera in 1928 with Dorothy Maynard as Marietta, Craig Campbell as Captain Dick and Frank Moulan played Silas Slick; the following year Miss Maynard again played Marietta, Charles Hart the Captain Warrington and Raymond Crane the Silas; while in 1925 Joan Ruth appeared in the title role, Ralph Errolle as Captain Dick and William McCarthy as Silas Slick. Its great popularity is attested by the fact that it is one of only three operettas in all Municipal Opera's repertory of more than 104 pieces which has been presented in three successive seasons, the other two being "Rose Marie" and "The Student Prince."

Victor Herbert, the composer, was a familiar figure in St. Louis' musical life during "the gay nineties," when he conducted the concerts of "Gilmore's Band" at the old Exposition Hall here, and later the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, which gave a St. Louis concert under his baton. He last visited St. Louis in 1921, when he conducted the orchestra at the Grand Central Theater for a week.

HERBERT was a grandson of Samuel Lover, the great Irish novelist who, incidentally, wrote the words and melodies for such old Irish songs as "Molly Bawn," "The Low Backed Car" and "Rory O'More." Those simple melodies of the Lover songs endeared them to the hearts of the Irish much as the Stephen Foster songs were taken to the bosom of the Americans. From his grandfather Victor Herbert inherited his gift for appealing melody as well as a brilliant wit. Young Herbert from the age of 3 lived with his grandfather, his father—Edward Herbert, a distinguished painter—having died when he was yet a child. Later his mother married a German physician and the family was established in Stuttgart, where it was decreed that Victor Herbert should follow in his stepfather's footsteps. His native musical talent, however, soon vetoed that decree and he studied with some of the finest masters of his time, being a pupil of Dr. Emanuel Baruch in the study of the 'cello, and studying theory and composition with such masters as Raff and Reinicke.

He came to this country penniless but with a bride, Fraulein Theresa Foerster, the Viennese prima donna who had been engaged by Dr. Leopard Damrosch for the Metropolitan Opera. Immediately upon his arrival Herbert was given an audition by Dr. Damrosch and engaged for the 'cello section of the Metropolitan Orchestra, so that when Madame Foerster made her debut in 1886, her husband was in the pit. Within six years he had composed "Prince Ananias," his first light opera. Although he continued to play his favorite instrument under Anton Seidl and Theodore Thomas, and won fame as a solo 'cellist, also, slowly that instrument was laid aside. He took up conducting and succeeded Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore in 1894 as bandmaster of the Twenty-second Regiment or "Gilmore's Band." Four years later he became conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra and went to work on his first symphony.

Victor Herbert continued to pour out melodies until his death, for more than 30 years. His symphony, his 'celli concerti, orchestral suits and his grand opera "Natona" were among his essays in the more impressive forms of music, but while he was doing these, he created the scores for more than 40 operettas, besides the many songs which are not included in those scores. His mastery of orchestral and operatic technic was profound, and his musicianship was broad in scope, but at the heart of all his successes was that gift for simple melody, which he treasured so intensely.

German Melodies on The Highland's Bill

"Berlin Brevities," featuring German melodies of the past decade, will be the offering of Harry Lange's Musical Merrymakers at Forest Park Highlands, this week. There will be the usual amount of hokum, with Leslie "Tiny" Durst and Eddie Pitts, as Berlin belles; Al Swenson, as a strolling street musician; Lange as the leader of an old-time German band; and Frank Miller, as Hitler.

"A cruise to Danceland" is the title of the second portion of the bill. It is a revue by the Virginia Doherty dancers.

Many Entrants for Amateur Stage Show

Preparations for "St. Louis on Parade," the local talent show which is to be presented at the Ambassador the week of Aug. 18, are progressing. A large number have already entered, and with the list swelling constantly it is expected to have over 500 entrants before preliminary auditions are begun. About 150 will be used.

First auditions will be conducted at the Ambassador the week of July 28.

Lot of Real Stars Together in Film

The complete cast of "Dinner at Eight," film version of the George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber stage play, which is now in production in Hollywood, includes Marie Dressler, John and Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Jean Hersholt, Karen Morley, Louise Closser Hale, Phillips Holmes and May Robson.

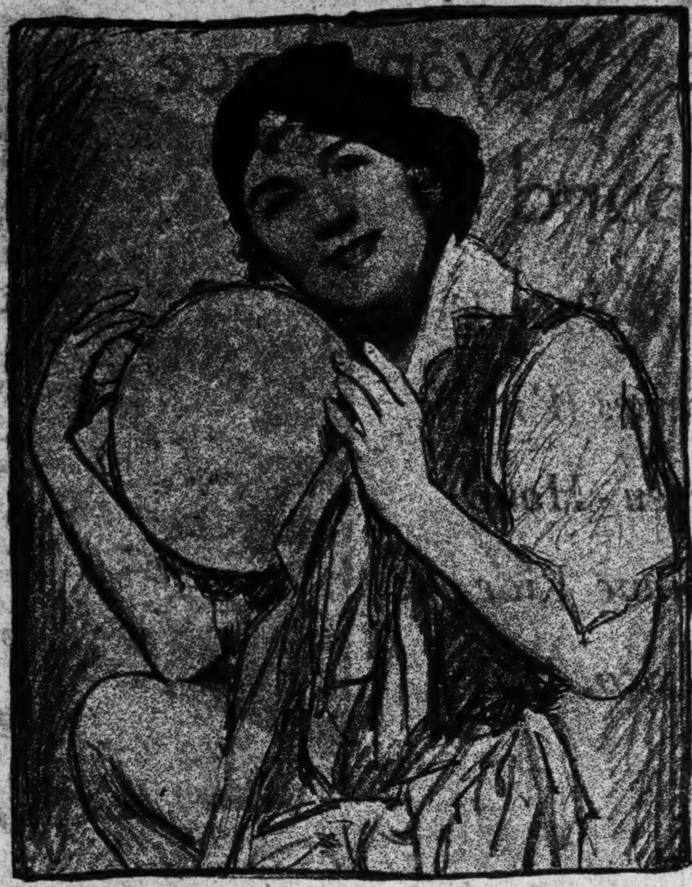
This is considered the largest assemblage of outstanding names ever brought together in a single screen production. George Cukor is director of the picture version of "Dinner at Eight," a screen treatment of which was prepared by Frances Marion.

Political Godparents.

Frank Tinney Jr., son of the once well known stage comedian, who was given a role in Paramount's "This Day and Age," had as his godparents Joseph Tumulty, secretary to President Woodrow Wilson, and Mrs. William G. McAdoo.

Had Lowly Start.

Maurice Chevalier once worked in a French nail factory.



Ilse Marvenga in "Naughty Marietta," at the Municipal Opera.

The Week's New Films

—:— By NIE —:—

JUST as Barbara Stanwyck set out to find a soft spot for herself in "Baby Face" last week, Constance Bennett collects the living the world owes her in "Bed of Roses" at the Ambassador. Barbara, you may recall, was a pretty good girl at the start and worked her way to the top over the broken hearts of a lot of men. Connie, on the other hand, is a minor thief and reform school graduate who lands on both feet in one jump and then finds out that a bunk on a Mississippi River barge with the man she loves is a whole lot better than the rose-and-orchid-lined boudoir furnished by a good provider who never mentions matrimony. John Halliday, one of our leading men about town of the screens who has paid the rent on more back street apartments than any other actor in the films, is the meal ticket in this picture and Joel McCrea is the honest canal boat captain who forgives and forgets in time for the final wedding bell clinch. "Bed of Roses" may not be anything for the moralists to rave about but it's good entertainment just the same.

Down on the Farm.

"THE Stranger's Return"—The reason for the title has been lost in the cinema version of Philip Strong's popular novel—at Loew's has the tremendous advantage of a cast headed by Lionel Barrymore, Franchot Tone, Stuart Erwin and Miriam Hopkins. It needs these players, too, for the drama is sketchy and choppy. In the hands of poorer performers it wouldn't amount to much but nothing could go very far wrong with such a quartet to hold it up and one forgets the weakness of the screen play in admiration of the acting. The story concerns the latter life of old Grandpa Storr who has a big farm and several hungry relatives who figure on getting possession when the old man lays down the shovel and the hoe. That is only figuratively speaking, of course, for Granddad is right up to date and uses tractors and the latest things to make two bunches of wheat grow where only one sprouted before. From the city comes his granddaughter, Louise, to win her way, without trying, into the old man's heart and, when he does die, she gets the land and the machinery and the grasping hangers on are turned out into the cold. There is a neighbor, Franchot Tone, who has just lost his taste for his pretty wife and he and Louise fall head over heels in love but there is no scandal and no conventional happy ending for Franchot sees that the best thing for him to do is to go away and he does leaving Louise to run the farm with Stuart Erwin as her assistant. Mr. Barrymore gives his usual fine performance as old man Storr and Miss Hopkins is excellent as Louise so that "The Stranger's Return" is high class, if not very gripping, drama.

Bebe's Back.

EVERY now and then Bebe Daniels stages a return to the movies and now she is on deck again with "Cocktail Hour" at the Fox, in which she is a high salaried advertising artist who wants to lead her own life which runs, somewhat, along unconventional lines. She makes a trip to Paris and picks up love and good times where she finds them and might have been very happy with a man she met on the boat if he hadn't already had a wife. This complication causes a lot of trouble but good old Randolph Scott was hanging around in the background waiting for Bebe to come to her senses and when the picture has run long enough he takes her in his arms and everybody goes conventional. Miss Daniels sings once or twice during the course of the story and does it very nicely.

Ocean Rag Time.

"MELODY Cruise," at the Missouri, is about what its name would indicate—a musicomedy aboard ship with captain, crew and passengers singing and dancing their way from New York to California. There is a swimming pool, some comedy stewards and all the other paraphernalia of the usual eye and thigh shows and things move rapidly enough if you care for that sort of entertainment. Charlies Ruggles drinks his way through the voyage and provides some good fun while Phil Harris, a band leading, radio singer from San Francisco makes his bow as a cinema star and does a little crooning now and then. Harris, not known to local air fans, is a sort of Harry Richman type of actor with a bass voice but has some distance to go before he will catch up with Richman.

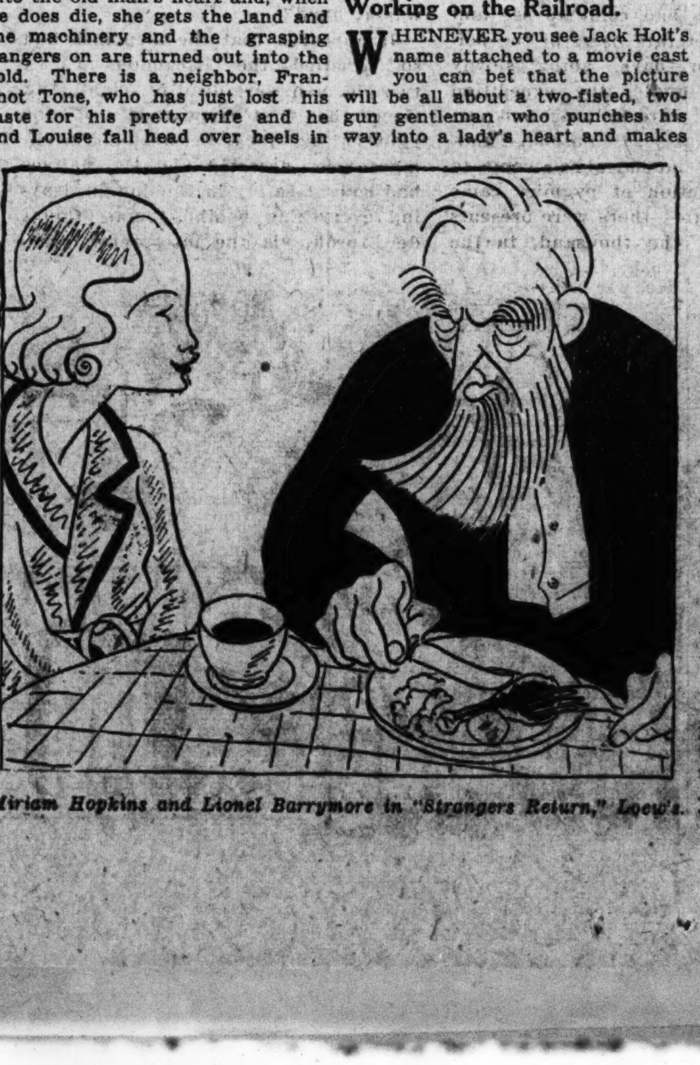
Working on the Railroad.

WHENEVER you see Jack Holt's name attached to a movie cast you can bet that the picture will be all about a two-fisted, two-gun gentleman who punches his way into a lady's heart and makes her like it. That's the idea of "When Strangers Marry" at the Grand Central. Mr. Holt, this time, is a railroad builder in the jungles of Java and the girl in the case is the very beautiful Lilian Bond. Once or twice she tries to get off the reservation but Jack whips her into line, beats the men who are trying to take her away from him and capture his railroad as well and everything ends happily in the Java moonlight. "Silk Express," the Grand Central's other feature film, is a meller of double crossing on a fast freight with Neil Hamilton, Sheila Terry and Guy Kibbee furnishing plenty of excitement.



Miriam Hopkins and Lionel Barrymore in "Strangers Return," Loew's.

Ed Lowry on Coast With His Own Band

Ed Lowry, long a St. Louis favorite, is now leading a 15-piece stage band of his own at Loew's Theater in Los Angeles. There are no girls or acts with the show.

Lowry is also preparing a radio act for his outfit to broadcast from the West Coast.

Concert for Veterans.

The Molino Grand Opera Company will present an out-door concert on the lawn at the Veterans' Hospital at Jefferson Barracks for the patients under the auspices of the Red Cross Sunday afternoon, Aug. 13. The public is invited to attend.

Two Generations in Films.

At the same time that Carlyle Blackwell, famous screen star of a number of years ago, is preparing to stage a comeback in Hollywood, his 18-year-old son, Carlyle Jr., embarks on his own screen career in Cecil B. De Mille's current picture, 'This Day and Age."

Constance Bennett in "Bed of Roses," Ambassador.

Greta Nissen in "Melody Cruise," at the Missouri.

Little Jackie Held Scores in New York

Jackie Held, the St. Louis prodigy who made his debut as a musician when he was 4 years old in the local movie houses, is the featured player at the Paramount Theatre in New York where he is leading the orchestra and being billed as "The Tiny Toscannini." The youngster, who is now 8 years old, also plays the piano on the stage and is attracting much attention in the Metropolis. Following his theatre engagements Jackie is to broadcast over the N. B. C. radio circuit as a musician.

French Farce From England in Films

"Sleeping Car," the latest Gaumont British talking picture to reach these shores, is a farce with a decidedly French flavor. Ivor Novello and Claude Allister, who have been in several Hollywood-made features, head the male contingent of the cast, and Madeline Carroll and Kay Hammond have the leading feminine roles. Anatol Litwak, who directed "Be Mine Tonight," was in charge.

The story is laid on board a train and in Paris. "Sleeping Car," which will be shown throughout the United States shortly, is the third recent Gaumont-British picture with a railroad background. "Rome Express" was the first, and "The Ghost Train," starring Jack Hulbert and Cicely Courtneidge, was the other.

Stage Keeps Coward.

Noel Coward, author of "Design For Living," which will be directed by Ernst Lubitsch, never has written or acted for motion pictures. All his career has been identified with the theater.

Homely Ducklings Cash In

Beauty May Starve in Hollywood, but There Is Always Plenty of Work for the Freak-Faced Actors—Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler Together on the Same Lot—A Word or Two About the "Mush Interests."

WHILE beauty starves up and down Hollywood boulevard, the ugly duckling cashes in, for there are in Hollywood men and women who, by the very virtue of their facial and physical eccentricities, are making a living.

Take for instance the "old maid" you've seen lots of times on the screen, Alice Belcher, who makes money because her nose and chin almost meet. Casting directors can get dozens—nay hundreds—of ravishing beauties for $7.50 a day. But when they want Alice's unique face, they've got to dig deeper.

Abnormal growths due to over-active pituitary glands transformed the once handsome Dick Sutherland into a villainous-faced creature. But his three fine sons are in the university because of that face. Dick has been quite busy the past 20 years giving cash customers the willies. Little Jerry Meachem—Jerry the Rat, to you—is another.

And who hasn't seen the phenomenal beard belonging to August Tollaire, Hollywood's official "French Mayor," now appearing in "The Way to Love," Maurice Chevalier's current picture? It's inconceivable that any other actor should ever get one of the Gallic mayor roles. Nowhere in Hollywood is there a beard like it. He takes care of it with more tenderness, more exacting carefulness than a femme star does her beautiful tresses. And why not? Because—believe it or not—it's his livlihood.

BY a queer prank of fate, the daughter of one of California's first families, a descendant of the first Governor, is the accepted "old hag" of a movie industry. Her name is Louis Emmons (Louis is correct). She lives alone in a quiet street of Hollywood, dreaming of past glories and future bits as a blood-curdling old woman.

There are others:

"Colonel" Bruce Covington — professional Southern gentleman.

Big Boy Madden—height seven and one-half feet.

Alex Rovery—dog-faced actor.

Lon Poff—professional undertaker.

June Gittelson and Ann McGruder—they weigh 300 and 419 pounds respectively.

Glen Walters, tallest gal; Buster Brody, hairless wonder; shriveled little Tiny Jones; Tom Armendarez, whose face any cutthroat might envy, and so on.

NOW that both Jolsons—Al and Ruby—are working for the same company, Hollywood wonders whether they'll let down the bars. Al never allowed Ruby Keeler to visit him on the set when he was a Warner star in the early talkie days. He said he was afraid he'd become self-conscious if his wife watched him.

For a like reason, presumably, Al never ventured onto the sound stages while Ruby was making scenes for "42nd Street" or "Gold Diggers." And only once did he go even to the studio while she was there.

Ruby, it seems, was supposed to be home for dinner by 7 o'clock. When she wasn't home at 9, Al drove to the studio, asked for the director and told him he thought Ruby was working to hard. Either Al's eloquence convinced the director, or Ruby was through for the night. In any event, Al took Ruby home.

No one in Hollywood expected Al would work again for the Warner brothers, for two reasons.

The first is that it generally was believed his contract with Joseph Schenck—one of the most famous in filmdom—was still in force.

Al and Schenck were taking a sun bath at a desert resort when they began talking about pictures. Schenck said he believed Jolson should be working for him, whereupon he volunteered to pay Jolson $500,000 per picture. That was nearly four years ago.

As soon as Jolson's Warner contract ended, he started a picture for Schenck's United Artists company, and, although he was paid for the picture, he didn't complete it then. A few months ago Jolson completed the picture he was paid for three years ago. It was "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum." It was pretty close to a flop.

The second reason is Al's frequent statement that he believed Warners made a mistake in starring him in so many "Mammy" pictures. He has said the drop in his popularity was due to the similarity of each of his pictures to the first, "The Jazz Singer."

His first picture under his contract, "Wonderbar," the stage play he starred in a couple of years ago, will include other stars besides Jolson.

AND, speaking of Mrs. Jolson in a recent picture, Ned Sparks, playing the part of a theatrical producer, is made to say to Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell: "You kids would be a knockout for the mush interest."

Truer words were never spoken on or off screen.

Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell as a team are a knockout for the mush interest. Their cinematic love affairs have thrilled thousands. Powell, you may recall, was a St. Louis-made master of ceremonies before he went for the films.

The mush interest makes the world go 'round and it also makes movies tick. Few pictures can succeed without it. Some are all mush. Some are mostly meat. It's the combination of meat and mush which most often pleases the greatest number of people.

Experience has shown that the mush interest in pictures is best capitalized by a team of players. Garbo and Gilbert made up one such team a few years ago. Gaynor and Farrell were another. Jean Harlow and Clark Gable are another combination which the public likes. William Powell and Kay Francis are an occasional—but less mushy—team.

The newest is Ruby and Dick. They were thrown together in the "42nd Street" cast, Ruby's first and Dick's second picture, almost by accident. They repeated their performance in "Gold Diggers," which contained the prophetic words spoken by Sparks, and their screen fate was sealed.

Audiences seemed to like them as screen sweethearts, wholly discounting the fact that Ruby is happily married to Jolson and that Dick periodically is reported engaged to Mary Brian.

The Gaynor-Farrell combination continued successfully, even after Janet and Charlie had married others. Seen together, and admired three times already are Sally Eilers and James Dunn, although Sally is Mrs. Hoot Gibson.

These things never interfere when the public really takes a pair of screen romancers to its heart. Most of the members of other screen teams in the past have been married—to other people.

Lost and Stunted Remnant of the Great Mayan Race Found

Count de Prorok's Discoveries Within a Seven-Hour Airplane Ride of Mexico, D. F.

Count Byron de Prorok.

Three Lacandons, with bows and poisoned arrows.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

MEXICO, D. F.

THE lost remnant of the once great Mayan race has been found. Only seven hours from Mexico, D. F.—by airplane—these tragic people, whose forbears escaped from the Spaniards more than four centuries ago, have reverted to complete barbarism.

They bear no trace of the once high culture that the Mayas achieved. Even their stature and physical appearance have degenerated under centuries of primitive existence in the most savage jungles of Southern Mexico. Inbreeding, too, has been a factor in their degeneration. In comparison with persons of normal size they are dwarfs.

These lost people were discovered by an expedition led by Count Byron de Prorok. This last thrilling discovery is only another episode for Count de Prorok in a life crowded with adventure. He was born here in the capital of Mexico, Charles Byron Kuhn, the son of Leo S. Kuhn, a naturalized American. His mother, according to the Count, was Therese de Prorok, whose brother was Count Theophile Konerski de Prorok, a Pole. Legally adopted by his uncle, he took the De Prorok title upon the death of his uncle.

Count de Prorok, who is 37, has made highly publicized discoveries in Carthage and North Africa. But this is probably his greatest "find"—these primitive people who have lived so completely shut away from the world that they had never heard of Christ. They worshiped, in a debased form, the gods of the Mayas.

The expedition, which was sent out by the Mexican Government, began more than five months ago to search in the Chiapas and Tabasco jungles for lost temples and lost races. Three bright red airplanes, which the terrified natives called "dragons of the air," set out from the base headquarters, El Real, on the jungle border, to fly over and prospect 2800 kilometers of volcanoes, mountains, jungles, unknown lakes and swamps.

From the air—and how an airplane would have helped Cortez—the explorers looked down on endless lakes, colored like emeralds and topazes; on unexplored forest, not green and cool as Western forests are, but flaming with creeping flowers, bright leaves and heat shimmering over the trees. Alongside a wide, nameless river, they saw piles of stones, shapes deformed by vegetation. A forgotten city. Cameras were trained on this site.

The planes circled over the silent city, but it was impossible to land. Positions were marked on maps, and the expedition—flying low—continued this ultra modern method of discovering new worlds from the air. The second objective of Count de Porok was to attempt to locate the villages of the Lacandon Indians, a mysterious race descended from the Mayas. These people are known to have fled from the Spanish agents of "civilization" four centuries ago.

Finally, on the shores of one of the beautiful brilliant jungle lakes, they saw signs of habitation: unwieldy small dugouts, paddled with long oars, a few thatched huts and tiny, brownish human creatures scurrying like rats, frightened and screaming, running for the jungle away from these monsters of the air who came as a herald of the end of the world. . . .

The cave of the pygmies, with some of its inhabitants shown in the entrance.

For 10 days the expedition inspected this strange world from the air. Then, with their maps in order, they set off from El Real on foot, for that battle with the jungle which is the test of endurance for all tropical expeditions. An army of "machetes"—Indians armed with their own weapon, something like an elongated meat chopper—was recruited. These Indians were used to the jungle, used to just this slow cutting of the undergrowth step by step to permit passage. In half a dozen villages the native women cooked tortillas, preparing 15,000 of these pancake affairs as nourishment for the Indians during many months of jungle exploration. Each Indian carried 85 pounds on his back, despite the appalling heat and the difficulty of moving.

MANY days, the expedition could make no more than two miles in an exhausting all-day march. This trip through the jungle is the price for the triumph and wonder of seeing first what no white man of one's own epoch has seen. Count de Prorok adopts the attitude that tigers and crocodiles are expected and combatable, but that poisonous spiders with furry legs, giant red ants which eat rats and rabbits, small venomous snakes the color of leaves and "invisible," scorpions under every stone of the ancient ruin, "garapatas," a tick that buries itself in the roots of the hair, and above all malarial mosquitoes—these are items most people forget when they think of the "romance" of exploring the jungle.

The expedition passed through a new, or rather, an ageless, region, where an unknown malady tortured the natives and the animals: blindness from a fly bite. In one village the explorers witnessed the horrifying sight of a man with his dog, and a laden donkey, crawling hesitantly along the narrow dirt path; all three were blind. Another disease in what Prorok says is rightly called "Green Hell" is the pinto, a sickness which ravages the natives, and which they say comes from eating crocodile meat.

The animal life of the jungle is no more fatal than the vegetable: venomous plants which produce a kind of sleeping sickness, others which are poisonous herbs and others which are virulent forms of poison ivy.

The Lacandons themselves, whom the expeditions had come to see and study, are inveterate users of the poison dart. For days, going slowly through the jungle, the expedition knew that they were followed and surrounded— and they saw no one. Finally, seeing that no harm had come to them, a delegation of pygmies came out of the jungle—there were presents—trinkets—by the thousand, in the packs of the expedition, to win the favor of these dangerous little men. An Indian, who could speak some words which the pygmies seemed to understand, interpreted between the explorers and the Lacandons. The Lacandons took sugar, rum and knives greedily, but their greatest joy was in enormous cheap alarm clocks, hung around the neck on a thick cord.

THE Lacandons asked questions: had the white men come to steal their women? Did the dragons of the air mean that the end of the world was at hand?

It appeared that the airplanes had so terrified the Lacandons that two old men were dead of fright. And since the first appearance of the planes three weeks before, all the villages were deserted and the natives had sought safety in the jungle, leaving everything behind them. Count de Prorok, via the interpreter, reassured the Lacandons. The presents were accepted. They had never seen money and when they were offered silver dollars they turned them over in their hands, rubbed them, looked bored and threw them away—and then turned enthusiastically to the alarm clocks.

The chief of the Lacandon pygmies showing his skill with the bow and arrow.

The interpreter asked the Lacandons about religion: to whom did they pray? They believed in the god of sun and of love, the gods of rain and fire. Christ? They had never heard of Him. Only seven hours from Mexico, D. F.—by air, to be sure—and the Stone Age was no more remote. These remnants of a great empire use lances of wood, and axes, arrowheads, and knives of sharpened stone. Their great meeting hall was a cave. In all ways they live as prehistoric men did.

Among the Lacandons, after the essential occupation of getting food, there is one sport and career and at the same time necessity of life: the raids for women. As soon as a tribe is strong enough, it masses its resources, food and poisoned arrows, and sets out to attack a neighboring tribe. If it is victorious, it carries off all the women, the grandmothers included, takes them back to its thatched huts, and prepares to defend them against other raiders.

Marriages are made regardless of blood relationships and the result is a hideous race of defectives—there are probbaly not more than a few thousand of them in this jungle area—the final dregs of the magnificently handsome race of Mayas, of which, it has been calculated, there were 30,000,000 before Columbus.

After weeks of war with the vegetation, the expedition refound the ruins located from the air — immense temples, ivory - colored palaces, royal tombs and colossal carved pyramids. For days the only work of the expedition was cutting away the vines and flowers, grass, creepers and other vegetation which covered these splendid monuments, in order to see them and photograph them. The riddle of these unbelievable cities, almost intact under the network of orchids and tropical growth which shrouds them, hidden in the jungle, is one that archeologists have yet to explain.

How and why are they there? Who built them? When and for whom? What Emperors ruled here and why did they disappear? To look into the past can be as baffling as looking into the future. Count de Prorok sees this riddle as a challenge. And while the Mexican Government will establish a permanent camp at this newly discovered city, to continue the excavations, list and catalogue the objects discovered, map the location and sketch the ruins with that faultless accuracy which has made the Mexican Ministry of Archeology a subject of universal admiration, Count de Prorok is busily planning in Paris his next expedition—to the South Seas this time.

LONDON.

THAT extremely busy young man, the Prince of Wales, who is required to spend a good deal of his time flitting about the British Isles unveiling monuments, opening agricultural fairs, reviewing troops and in various other ways representing the Crown at public events, has a new air liner to carry him on his multitudinous missions.

It is one of the finest of winged machines, having been constructed at a reported cost of $70,000. It is the largest plane the Prince ever owned.

The new royal aircraft is a Vickers "Viastra" all-metal monoplane, equipped with two 600-horsepower engines, which give it a cruising speed of 130 miles an hour. They are Bristol "Pegasus" air-cooled radial engines and are mounted under the wings, one on either side of the fuselage. With its ordinary fuel capacity the machine has a cruising range of 700 miles, but an additional tank can be carried under the body to increase the range to more than 1000 miles.

From wing-tip to wing-tip the plane has a width of 70 feet and its length is 45 1-2 feet. Behind the enclosed cockpit, in which there are seats for two pilots and dual control apparatus, there is a commodious and luxurious passenger saloon, and behind it there are a lavatory and a luggage compartment. There is a small space in front of the cockpit for additional luggage. The cabin is about 20 feet long and slightly more than six feet high.

A SPECIAL feature of the plane is the sound-proof construction of the saloon. Next to the outer metal shell is a layer of kapok, or down. Inside that is a thickness of waterproof silk. Then comes a dead air space, crossed by pieces of balsa wood, which is lighter than cork. Next there is a layer of chamois leather, and next to that, the veneered interior paneling, composed of extremely thin layers of sycamore, kingswood and walnut, grown in the British Empire, of course. The windows are insulated and of double thickness, and the result is a compartment where people can talk without being disturbed by the motors.

The saloon is fireproofed, also, and passengers do not have to forego smoking. A further safety measure consists of four windows, two on each side, which can be pushed out without breaking to form emergency exits.

The chairs in the saloon have tubular frames of aluminum alloy, and are mounted on rails, along which they may be slipped forward and backward. The backs can be let down to any angle, and the backs of two chairs can be lowered to a horizontal position and then placed together to form a bed.

There are skylights in the roof of the saloon and ventilation ducts along its sides. Electric radiators provide heat when neded. There are lockers and cabinets in the walls and an electric fan is on the front partition.

ELECTRIC cigarette lighters, and hat hooks which do not merely support but clasp their burdens, are included in the fittings. A small cabinet contains an electric tea kit, a refreshment cabinet is attached to the rear door of the saloon, and in the luggage compartment is a refrigerator. The luggage compartment also contains a phonograph, portable typewriter and a wardrobe.

Six parachutes are carried in a cupboard in the roof of the saloon. They can be drawn out quickly by pulling protruding rings. They can be put on quickly, also, by merely fastening two hooks in the front. The body belts are well padded.

The plane is equipped, of course, with the latest type of flying instruments. It carries a radio transmitting and receiving set with a range of 300 miles.

A smaller craft, which will be used on short trips, also has just been bought by the Prince. It is a De Haviland "Dragon," a biplane.

MADRID.

THIS ancient stronghold of feminine decorum is wearing an air of self-satisfied roguishness, like a bashful young man who has just been upbraided for being a menace to womankind. The reason is that Madrid, hitherto committed to the ideal of strict seclusion for respectable women, has slipped just a trifle and in doing so has enjoyed a thrill so enchanting that its rapid and complete moral decadence seems now virtually assured. Madrid has been the stage for an international beauty contest!

Adventures such as this are, of course, old stuff to other world capitals, where convention does not frown so darkly on young women who display their charms in public. But it is brand new to Spain. It is going pretty far for Madrid to permit young women even to be seen at all in public places when unescorted, let alone to permit them (nice girls, too) to walk right out in front of a row of judges and lift their skirts above their knees. Such a thing has never been heard of before, but opinion in well-informed quarters is that this old city will see more of these things in the future. The idea seems to have caught hold in a big way.

The greatest cause for marvel in connection with this beauty contest, of course, is that Spain officially sanctioned it. The next one is that a city so inexperienced in staging beauty contests could have carried it off so smoothly without dueling between judges and rioting among the citizens. It must be said that this affair was dextrously managed and wound up—a thing unusual for any beauty contest—with all the participants pretty well satisfied, even if there were 14 contestants in the show and only one "Miss Europe" chosen. Such a thing has never been heard of before, but opinion in well-informed quarters is that this old city will see more of these things in the future. The idea seems to have caught hold in a big way.

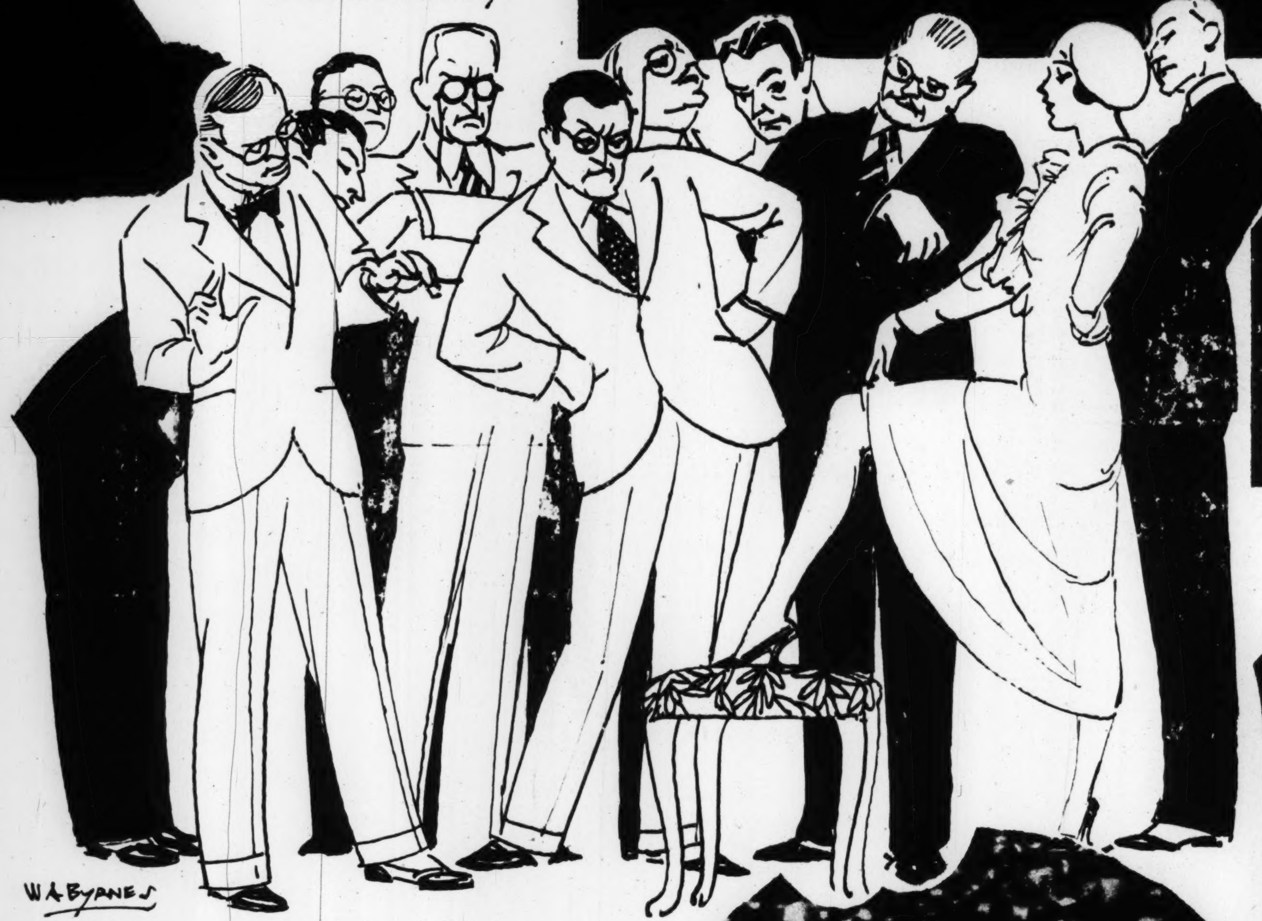
The greatest cause for marvel in connection with this beauty contest, of course, is that Spain officially sanctioned it. The next one is that a city so inexperienced in staging beauty contests could have carried it off so smoothly without dueling between judges and rioting among the citizens. It must be said that this affair was dextrously managed and wound up—a thing unusual for any beauty contest—with all the participants pretty well satisfied, even if there were 14 contestants in the show and only one "Miss Europe" chosen. The 14 judges accomplished this by a neat stroke of diplomacy. They awarded the title to "Miss Russia" through compromise and then quieted all objections by awarding some kind of prize to each one of the other participants. Even "Miss Hungary" dried her tears and left the hall in a good humor.

"Miss Hungary" was pretty badly broken up over the decision at first. She had lifted her skirts higher than anybody else in the procession—some thought she was even too generous in this respect—and had carried the steady gaze of most of the judges all the way up and down the promenade. She was sure she had first place cinched and, indeed, during the early balloting she was in a deadlock with "Miss France." Virtually all of the judges conceded she had the prettiest face. But the admirers of "Miss France" were stubborn and, to end the deadlock, "Miss Russia" finally was given the title of "Miss Europe."

All around, this international beauty contest was a grand occasion—almost as grand as a bullfight. Headed by Spain's President, Alcalda Zamora, the city's elite flocked to the dinner dance accompanying the event, and thousands who were unable to pay the price of admission blocked the Calle de Alcala outside and stood for hours waiting for the verdict and for a glimpse of "las misses" who chanced to pass by a window. There was a rousing demonstration when the beauties sauntered out on the long bridge in the center of the dance floor to show their charms officially. Women clambered on chairs and men crowded one another and shouted "que guapa!" From the moment dark-eyed "Miss Jugo-Slavia" started the march until "Miss Spain" wound up the procession there was as much pulling for favorites as one hears at a Kentucky horse race.



"With so much beauty to appraise, the judges had to have a second look at all the contestants and three or four looks at some of them."

AFTER the big parade the judges retired to "deliberate." There were 14 of them, men of all ages, professions and states of baldness. Each of the contestants was to have had a representative from her country on the jury, but no Scotchman and no Turk could be found, so Miss Scotland was represented by an Englishman and Miss Turkey by a Spaniard. On the first ballot, for elimination purposes, each judge was to "grade" the beauties, giving three points for facial beauty, three for bodily beauty and three for expression, the highest four contestants remaining for the finals. In this preliminary ballot only 13 judges were to cast judgment in each case, no judge passing decision on the girl from his country. In the finals, the judges were to talk over the situation, and ballot until one of the remaining four beauties obtained a clear majority.

As might have been expected, with so much beauty to appraise, the judges had to have a second look at all the contestants and three or four looks at some of them. After the main parade in public a private parade was held in the jury room so the judges could concentrate better on details. The girls were asked to lift their form-revealing gowns above the knees again, walk back and forth, pose this way and that, stoop over, kick and perform all manner of gymnastics—this being intended to eliminate guesswork and give a better line on merits and demerits of figure.

There was some doubt as to whether several of the 14 girls could really be classed as beauties, although they were very pretty girls, but from the first there was never any doubt about four of them falling in this select classification. These four were Miss France, Miss Hungary, Miss Russia and Miss Spain. On the first ballot they led the field by a wide margin, Miss France beating Miss Hungary for first place with a score of 89 points out of a possible 117.

Nobody could doubt that these four were real beauties—Miss Hungary, for instance. She was the kind of girl people stop to look at on the street. She was only 16 years old, but nobody could tell that from her appearance. She looked very grown up and sophisticated. She had dark brown hair and eyes, a nose usually described as cute, a dainty chin and a smile that was spontaneous, charming and dignified. So far as facial beauty was concerned she had things pretty much her own way.

"Miss Germany" and "Miss Hungary" pose with Pepe Bienvenida, a well-known matador, before the bullfight they attended.

But Miss France—there was a girl who not only had a pretty face, but had a body that seemed to be very close to perfection. She was literally loaded down with "it" and sex appeal and all those other qualities of personality that make people forget about facial beauty. So Miss France—Jacqueline Bertin was her name—won the count for bodily beauty just as decisively as Miss Hungary had won it with her face.

Miss Spain's outstanding qualities, the jurors agreed, were also corporeal.

Miss Spain.

Senorita Emilia Docet represents the new modern woman of Spain, the kind interested in sports, politics and business as contrasted with the traditional slave to home and church. Senorita Docet is very dark and there is something mysterious about her slanting eyes. Everybody conceded her face was strikingly attractive, but nevertheless it was her bodily charm that stuck in the memory longest.

MISS RUSSIA, however, was a beauty of a different sort. She was the girl with soul — a modest type, with melancholy blue eyes and a smile that carries just a hint of sadness. There is abundant reason for her sadness, too. During the Russian revolution, her father, a White Russian General, was killed by the Bolsheviki and her mother fled with her from the war-torn country, and she has since remained an exile. The tragedy of all this still seems to lurk in Tatiana Masloff's eyes. She is not the type one would instinctively select for a beauty queen, but she is attractive from nearly all points of view. She is 19, has light brown hair, is 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 132 pounds. A handful of exiles in Paris elected her to be Miss Russia, but admittedly without much hope that she would be elected Miss Europe.

As previously stated, however, it was not Miss Russia's overwhelming beauty that resulted in this decision, but a deadlock between Miss France and Miss Hungary. The judges wrangled over these two for some time, balloting and balloting again. Both were repeatedly called upon to parade again, and Miss France was kept bending over as college freshmen are sometimes required to do for the convenience of sophomores armed with paddles. But the judges used no barrel staves. Miss France merely got whacked with a lot of concentrated gazing.

There is no telling how long the jury might have wrangled over the respective merits of French and Hungarian beauty had the crowd been willing to wait. But the crowd wasn't. There came an insistent demand for a verdict and there were signs that a riot might break out if the people were held in suspense much longer. It was a situation calling for immediate action. That was where M. Maurice de Waleffe, the kingfish of the show, gave the jury a lesson in fast beauty picking. Neither Miss France nor Miss Hungary would do, he said. Miss France was "too much woman," and Miss Hungary not enough. "We must strike a medium," he argued, "and she must be a modest, not a flashy type." Thereupon a hasty ballot was taken and, presto!—Miss Russia had won without even a close second.

IT WAS a dramatic moment when fat, moustachioed Monsieur de Waleffe led the beaming Miss Russia onto the stage and announced: "Miss Russia has been elected Miss Europe!"

Tatiana's smile lost some of its melancholy for a moment, but it quickly faded from her lips when a roar of boos and hisses greeted the announcement of her victory. She didn't know that Spanish crowds always give way to their emotions like this, and she took it seriously. "Abajo Miss Russia!" cried some ("Down with Miss Russia!") She tore herself away from Monsieur de Waleffe, retired to a room by herself and wept bitterly. Large tears rolled down her cheeks, leaving blank streaks across her evening's makeup. In another room Miss Hungary was also crying, disappointed that she had not won.

But the judges were equal to the occasion. They fixed things promptly. Miss Hungary was declared to have the most beautiful face, Miss France the most beautiful body and Miss Spain the most harmonious proportions.

Ivana Fusco, Miss Italy, was voted the most genuine type. In the opinion of many she ranked next to Miss Hungary in beauty, and there were those who had her picked to win the contest. She is probably the only one of the 14 beauty queens who could make good in the movies. She has much expression, and appears to best advantage in photographs.

Charlotte Hartmann, Miss Germany, got the medal for physical culture, despite the excellent gymnastic record of Miss France. Like Miss Russia, she was picked in Paris, for Herr Hitler looks upon beauty contests with grim disapproval.

Dragica Ugarkovitch—Miss Jugo-Slavia—who aroused interest among Spaniards because she cried at a bullfight, got the prize for having the most beautiful bust.

Karen Marie Lowert, Miss Denmark, a genuine platinum blonde, was declared to have the most beautiful hair. Spanish girls, who think a good daub

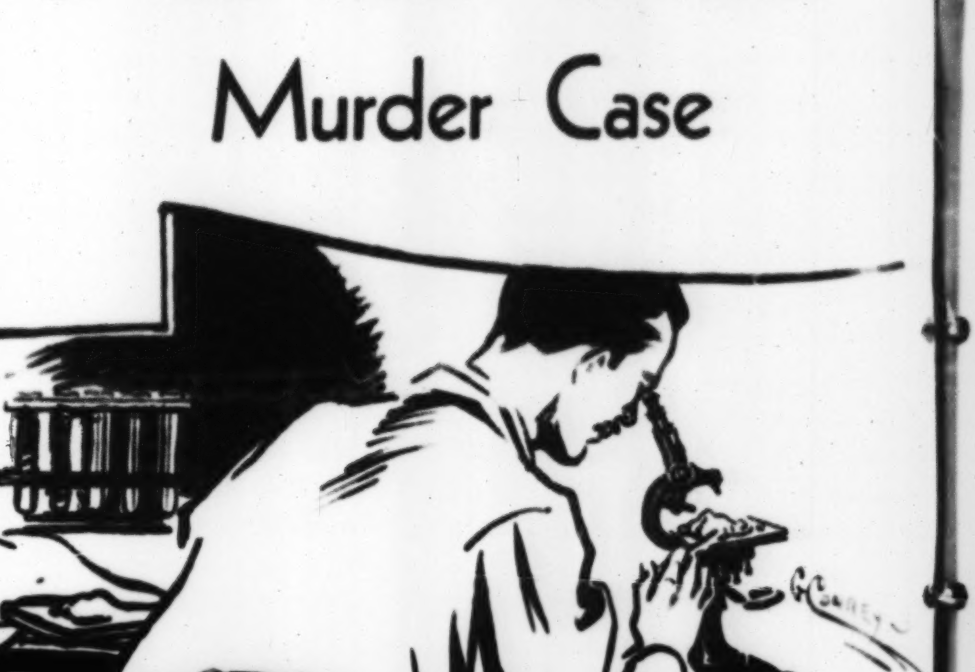
The Laboratory Solution of the Rose Gendler Murder Case

Rose Gendler.



Though Evidence Furnished by the Lie Detector Is Not Accepted in Court, It Led to the Analysis of a Few Spoonfuls of Dust That, in Turn, Led to the Conviction of Maurice Meyer.

Maurice Meyer.

ROCK ISLAND, Illinois.

NOW that Maurice Meyer has been sent to prison for 90 years as the slayer of Rose Gendler, the laboratory can credit itself with another victory in conflict with crime. Through analysis of a few spoonfuls of dust and the use of a "lie detector," authorities have found a solution to one of the most baffling murder mysteries in the police annals of the Tri-Cities—the neighboring communities of Rock Island and Moline, Illinois, and Davenport, Iowa, which are grouped around the confluence of the Mississippi and Rock rivers.

Rose Gendler was a pretty and popular girl of 22, who lived with her step-father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Mark, and two step-brothers, Sam and David Mark, in Rock Island. The house in which they resided belonged to her, having been part of her father's estate. The family was in modest circumstances, and Rose had worked at various jobs usually as stenographer or clerk. At the time tragedy overtook her, she was employed as an extra clerk for the Christmas trade in the toy department of a Davenport department store.

At 9:30 o'clock the night of December 21, 1932, Rose left the store and boarded a street car for home. At midnight she hadn't arrived, and her anxious mother asked the police to look for her. At 4 o'clock the next morning a note demanding $2000 ransom for the young woman was found pinned to the back door of her home. At 8 a. m. her body was discovered. Incased in a gunny sack, it was lying on the frozen surface of the Rock River, under the Moline bridge.

There were many wounds and bruises on the girl's body. Apparently it had been dropped from the bridge in the belief it would break through the ice and remain hidden in the river until spring. But the ice was strong enough to withstand the impact of the 132 pounds in the sack, and when the light came that frosty morning the grim bundle was in plain sight.

The police of the Tri-Cities, following their practice of co-operation, began a concerted effort to solve the mystery of Rose Gendler's death. And they quickly found themselves up against a blank wall in attempting to learn even why she was killed. It was at first thought that she had been criminally assaulted, but medical examination disproved this theory—found, in fact, no evidence of any sexual basis for the crime. Investigation of Rose's life also failed to yield a clew. There had been a rumor that the young woman had a great deal of money, inherited from her father, but members of her family said she had only a few dollars in cash and her inheritance was in real estate which had depreciated in value.

With the routine investigation apparently doomed to failure, the police tried something else. They borrowed a "lie detector" from the Crime Detection Laboratory of Northwestern University—and two of the laboratory experts, Leonarde Keeler and L. M. Wilson, to apply it. Then they summoned several persons and questioned them, with the instrument recording their blood pressure, respiration and heart action as they gave their answers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Mark.

Rose's step-father, Jacob Mark, and her two step-brothers, Sam and David, were questioned under these conditions. Two other men also were required to take the "lie detector" test. They were Sol Meyer and his son, Maurice, 22 years old, who lived on the same street as the Mark family, about two blocks separating the two houses. Young Meyer had known Rose since childhood. He was operator and part owner of an overall cleaning shop in Moline. During the first days of the investigation he acted as adviser to the dead girl's family in its contacts with the police.

SO FAR as was disclosed, no one was incriminated by the "lie detector." No one was held after the questioning. At best, the device could only direct suspicion toward one of those tested; courts have refused to accept its record as legal evidence.

But the ordeal apparently preyed on the nerves of young Meyer and caused him to make a serious mistake. Shortly after he was interrogated, he disappeared—fled from Rock Island in an automobile. His flight immediately directed suspicion to him and caused an intensive investigation of his possible connection with Rose Gendler's death.

It was learned then that Rose had telephoned to Maurice about 5:30 the last evening of her life and had asked him to meet her after she finished work. Girls at the store said they heard her talking to him. The young man had withheld this fact from the investigators and had said he did not see the girl that night.

Their suspicions thus strengthened, the investigators sought a tangible link between Maurice and the killing. They found it in a few ounces of dust. They took dust from the sack which had held the girl's body and compared it under the microscope with sweepings from Meyer's truck and the back room of his overall laundry. The different samples of dust were alike in 10 characteristics—a similarity which convinced the experts from the crime laboratory that the gunny sack had been in the overall laundry and also in the truck.

On the strength of this evidence, authorities were preparing to send out circulars asking for young Meyer's arrest, when he returned to Rock Island, consulted an attorney and surrendered to the police. After wandering over the country from Texas to California, he had yielded to the persuasion of his relatives, who, believing him to be innocent, had urged him to come back and face whatever charge was brought against him.

Questioned again by the police, Maurice readily admitted that Rose had telephoned to him the evening of December 21. In explanation of his failure to mention it before, he said: "I felt too tough about it. If I had met her she wouldn't have died."

Then the inquisitors told him of the connection they had established between the gunny sack and his laundry and truck. "We know you had Rose's body in your truck," one of them said. "How did it get there if you didn't put it there?"

With that the prisoner's resistance broke. "All right," he cried, "I'll tell you about it. But don't get the idea I killed her. She hurt herself in a fall and I threw the body off the bridge because I was afraid no one would believe me if I said I didn't kill her."

HE WENT on, then, and told his story in detail. His statement was put in writing and he signed it. Omitting conventional prelude and conclusion, calculated to make it admissible in court, it read as follows:

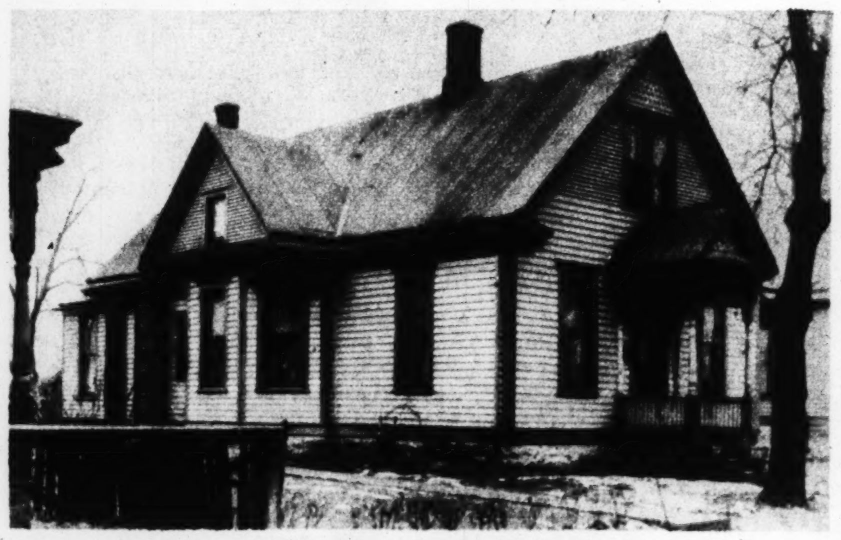
"Rose Gendler called me at 5:50 p. m. Wednesday, December 21, 1932, from Davenport, at my shop in Moline, asking me if I was going to be in Davenport that evening, to which I replied 'no.'

"I left the shop to go home and arrived at 6 o'clock. Had supper, laid down until about 8:30 p. m. Then got up, went downtown to Hickey brothers cigar store at Nineteenth street and Third avenue, Rock Island, and left there about 9:30 to go home. Upon reaching Fifteenth street and Third avenue I recognized Rose in the street car and there being cars ahead of me, I let them pass and then followed the street car to Seventeenth street and Second avenue, to pick up Rose and take her home. Then driving Seventeenth street, Rose mentioned that she wanted to see a picture I had in the shop, so we drove to the shop.

"Arriving at the shop, I drove in through the rear entrance and walked through the shop to the office and got the picture, and also my watch, which I had left there that day. Upon returning to the truck, I found Rose had gotten out of the truck to go into the shop and had fallen on the ice and hit her head on the corner of the building. I tried to revive her immediately and saw that I could not, so I picked her up, carried her into the shop and then tried again to revive her, which I failed to do.

"I then became panicky and frightened, thinking I might be held as responsible for her death. I then bound and gagged her, put her in a sack and carried her out to the truck, put her in and then drove around for a while, trying to decide what to do. I then decided to dispose of her body. I then drove out to the Rock River bridge, route 80, stopped my truck and then dropped her body off onto the ice.

"I then drove back to Moline and on the way decided to write a ransom note to avert suspicion on myself, if any would arise. I went back to the shop and wrote the ransom note. I then went to the Mark residence and placed the note on the back door and then drove back downtown to the De Luxe Restaurant and had a hot lemonade and then drove home and went to bed."



Where Rose Gendler lived.

Maurice went on trial in Rock Island before Judge Leonard E. Telleen, waiving a jury. The State asked for the death penalty. The hearing lasted more than a month, including days of testimony by medical experts for State and defense. Throughout the trial Meyer stuck to his story that he had not killed the girl; that he had merely found her apparently fatally hurt and had yielded to panic in disposing of the body.

The State tried to prove by medical testimony that Rose was not dead when she was thrown from the bridge. Doctors said the head injury which Maurice said she had received when he found her lying beside the truck would not have caused her death immediately, although it might have resulted fatally in a few hours, possibly a day or two. They were inclined to think that a crushed lung, received in the fall from the bridge, was the direct cause of death. The argument on this point involved the question of whether a person's blood circulates after death. Blood had been found in the girl's pleural cavity, and the State contended that condition would not have existed if she had been dead before she received the lung injury.

In response to the defense contention that Maurice's course of action had been dictated by panic, the State argued that sufficient time must have elapsed before he threw the girl off the bridge to allow him to regain some composure and realize the consequences of his act. The prosecution also made much of the fact Meyer made no attempt to get medical aid for his companion.

The State did not establish a motive for the crime. Several theories had been entertained. One was that Maurice had tried to borrow $2000 from Rose and had been enraged by her refusal to lend it to him. This idea lost credibility when it was shown that the young woman could not have raised that much money. There was also the theory that Meyer had killed the girl in jealous anger, and another that she had been beaten in defending herself from a criminal assault.

BUT Maurice said their friendship was not a love affair; that he treated her as he would a sister. And the State was unable to offer conclusive proof of any of the theories.

When the time came for Judge Telleen to announce his verdict, Meyer's hopes were raised momentarily by the jurist's ruling against some of the indictments. But the Judge continued: "To the indictments charging murder the defendant is found guilty." And he sentenced Maurice Meyer to 90 years in prison.

Defense lawyers pointed out that the penalty would keep Meyer in the penitentiary longer than if he had received a life sentence. Under the rule that a prisoner becomes eligible for parole after he has served a third of his sentence, 70 years is accepted as the average life span. By this reckoning, Maurice, at 22, would have 48 years of life before him, and when a third of that, or 16 years, had been served, he would be eligible for parole if under a life sentence. But under a 90-year sentence he must serve 30 years before applying for clemency. The Judge said the sentence of 90 years was mandatory because of the indictments on which Meyer had been found guilty.

Meyer wept when he was sentenced. But he indicated he would not appeal from the judgment. He said his family had exhausted its finances in his defense.

Even after sentence was passed he insisted he was not guilty of murder. "I repeat," he declared, "that I did not kill Rose Gendler."

But one of the investigators says that despite the fact the Rock River was frozen over, there was no ice on the ground at 10 o'clock of the night Rose met her death.

JACK DOTY is going to start on a fishing trip to Reelfoot Lake in a few days. He is getting ready now. It will be the second time he has started on that fishing trip. He started first on the night of May 3, a little more than two years ago, but failed to reach his destination. It was what happened to him that night and what has happened since that make his second venture now a matter of extraordinary interest. Most people don't go fishing any more after going through what Jack Doty has been through during the last two years. Eighteen months of that time he spent lying on his stomach in an oven heated to a temperature of 102 degrees.

It was all the result of an automobile accident—Doty's delayed fishing trip and his subsequent long fight for life. The odds were all against him when on the night of May 3, 1931, an ambulance came screaming up to the entrance of the Baptist Hospital here and Doty's burned and unconscious form was carried into the emergency room. Doctors shook their heads and said he couldn't get well. They told him that when he regained consciousness.

BERLIN.

JAN ERIK HANUSSEN has been "supressed." That's the only explanation which can be found for his sudden end. Many people in Germany have been suppressed since the Hitler regime. They disappear. One never hears of them again. But Hanussen was too well known. So there are questions that persist, whispered questions.

There is no answer. There are only guesses. Hanussen knew altogether too much. That, in all probability, is why his body was found in a wooded park with five bullet holes in it, the face ground into the earth as though in a last gesture of contempt or sadistic anger.

This strange man, this charlatan, this quack, this mountebank, was called "the Nazi Rasputin." Certainly he knew a great deal. He knew about sinister orgies that brought in names high in the Nazi councils. He knew certain of the mysterious machinations that went on behind the desperate, fevered life of Berlin before the Hitler revolution. Yes, Hanussen, the seer, the prophet, the newspaper owner, knew too much. Once he had been useful to Hitler. It was awkward for a man of Hitler's power to be in debt to this ugly, stoop-shouldered, uncouth man, who was, besides, a Jew.

Hanussen was born Herman Stein schneider. He was born, by a curiou coincidence, in Austria in the sam year as his hero, Hitler, which mad had not killed the girl; that he had merely found her apparently fatally hurt and had yielded to panic in disposing of the body.

The State tried to prove by medical testimony that Rose was not dead when she was thrown from the bridge. Doctors said the head injury which Maurice said she had received when he found her lying beside the track would not have caused her death immediately, although it might have resulted fatally in a few hours, possibly a day or two. They were inclined to think that a crushed lung, received in the fall from the bridge, was the direct cause of death. The argument on this point involved the question of whether a person's blood circulates after death. Blood had been found in the girl's pleural cavity, and the State contended that condition would not have existed if she had been dead before she received the lung injury.

In response to the defense contention that Maurice's course of action had been dictated by panic, the State argued that sufficient time must have elapsed before he threw the girl off the bridge to allow him to regain some composure and realize the consequences of his act. The prosecution also made much of the fact Meyer made no attempt to get medical aid for his companion.

The State did not establish a motive for the crime. Several theories had been entertained. One was that Maurice had tried to borrow $2000 from Rose and had been enraged by her refusal to lend it to him. This idea lost credibility when it was shown that the young woman could not have raised that much money. There was also the theory that Meyer had killed the girl in jealous anger, and another that she had been beaten in defending herself from a criminal assault.

BUT Maurice said their friendship was not a love affair; that he treated her as he would a sister. And the State was unable to offer conclusive proof of any of the theories.

When the time came for Judge Telleen to announce his verdict, Meyer's hopes were raised momentarily by the jurist's ruling against some of the indictments. But the Judge continued: "To the indictments charging murder the defendant is found guilty." And he sentenced Maurice Meyer to 90 years in prison.

Defense lawyers pointed out that the penalty would keep Meyer in the penitentiary longer than if he had received a life sentence. Under the rule that a prisoner becomes eligible for parole after he has served a third of his sentence, 70 years is accepted as the average life span. By this reckoning, Maurice, at 22, would have 48 years of life before him, and when a third of that, or 16 years, had been served, he would be eligible for parole if under a life sentence. But under a 90-year sentence he must serve 30 years before applying for clemency. The Judge said the sentence of 90 years was mandatory because of the indictments on which Meyer had been found guilty.

Meyer wept when he was sentenced. But he indicated he would not appeal from the judgment. He said his family had exhausted its finances in his defense.

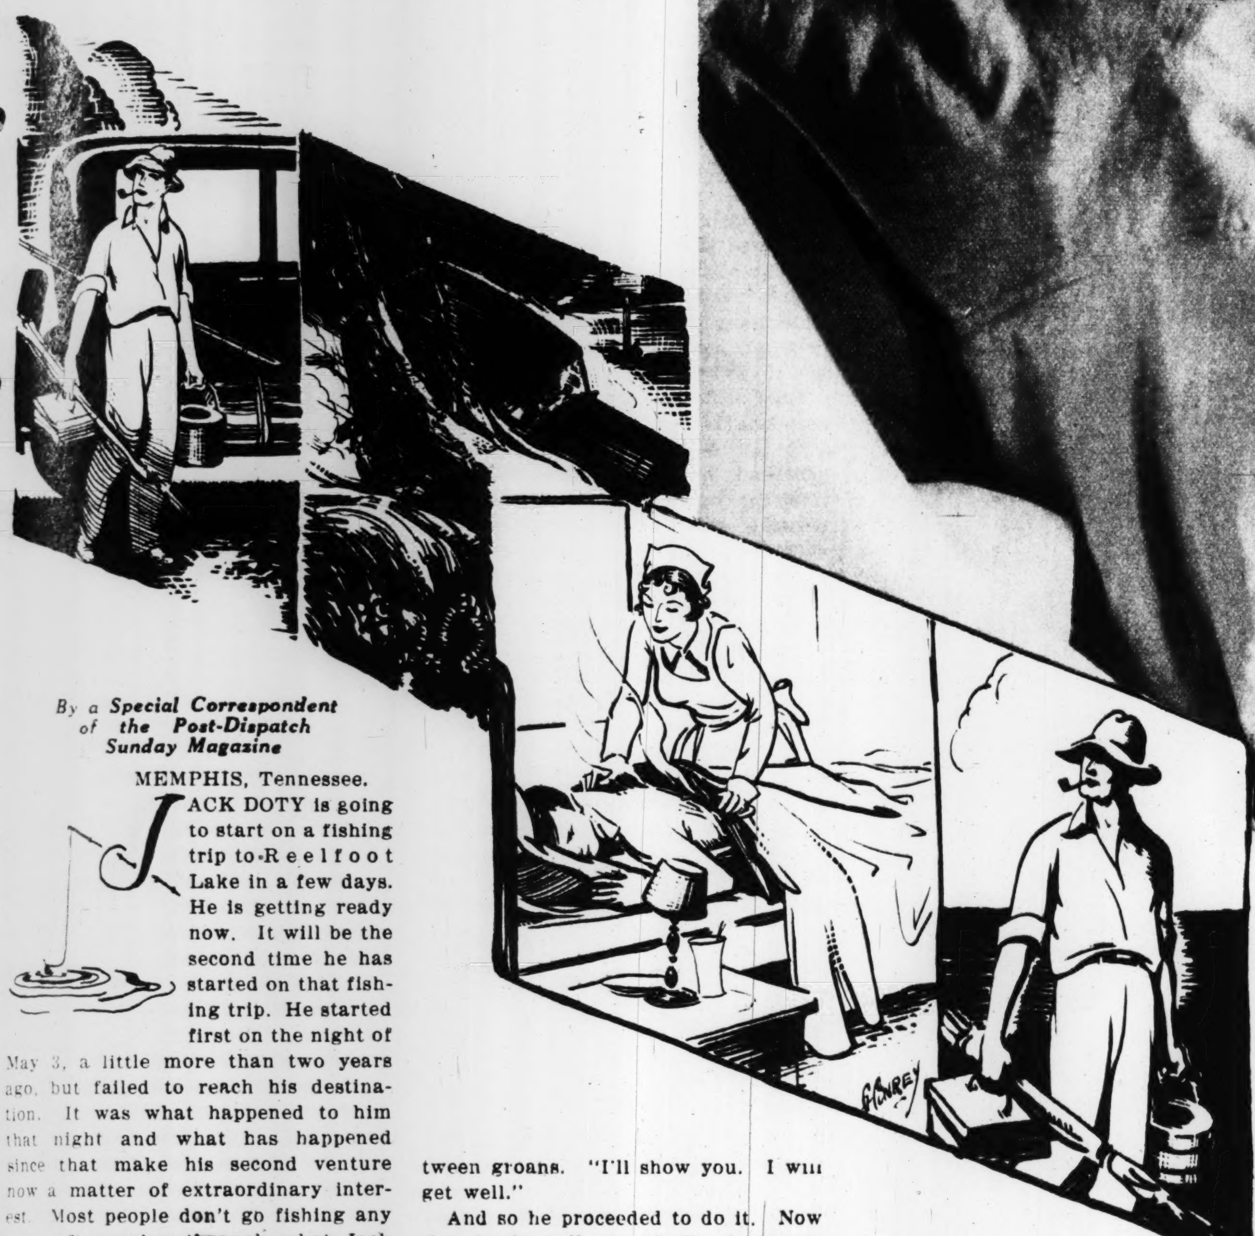
Even after sentence was passed, he insisted he was not guilty of murder. "I repeat," he declared, "that I did not kill Rose Gendler."

But one of the investigators says that despite the fact the Rock River was frozen over, there was no ice on the ground at 10 o'clock of the night Rose met her death.

Spent Eighteen Months in an Oven

And Now That His Ordeal Is Over, He Is Resuming The Fishing Trip That Was So Tragically Interrupted.

Jack Doty in the position he had to maintain for eighteen months.



Jack Doty as he is today.

MEMPHIS, Tennessee.

JACK DOTY is going to start on a fishing trip to Reelfoot Lake in a few days. He is getting ready now. It will be the second time he has started on that fishing trip. He started first on the night of May 3, a little more than two years ago, but failed to reach his destination. It was what happened to him that night and what has happened since that make his second venture now a matter of extraordinary interest. Most people don't go fishing any more after going through what Jack Doty has been through during the last two years. Eighteen months of that time he spent lying on his stomach in an oven heated to a temperature of 102 degrees.

It was all the result of an automobile accident—Doty's delayed fishing trip and his subsequent long fight for life. The odds were all against him when on the night of May 3, 1931, an ambulance came screaming up to the entrance of the Baptist Hospital here and Doty's burned and unconscious form was carried into the emergency room. Doctors shook their heads and said he couldn't get well. They told him that when he regained consciousness.

"The hell I can't," he replied between groans. "I'll show you. I will get well."

And so he proceeded to do it. Now that he is well, practically, he wants to signalize and celebrate his recovery by taking up his fishing trip where he left off and completing it. It is his way of serving notice that he has kept his word.

Two men were killed in the accident which interrupted Doty's fishing trip. Doty and three companions were driving north of here near Covington when their machine ran off the highway, turned over and caught fire. One of the occupants was killed instantly. A second died before he could be taken to a hospital. A third was slightly injured. Doty was taken from the wreckage with his back burned to the bone and one arm badly seared.

At the hospital it was determined that in order to have a chance for life, the injured man would have to be kept in a high temperature until the burned flesh on his back healed sufficiently to permit grafting of new skin on the wound. It might take months at best and he might not even live through it. Would he be willing to undergo such torture? He would. And so the heroic treatment began.

A special oven was constructed at the hospital and Doty was placed in it. Because of the condition of his back he had to lie most of the time on his stomach and day and night he had to endure a heat of 102 degrees. Throughout the long hot summer of 1931 he lay there baking, but summer didn't make any particular difference. It was always summer in that oven. By fall the doctors began to see some improvement in the condition of the flesh on his back, but it was still far from being in a shape to permit grafting of skin. He would have to stay longer in the oven. So he spent the winter in it.

"I was glad to see winter come," he relates, "because the hot summer almost got me. In winter the heat was still 102 degrees, but it looked cooler anyway."

Spring came and found Doty still lying on his stomach and still baking. He faced a second blistering summer. And then, just as hot weather was beginning, the doctors decided at last that skin could be grafted on his back. So during the second summer he had to endure not only the oven's heat, but also the discomfort of skin grafting. That was a slow and tedious process. Bit by bit, however, the surgeons took skin from unburned parts of his body and placed it over the burned area. Doty stood it without a whimper. He says he didn't mind it very much now because he was sure he was going to get well. That was what mattered most. His young wife and small son came to him every day and that helped considerably.

Finally, when summer was over and cooler weather was on hand, he was allowed to leave the oven and was taken home. He still had to lie on his stomach while his back was healing, but at any rate he was out of that blistering heat. With continued patience he would be able to walk in a few months.

Early this spring, almost two years from that eventful night when he had his encounter with death, Doty was allowed to get on crutches.

THIS was only to last for a week, however. A week after May 3, the second anniversary of his accident, he threw the crutches down and walked by himself.

Then three days later he was forced to return to the oven again. Some of the skin on his leg broke open and infection set in. For another month of hot weather he baked, but, after all, it wasn't much hotter in the oven than out of it. When finally he got out a short time ago he at once started planning, with some friends, to complete that fishing trip he started more than two years ago.

The Sudden End of the "German Rasputin"

Jan Erik Hanussen Made a Fortune Out of His "Prophecies," but His Decline in Favor Was Followed Almost Immediately by His Disappearance and Death.

BERLIN.

JAN ERIK HANUSSEN has been "supressed." That's the only explanation which can be found for his sudden end. Many people in Germany have been suppressed since the Hitler regime. They disappear. One never hears of them again. But Hanussen was too well known. So there are questions that persist, whispered questions.

There is no answer. There are only guesses. Hanussen knew altogether too much. That, in all probability, is why his body was found in a wooded park with five bullet holes in it, the face ground into the earth as though in a last gesture of contempt or sadistic anger.

This strange man, this charlatan, this quack, this mountebank, was called "the Nazi Rasputin." Certainly he knew a great deal. He knew about sinister orgies that brought names high in the Nazi councils. He knew certain of the mysterious machinations that went on behind the desperate, fevered life of Berlin before the Hitler revolution. Yes, Hanussen, the seer, the prophet, the newspaper owner, knew too much. Once he had been useful to Hitler. It was awkward for a man of Hitler's power to be in debt to this ugly, stoop-shouldered, uncouth man, who was, besides, a Jew.

Hanussen was born Herman Steinschneider. He was born, by a curious coincidence, in Austria in the same year as his hero, Hitler, which made him 44 at the time of his murder. Hanussen began life modestly enough as a "glass-eater" and lion-tamer but he soon developed a superior racket in occultism and hypnotism. During the war he was employed to brace up the morale of the Austrian troops by hypnotic seance.

When the war was at an end, Hanussen found that the hypnotic business was better than ever. Inflationist Vienna was a city that grasped at straws of any kind. But he was proved to have faked weights in an act in which he demonstrated the lifting powers of a frail girl supposedly in a hypnotic trance.

The next episode was in Czecho-Slovakia.

There he was arrested for wholesale fraud but allowed to have a trial at which he was permitted to demonstrate his occult arts—finding hidden objects, giving the contents of secret messages and similar nonsense.

He was not convicted, but he left Czecho-Slovakia and trotted off to Berlin.

Post-war Berlin was his ideal field. It was a crazy world in which eroticism and eccentricity of every kind flourished. Charlatans—fortune tellers, astrologers, occultists of all kinds and description—abounded in Berlin. But Hanussen, with his shrewd sense of publicity, soon had captured all the worthwhile clientele. He went in for occultism on a scale of mass-production, literally.

Soon he became rich, with a string of race-horses, his own yacht, several Mercedes cars. And a string of newspapers, including one that had a circulation of 200,000 copies.

Hanussen's papers took up the cause of Hitler and Nordic supremacy with a vigor that put Hitler's own newspapers to shame.

One of Hanussen's closest associates was a blonde Nordic, no less a person than Count Helldorf. It is said to have been through this nobleman that Hanussen by actual gifts of large sums of money financed one whole section of the Nazis.

And it was in his own field that Hanussen was able to give more practical aid. In season and out he predicted the rise of the Hitler star. This was the man of destiny, the man fate had fixed upon to lead the German people back to greatness. So ran the prophecies of the occult expert.

It is easy enough to belittle this influence, but it had a great effect upon a considerable portion of the public.

Never once, so far as anyone can determine, did Hitler move to repudiate his prophet. There is every reason to believe that he accepted all of Hanussen's tributes and prophecies for what they were worth—valuable grist in the propaganda mill.

ONE of Hanussen's tricks was to tell wealthy clients, and particularly Jews, that an evil fate would befall them unless they gave a good sum of money to the first blond Nazi that they saw. This blond Nazi was usually Count Helldorf who officiated in the ante-rooms of Hanussen's swanky salons.

The end came very quickly after the Nazi triumph. First Hanussen was taken for a ride, in American gangster fashion, having been seized almost at the door of the Scala Theater where he was appearing. Some days later he was found disfigured and badly beaten. He tried to slink out of sight but he had been too conspicuous. He was taken for a second and fatal ride. The murder happened in the area ruled by Count Helldorf, who is now Police Chief of Potsdam.

Part of letter and initials of Benjamin Franklin.

NEW YORK.

HOW some of the world's most famous men and women expressed their passion is revealed by a rare collection of historic love letters gathered together by Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, noted collector, and now being exhibited in his New York library.

As rare manuscripts, the 70 letters in the collection are worth $1,000,000 or more. But as human documents, offering an intimate glimpse of the hearts and minds of famous personages they are priceless, for they eloquently reveal a phase of the life of the great persons who wrote them that most histories either entirely ignore or refer to with discreet brevity.

The letters form a veritable lexicon of love, for they cover a wide range of emotion, from the burning flame of Keats' tragic passion for Fanny Brawne to the urbane, intellectualized tenderness of Benjamin Franklin for Madame Brillon. But all of them are not ardent expressions of emotion. The letters of the romantics—Keats, Shelley, Poe—are deeply moving. But many of the others fail to suggest the ecstasy to be found in a batch of breach-of-promise letters, while the authors of some of these billets-doux even seemed to think there was no lack of appropriateness in conveying such tender information as the rising price of fish in London and the varying efficacy of certain types of physic.

One of the rarest and most valuable letters in the entire collection, and at the same time probably the most moving, was written on January 4, 1848, by Edgar Allan Poe to George Eveleth, his friend and publisher. It is a reply to a letter from Eveleth. In it Poe makes a number of interesting answers to questions about various of his stories, but the most valuable portion of this letter is Poe's explanation of the tragedy in his life that led him to seek relief in drunkenness.

"YOU say, 'Can you hint to me what was the terrible evil' which caused the irregularities so profoundly lamented?" says Poe, quoting Eveleth's note. "Yes; I can do more than hint. This 'evil' was the greatest which can befall a man. Six years ago, a wife, whom I loved as no man ever loved before, ruptured a blood vessel in singing. Her life was despaired of. I took leave of her forever and underwent all the agonies of her death. She recovered partially and I again hoped. At the end of a year the vessel broke again—I went through precisely the same scene. Again in about a year afterward. Then again—again—again, and even once again, at varying intervals. Each time I felt all the agonies of her death—and at each accession of the disorder I loved her more dearly and clung to her life with more desperate pertinacity. But I am constitutionally sensitive—nervous in a very unusual degree. I became insane, with long intervals of horrible sanity. During these fits of absolute unconsciousness I drank, God only knows how often or how much. As a matter of course, my enemies referred the insanity to the drink rather than the drink to the insanity. I had, indeed, nearly abandoned all hope of a permanent cure when I found one in the death of my wife. This I can and do endure as becomes a man—it was the horrible, never-ending oscillation between hope and despair which I could not longer have endured without total loss of reason. In the death of what was my life, then, I receive a new, but, Oh God! how melancholy an existence!"

The wife to whom Poe refers in this letter was, of course, his beautiful cousin, Virginia Clemm, whom he married in 1836. She died, in the manner described in the above letter, in 1847, and Poe followed her to the grave 18 months later—less than a year after writing the letter to Eveleth.

The love affair between John Keats and Fanny Brawne was also tragic, and in one sense even more poignant, in that Keats never lived to realize his great longing to make her his wife. There are three of his letters to Fanny Brawne in the collection. In one of them he refers to the "weight and tightness" in his chest—the consumption that was the great obstacle to his marriage to Fanny and that was soon to carry him off.

"I will resent my heart being made a football," he cries in one of the letters, protesting against the uncertainty of her devotion. "You will call this madness. I have heard you say that it was not unpleasant to wait a few years. You have other amusements. Your mind is away. You have not brooded over one idea as I have, and how should you? You are to me an object intensely desirable; the air I breathe in a room empty of you is unhealthy. I am not the same to you, so you can wait."

AND in another of these intensely accusatory letters he breaks out: "My Dearest Girl—You do not feel as I do—you do not know what it is to love—one day you may—your time is not come. . . . For myself, I have been a martyr the whole time, and for this reason I speak; the confession is forc'd from me by the torture. I appeal to you by the blood of that Christ you believe in: Do not write to me if you have done anything this month which it would have pained me to have seen. . . . If you have done so, I wish this coming night may be my last. I cannot live without you."

Unlike Keats, Shelly was more fortunate in love; indeed, too fortunate, for it was his inability to return the devotion of Harriet, his first wife, that led to many of his difficulties. In a letter of his, transcribed in the hand of Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, his second wife, to whom it was addressed, we find a clear indication of success in the very field where Keats so sadly failed:

"My Dearest Love: I accept your kind present of your picture. I wish you would get it prettily framed for me. I will wear for your sake upon my heart this image which is ever present in my mind . . ."

And in a letter written to him by Mary Shelley, who is known today for having written the novel "Frankenstein," we find that her love did not blind her to an understanding of certain aspects of Shelley's temperament.

"My Sweet Love," she begins a letter to him while he was in England vainly trying to gain custody of his two children left motherless by the suicide of Harriet, "You were born to be a Don Quixote, and if that celebrated personage had ever existed except in the brain of Cervantes I should certainly form a theory of transmigration to prove that you lived in Spain some hundred years before and fought with windmills."

Robert Burns, the greatest of all Scottish poets, in his correspondence with Mrs. Agnes MacLehose, found it necessary to bestow on her the more romantic name of "Clarinda," sentimentally signing his letters with the name of the well-known amorous swain of antiquity, "Sylvander."

The collection also contains letters from Burns to Mrs. Riddell, for whom he had warm regard, and to Mrs. Dunlop, to whom he expressed, in philosophic mood, his dread of the time when death would end their love, saying: "Can it be possible that when I resign this frail, feverish being, I shall still find myself in conscious existence! When the last gasp of agony has announced that I am no more to those that knew me and the few that loved me . . . shall I yet be warm in life, seeing and seen, enjoying and enjoyed?"

Although Dr. Samuel Johnson was probably incapable of anything resembling a grand passion, his letters to Mrs. Hester Thrale are an interesting heritage of a famous friendship and occasionally betray a great warmth, although the contents of some of his notes were decidedly unromantic.

In many of these letters Johnson regales the fair lady with such lovely topics as ipecac and other unspeakable nostrums which he was in the habit of imbibing. He frequently mentions the doses he was taking, as though this were vital news and of great interest to the mercurial Hester. Occasionally, however, he reveals a note of genuine tenderness and love, as when he wrote to her saying: "But let me have kind letters full of yourself, of your own hopes and your own fears, and your own thoughts, and then go where you will. You will find your journey, however, but a barren business; it is dull to live neither scolding nor scolded, neither governing nor governed. Now try."

Whether it was a desire to follow his injunction to "go where you will" or whether it was a surfeit of ipecac that drove her to it, the attractive lady later disappointed Dr. Johnson by running off with the Italian Piozzi.

THE famous letters of Benjamin Franklin to Madame Brillón, written while he was Minister to France, are among the wittiest and most entertaining of all love letters and plainly indicate why Franklin has been called the first civilized American.

In one of these letters he writes: "I had not the happiness, my dear friend, to see you on Wednesday evening, because my horses were at Paris with the young man, and I have neither feet nor wings. If I had wings, I should have flown to you, and I think I should sometimes scratch on the window of your bedchamber. It was very mischievous of Nature to deny us the advantages that she has wasted so profusely on all the little good-for-nothing birds and flies."

Lord Nelson's love affair with the charming and beautiful Lady Hamilton is almost as famous as his naval victories. Among these letters is one written from his flagship, the Victory, on August 19, 1805, during his last visit to England before his victory and death at Trafalgar. In this letter Lord Nelson expresses his undying love for his "Dearest Emma," and says, "I shall, my Emma, rejoice to have you in my arms, when I need not envy a King!"

The rarest, most valuable letter in the entire collection, however, is, in the strict sense, not a letter at all, but a famous poetic communication, a poem by the great Elizabethan, Edmund Spenser, written entirely in his own hand. This is the only known literary manuscript of Spenser in existence. He wrote it on a blank page of his own copy of "The Fairie Queene," published in 1590, which he afterwards presented with this poem to Elizabeth Boyle, then his betrothed, later his wife. The poem is the first sonnet of the famous Amoretti.

BOSWELL is represented in the collection with two notes to his wife, whom he greets as "My Dearest Life." His letters breathe the very air of constancy, although in recent years discovery of additional Boswellian papers indicate that the biographer of Dr. Johnson was not as single in his affections as his letters to Margaret Montgomerie might suggest. These letters may have been a little annoying to his wife, for they deal in great detail with the pleasures of London town, to which, however, Boswell never brought his beloved spouse. Both these epistles contain minute descriptions of dinners and it is in one of these that we find him discussing the lamentable rise in the price of fish.

There is a cheerful note from Abraham Lincoln, in the form of a mock-petition, to a Mrs. O. H. Browning, begging her to bring her charms back to Springfield, and there are a few letters about love from Thomas Jefferson, written when he was 20, to his friend Will Fleming, to whom he confided his high opinion of Miss Jenny Taliaferro's charms. But at that age Mr. Jefferson must have been a fickle young man indeed, for after praising Miss Talaiferro, in the next breath he suggests that both he and Fleming should get married, neither to Miss Jenny, settle down on adjoining estates, and pass the rest of their lives going to country dances and practicing at the bar.

The most ardent of the non-romantic letters in the collection is one purporting to be from William Shakespeare to Anne Hathaway. When this letter was shown to Boswell in 1797, he fell on his knees and kissed it reverently but no one has been so moved by it since, for this letter was later discovered to be one of the famous forgeries by the gifted but unscrupulous William Ireland. This curious forgery has acquired a tradition and a value of its own, and is included in Dr. Rosenbach's collection to show, as he smilingly puts it, "that sometimes the vraisemblance of love can pass adequately for the real thing."

How Madrid's First International Beauty Contest Took the Town

ing of platinum paint enhances the beauty of one's hair, were great admirers of this northern girl's natural tint.

Angela Ward, Miss England, a typical blue-eyed blonde of London, was given the prize for charm. Angela drew straws with her sister to see which of the two should compete in the contest. In Madrid she fell in love with a dark caballero.

NAZIRE HANEM, Miss Turkey, had the most beautiful eyes—black eyes of the East. After the national contest in Turkey her closest rival demanded £10,000 damages, alleging the verdict had not been just.

Other titles awarded were: Miss Scotland, aristocracy; Miss Belgium, classical harmony; Miss Norway, sweetness, and Miss Rumania, youthful ingenuity.

It should be recorded of the 14 beauties that not one of them fainted at a bullfight in Madrid, at which they were the principal attraction after the contest. Not that they all enjoyed the spectacle, however. Miss Jugo-Slavia began crying when torture of the first bull commenced, and kept it up until the last one was dispatched. It was in vain that persons near her sought to console her by telling her that it was all just a game.

With the exception of Miss Spain, Miss France and Miss Belgium, the girls knew nothing about bullfights. They cheered at the wrong moments, usually just because the bullfighter escaped unhurt after getting close to the bull. Miss England and her mother sought in vain to escape before the fiesta was over. Miss Denmark ventured only an occasional peek toward the arena, sitting with her back turned or with her head down all the time.

The toreros vied in gallantry and bravery before the beauties. Before the fight the girls had an opportunity to look them over at close range and admire their gilded raiment. Later, each of the matadors donated his bull, before killing it, to "las misses." The matadors made speeches to the girls, El Estudiante's going like this: "First of all, good afternoon. Next, many flattering words for this collection of beautiful women who have come to Madrid and to the bullfight." Having said this, El Estudiante tossed his tasseled headgear to the fair guests of honor, and Miss England, unaware that this had to be returned, aroused much merriment by putting it on her head.

A funny incident occurred when the matador, Maravilla, according to the best bullfight ethics, cut off an ear of the bull he was battling with and heaved it to the seats occupied by the beauties.

GETTING an ear thrown at one at a bullfight is about the biggest honor that can befall one in Spain, but the girls didn't see it that way. They recoiled in horror before the bloody trophy, which barely missed striking the white dress of Miss Germany. When Miss Spain explained the significance of the ear there was a general scramble for it. Miss Denmark got it, picking it up gingerly and wrapping it in her dainty handkerchief.

The bullfight was one of many means by which the beauty contest was commercialized in Madrid. Everywhere "las misses" went the crowd was sure to go—and pay. In the opinion of Monsieur de Waleffe, however—at least so he told Spanish newspaper reporters—only the beauty contests in the United States are on a commercial basis. Here in Europe they're held for the sake of art.

"The beauty contest in Chicago," he said, "is an exhibition of a commercial nature, which is at odds with the nature of our competitions. The Americans think of beauty from a point of view of interested propaganda, while our European juries conserve in them an esthetic purity. Our contests, with their severity of regulations, cannot be compared to the American elections, which are highly frivolous in their procedure."

Whether for art or for money, the value of beauty contests to the beauty queens themselves is considered questionable by most Spaniards, and there are examples in Europe to uphold such opinion. But this contest proved conclusively enough that the Spanish public likes them, and that is all that is necessary. It may be safely predicted that there will be more.

THIS is one of the oldest stories in the moving picture business. Maybe you know some of it, maybe you know a lot of it, but you don't know all of it, for it isn't finished yet, and perhaps it's only begun.

Call this fellow Bart Jones. About six years ago this Bart Jones was pretty nearly at the top of the heap. He was 35 years old, and weighed 197 pounds.

For years he'd had the reputation of being willing, nay, anxious, to drop his megaphone any old time and argue it out then and there, with anybody. He'd quit a job, or he'd get fired; he'd grab another, and usually a better one. He'd been a cameraman and a propertyman; he'd made newsreels and comedies and Westerns and travel pictures.

He walked with a swing and lived up to it, denounced studio politics and made no secret of his likes and dislikes. On the other hand, he'd work 16 hours a day and he could think up lots of ways to save a producer money, or to spend it for him.

There were about three actors and about 900 actresses whom Bart Jones liked. He'd had a good many love affairs, in spite of which he professed no very high opinion of women.

The thing that attracted him to Lily Hastings was that she wasn't an actress, but a stenographer. He ran across her on the lot and told somebody that she was too good-looking to have any brains.

Brains or no brains, he found that Lily didn't care how long she worked, which is not the worst way to a director's heart. On the coast the law says that a girl has to put on her hat at 5:30 and go home, but there's nothing to prevent her coming back after dinner to a director's apartment and typing till 3 or 4 in the morning.

That was how Bart and Lily really got acquainted with each other. She didn't drink, she didn't smoke; she could hear profanity without wincing, but she didn't repeat any of it.

Bart made up his mind that Lily was strictly business. Then he decided that she was a good deal of a lady. Next he discovered that he liked to have her around. So, in the course of six or seven months, he married her.

About two months after that Lily began to tease him to put her in the pictures. That was the last thing in the world Bart wanted. However, he was a bridegroom and his wife was dear to him, and pretty, in the bargain. He said he'd see what he could do.

After some little time, he happened to run across a story called "Smiling Lady." The heroine of this opus was a sort of Mona Lisa. Men found all things in her grave, tremulous smile. She wasn't supposed to be clever, but, of course, she was good and kind and beautiful, and so she attracted all sorts of lovers, who fancied that they

THE Temple Room of Classical Arts is the thirtieth in a series of exhibits being featured weekly at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. Each display in the "Gallery of the Week" presentation will be reproduced in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, with an accompanying description of the exhibit by museum authorities.

The interior of this room has recently been reconstructed to serve as a setting for a part of the classical collection. heritage of a famous friendship and occasionally betray a great warmth, although the contents of some of his notes were decidedly unromantic.

In many of these letters Johnson regales the fair lady with such lovely topics as ipecac and other unspeakable nostrums which he was in the habit of imbibing. He frequently mentions the doses he was taking, as though this were vital news and of great interest to the mercurial Hester. Occasionally, however, he reveals a note of genuine tenderness and love, as when he wrote to her saying: "But let me have kind letters full of yourself, of your own hopes and your own fears, and your own thoughts, and then go where you will. You will find your journey, however, but a barren business; it is dull to live neither scolding nor scolded, neither governing nor governed. Now try."

Whether it was a desire to follow his injunction to "go where you will" or whether it was a surfeit of ipecac that drove her to it, the attractive lady later disappointed Dr. Johnson by running off with the Italian Piozzi.

THE famous letters of Benjamin Franklin to Madame Brillon, written while he was Minister to France, are among the wittiest and most entertaining of all love letters and plainly indicate why Franklin has been called the first civilized American.

In one of these letters he writes: "I had not the happiness, my dear friend, to see you on Wednesday evening, because my horses were at Paris with the young man, and I have neither feet nor wings. If I had wings, I should have flown to you, and I think I should sometimes scratch on the window of your bedchamber. It was very mischievous of Nature to deny us the advantages that she has wasted so profusely on all the little good-for-nothing birds and flies."

Lord Nelson's love affair with the charming and beautiful Lady Hamilton is almost as famous as his naval victories. Among these letters is one written from his flagship, the Victory, on August 19, 1805, during his last visit to England before his victory and death at Trafalgar. In this letter Lord Nelson expresses his undying love for his "Dearest Emma," and says, "I shall, my Emma, rejoice to have you in my arms, when I need not envy a King!"

The rarest, most valuable letter in the entire collection, however, is, in the strict sense, not a letter at all, but a famous poetic communication, a poem by the great Elizabethan, Edmund Spenser, written entirely in his own hand. This is the only known literary manuscript of Spenser in existence. He wrote it on a blank page of his own copy of "The Fairie Queene," published in 1590, which he afterwards presented with this poem to Elizabeth Boyle, then his betrothed, later his wife. The poem is the first sonnet of the famous Amoretti.

BOSWELL is represented in the collection with two notes to his wife, whom he greets as "My Dearest Life." His letters breathe the very air of constancy, although in recent years discovery of additional Boswellian papers indicate that the biographer of Dr. Johnson was not as single in his affections as his letters to Margaret Montgomerie might suggest. These letters may have been a little annoying to his wife, for they deal in great detail with the pleasures of London town, to which, however, Boswell never brought his beloved spouse. Both these epistles contain minute descriptions of dinners and it is in one of these that we find him discussing the lamentable rise in the price of fish.

There is a cheerful note from Abraham Lincoln, in the form of a mock-petition, to a Mrs. O. H. Browning, begging her to bring her charms back to Springfield, and there are a few letters about love from Thomas Jefferson, written when he was 20, to his friend Will Fleming, to whom he confided his high opinion of Miss Jenny Taliaferro's charms. But at that age Mr. Jefferson must have been a fickle young man indeed, for after praising Miss Talaiferro, in the next breath he suggests that both he and Fleming should get married, neither to Miss Jenny, settle down on adjoining estates, and pass the rest of their lives going to country dances and practicing at the bar.

The most ardent of the non-romantic letters in the collection is one purporting to be from William Shakespeare to Anne Hathaway. When this letter was shown to Boswell in 1797, he fell on his knees and kissed it reverently, but no one has been so moved by it since, for this letter was later discovered to be one of the famous forgeries by the gifted but unscrupulous William Ireland. This curious forgery has acquired a tradition and a value of its own, and is included in Dr. Rosenbach's collection to show, as he smilingly puts it, "that sometimes the vraisemblance of love can pass adequately for the real thing."

Snow Maiden

By EDWARD L. McKENNA

"For one thing she was, and is, beautiful."

THIS is one of the oldest stories in the moving picture business. Maybe you know some of it, maybe you know a lot of it, but you don't know all of it, for it isn't finished yet, and perhaps it's only begun.

Call this fellow Bart Jones. About six years ago this Bart Jones was pretty nearly at the top of the heap. He was 35 years old, he weighed 197 pounds.

For years he'd had the reputation of being willing, nay, anxious, to drop the megaphone any old time and argue it out then and there, with anybody. He'd quit a job, or he'd get fired; he'd grab another, and usually a better one. He'd been a cameraman and a propertyman; he'd made newsreels and comedies and Westerns and travel pictures.

He walked with a swing and lived up to it, denounced studio politics and made no secret of his likes and dislikes. On the other hand, he'd work 16 hours a day and he could think up lots of ways to save a producer money, or to spend it for him.

There were about three actors and about 900 actresses whom Bart Jones liked. He'd had a good many love affairs, in spite of which he professed no very high opinion of women.

The thing that attracted him to Lily Hastings was that she wasn't an actress, but a stenographer. He ran across her on the lot and told somebody that she was too good-looking to have any brains.

Brains or no brains, he found that Lily didn't care how long she worked, which is not the worst way to a director's heart. On the coast the law says that a girl has to put on her hat at 5:30 and go home, but there's nothing to prevent her coming back after dinner to a director's apartment and typing till 3 or 4 in the morning.

That was how Bart and Lily really got acquainted with each other. She didn't drink, she didn't smoke; she could hear profanity without wincing, but she didn't repeat any of it.

Bart made up his mind that Lily was strictly business. Then he decided that she was a good deal of a lady. Next he discovered that he liked to have her around. So, in the course of six or seven months, he married her.

About two months after that Lily began to tease him to put her in the pictures. That was the last thing in the world Bart wanted. However, he was a bridegroom and his wife was dear to him, and pretty, in the bargain. He said he'd see what he could do.

After some little time, he happened to run across a story called "Smiling Lady." The heroine of this opus was a sort of Mona Lisa. Men found all things in her grave, tremulous smile. She wasn't supposed to be clever, but, of course, she was good and kind and beautiful, and so she attracted all sorts of lovers, who fancied that they saw, in her smile, all the qualities they desired, all the answers they were seeking.

Wistful and brave, this lovely woman moved through a world which she did not understand, but her virtue was her talisman, and thus she surmounted all sorts of incredible difficulties and came at last to a safe haven in her poor but honest hero's arms.

"This is the nuts," observed Bart Jones to himself. "Now all I have to do is collect all the best scene stealers I can remember and then let Lily walk through the picture."

All of which came to pass. Bart gathered a fine cast, including a lead and a heavy who hated each other, and a child actress and a class A vamp and a real comedian. He put his mind on the job and he spent money freely.

It's generally agreed that "Smiling Lady" is Bart Jones' greatest picture. It enhanced the reputation of three people and it made the reputation of another—Lily Hastings. She was good, really and truly good, in that film.

FOR one thing, she was, and is, beautiful. She moved with awkward grace, and she looked, always, like a brave lady in distress, and taking it with a smile. The picture was a box office smash.

If it went to Lily's head, no one could blame her. It went to Bart's head, a little, too. All he knew about it was that he'd tried to do a nice thing for the girl he loved, and it had turned out to be a wonderful job.

However, Lily's next picture wasn't nearly so good. Bart directed it, and directed it carefully and with cunning. But he'd tried to do the same sort of thing all over again, and that's one of the things that can't be done in the motion pictures.

The truth was that Lily wasn't much of an actress. She was lovely, yes, but she hadn't grown up with the game and she had started in pretty late to learn. A little stiff, a little awkward, she acquired staginess instead of grace. The awkwardness was better, but that's something that can't be recaptured, ever.

She knew that the second picture was a failure. She knew it! Everybody knew it. So she asked Bart to give her a different type of story. She was bound she'd show them what she could do.

"Sure thing, Baby," said Bart, and grinned at her. "Got to have a flop once in a while." So he picked a Cinderella story and she was terrible in it, and next she played a hoyden with a heart of gold. It wasn't so good.

It's a bad thing in any line to know you're slipping. Bart knew it, all right. He didn't believe in his wife's talents. He did believe in them, for a moment, after the first picture, but only for a moment.

He loved his wife. That was a different matter. He loved her as you'd love a stupid child. He loved her as a woman, too. Make no mistake about that. Bart's days of running around were over.

And if you love somebody, you know how it is. You've got to back the play, right or wrong. You can't listen to criticism; it maddens you more than criticism of yourself. Maybe, in your heart, you think your sweetheart's crazy. What of it? Nobody else has any license to say so.

Bart was more bullheaded and nasty than ever. He was quarreling with everybody, everybody but Lily. When he was directing her it was almost funny. He was a rough-spoken fellow, always, and he couldn't speak sharply to her, though he'd cursed the best in the business. Couldn't be sarcastic, couldn't threaten, couldn't drive.

He needn't have been too tender of her. Lily wasn't much of an actress, but she was a good trouper.

Even when he was drinking, and he was drinking plenty, he wasn't rough to her. He was drinking and he was playing table-stakes poker and he was throwing parties, lots of them. He hadn't got to the top by being a good fellow; he was trying that racket a little late.

He was scared, you see. Any job on the coast is a job like a juggler's. You have so many things in the air, and you can't drop any. All you can do is hope you catch them. You're dealing with crazy, temperamental, conceited people, and your nerves are just as troublesome as theirs, but you mustn't show it.

It's a long way up and a quick way down, and so you keep on juggling in time to the music.

"Ah, get hold of yourself," you say. "The next one will click. I'm not through yet by any means. I've had smash hits before, I'll have them again. I'll bang through. I'll knock the next one over the moon. I'm just a little low tonight, that's all. So I guess I'll have a little shot of rye."

And your wife, your wife who's sitting opposite you and who doesn't drink a drop, what is she thinking?

"Bart," she says sometimes, "I wish you wouldn't drink so much."

Sometimes she smiles. It's that same smile you studied from every angle for her first picture. You made her practice it by the hour.

That's not the real woman. She's a fighting woman, a woman who's really like yourself, raging, tearing, impatient, one who'll break herself to bits so that her name will knock against the stars.

A young woman, too, a kid. You, you're almost 40. You're not handsome. You've got that tin ear that you picked up in Fort Lee, and a hand full of broken knuckles, and a skin like leather from the sun in Yucatan and Maracaibo and Havana and Hollywood.

"What'd she give to make that name?" you say to yourself. Ah, Bart, be reasonable. You love the woman, let her do as she likes. You were always too proud to hold a dame before this. Besides, she's not that kind.

She's a lady. Look how rotten she is in love scenes. She used to underplay. Now she overplays. That's the lowdown. Smile at her, look at her smile. What do you suppose is behind that smile?

One of his fears was groundless. Lily Hastings wouldn't look at another man. She had her chances, plenty of them out there in the great West, where lovemaking is erroneously thought by many to be a pastime. She never told Bart anything about them. She was afraid he'd kill the contenders, and she may have been right.

RUMORS were afloat about Bart. People said he was slipping, that he was making too many flops lately. Property men and assistant directors and cameramen all said it, some of them hopefully. Actors, the actors of whom he'd been so contemptuous, said it, and tittered.

As it happened, it was Lily herself who put some of the final stitches in his shroud. There are informers around all studios, nice, ingratiating people, who'll drink with you and sympathize with you and listen to your troubles and then go drooling to their masters. Benny Hines was one, and he was nice to Lily and so understanding she had to tell him she was afraid Bart was drinking too much.

In the film trade there is an assumption contrary to fact that directors don't drink. They're not supposed to drink or to smoke opium. Outside of that, their time is pretty much their own.

Benny went at once to his higher-up, who in turn brought the sad news to old man Marks. So Bart's contract wasn't renewed.

Bart laughed about it. He stayed around for about three weeks, and he was drinking a lot. Then one day he told Lily good-by. He was going back East, he said, to see his folks and to look around. He'd be back on the coast soon. He gave Lily some money, quite a bit of money, and was quite casual about their parting.

Lily wasn't worried at all. She knew Bart had had a lot of jobs. Her own contract still had three months to run.

Really, to tell the truth, she was curious to see what another director would be like. Husbands are only husbands, after all, and she thought it was quite possible that a stranger might see her with different eyes.

A month went on and nobody rushed around with a picture for her. So she went to Johnny Bartels, herself, and more or less told him she'd picked him out as her next director, and all Johnny said was "Uh-huh," and nothing came of it.

Her contract wasn't renewed. She anxiously wired Bart about it. She'd heard from Bart a few times, always by telegram; he wrote no letters There was no answer to her wire, but presently he sent her a message saying that he was going hunting in the Everglades. Evidently he hadn't heard from her.

Somewhat at a loss, she went to Artie Schulberg, the agent, and told him her troubles. Artie patted her hand and said Bart was one of the few real guys in pictures, and he'd do what he could for her. Apparently it wasn't much.

Then, one day, she ran into Joe Montgomery, who was making comedies for International. Joe and Bart had been good friends, although they worked together.

"How's Bart?" he said.

"Haven't heard from him. He's hunting in Florida."

"He's what?" said Joe. "He's up in Saranac."

She stared at him.

"Yeah. Taking the cure. And I hope you're satisfied."

"Joe—Joe—I . . ."

"Yeah? You didn't put the skids under him, did you? You didn't spread stories about how he was hitting the booze?"

"I never knew, I . . ."

"Say, listen. Take it from me, sister. You've done Bart enough harm. He was going good until he ran into you. Just leave him alone from now on, will you? He's not broke. I and a couple of other guys are taking care of that. Just let him fade out, pretty."

"Joe, I've got some money. I . . ."

"Sure you have. Go on, tell me all about Reflex films. Schulberg told me about it, don't bother. What do you care? You got yours, you're sitting pretty. Get another sap like Bart and ruin him, too. Only stay off my part of the lot after this, will you?

"YOU'RE respectable, aren't you? Yeah, well I got 40 little tramps on this lot ain't done half the harm you have."

He strode away, and Lily grabbed a taxi. "Step on it a little," she said.

When she got home there were three wires for her. Breathless, she opened them. None was from Bart. They were all from Artie Schulberg, her agent. Reflex Films was making her an offer; she must get in touch with him right away. The third said two-fifty a week. It was less than a third of what she'd had. Still, her heart leaped.

She hurriedly telephoned Artie to stall them off; then she took the next plane East to go to Saranac.

Two days later Lily Hastings played the big scene of her career.

Bart wasn't in bed. He was sitting on the porch of a little cottage. He'd lost 40 pounds; his skin was sallow.

Lily wasn't looking so good either. She hadn't meant to. She'd searched a long time for her shabbiest dress, and she was white and drawn. As a matter of fact, the plane had made her ill. That helped.

"Bart. Oh, Bart, why didn't you tell me?" she said.

"What was the good?"

"Bart. I've got plenty of money. Joe—Joe Montgomery lent me $1000."

As a matter of fact, she had $5000 in her bag, but it wasn't her plan to tell Bart that yet.

"Joe's a good pal," Bart commented softly.

"I—I'm wise to myself, Bart, at last. I—I couldn't get a thing without you. I—I'm broke, honey. Joe lent me this money."

He hasn't got a dime of insurance, she was thinking. Not a dime. I'm going to put this over. I am, I am!

"Bart, I'm through with the pictures," she said. "I'm through forever. Bart, honey, I'll never be such a fool again. I can't act. I couldn't — couldn't do a thing without you.

"Bart, I—Bart, you said you'd take care of me. You've got to. Listen. Did I ever lie to you? Well, I'm saying this once, and I'll never say it to you again. The day you go, I go, too."

"That's — that's crazy talk, Baby."

"IS IT? You think I'd let you go alone? Try it and see. My life's bound up in yours. You're the only man I ever had, the only one I ever will have. You got me too young. I never saw anybody like you, in any way. I could have told you things like this long ago. I've just been dumb all my life, I guess."

His hand closed over hers. "Baby, the doc says I got a chance," he said.

"I've seen him. A chance? You've got all the chances in the world, he says."

That wasn't what he'd said at all.

She patted his hand and got up suddenly. "You've got to exit laughing, you can't break down when you've got a job to do.

"Bart," she said, "you know Johnny Bartels directed me in a picture after you left? They wouldn't even release it. Johnny said, 'You're the worst flop ever came on this lot.' "

"Who is this punk, Johnny Bartels?" said Bart. "I'll break him in half. You're no flop, Baby. They show a profit on your contract."

"They'll show one on yours next time, Bart. Now listen. I'm going over to the hotel for my bag."

"You going to stay here, Baby?"

She bent and kissed him and laughed at him.

"Hey, you got to be careful, kid," he said.

"I don't come from a careful family. You let me alone. I know what I'm doing. Hunting in the Everglades. You big liar."

There was one thing still to finish before she began her real job. She sent a wire to Artie Schulberg. "Out of pictures for good, win, lose or draw. Sorry. Bart is improving."

Well, he's still improving. He's out of Saranac and he's off the liquor, and he's back to 180. Wait till he weighs 197 again, then Kitty, bar the doors. He's making pictures again in New York with one of the little independents.

A lot of movie actresses fade early. You ought to get one look at Lily Hastings Jones. She's not fading. She's blooming.

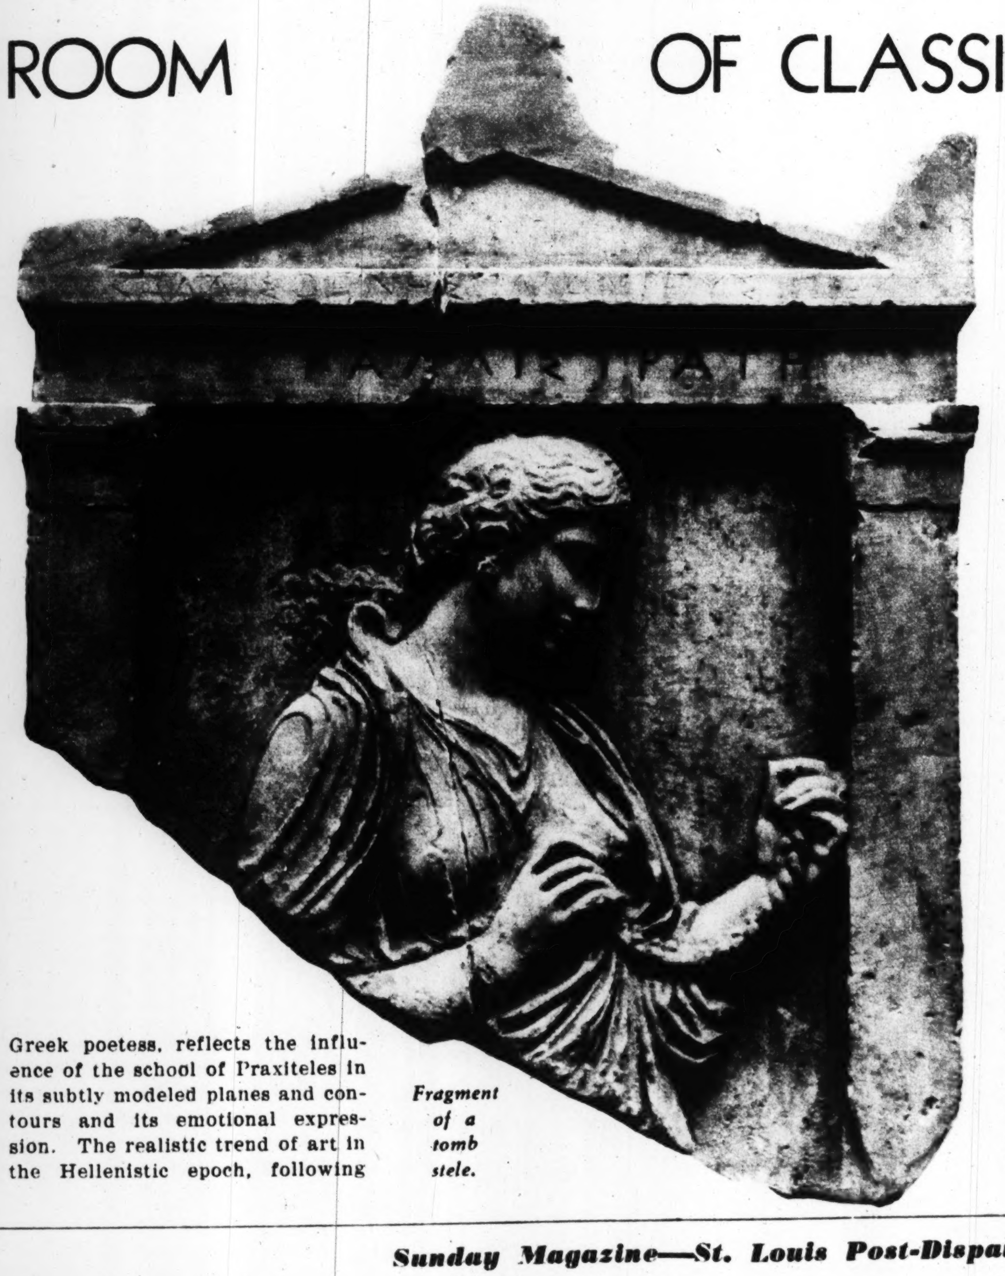
TEMPLE ROOM OF CLASSICAL ARTS

THE Temple Room of Classical Arts is the thirtieth in a series of exhibits being featured weekly at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. Each display in the "Gallery of the Week" presentation will be reproduced in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, with an accompanying description of the exhibit by museum authorities.

The interior of this room has recently been reconstructed to serve as a setting for a part of the classical collection. A gabled ceiling suggestive of that of a classic temple has been installed, the beams and rafters emphasized by colored decoration and the walls plastered to give an effect of stone work. A window in the west wall affords a natural side light favorable for the showing of sculpture and the greater number of the museum's Greek and Roman examples are displayed here, together with vases, jewelry and other minor arts.

Occupying the most important central position is a notable Attic sculpture, the upper half of a marble grave stele of a young woman about 400 B. C., bearing in relief the idealized profile of the deceased. Doubtlessly influenced by the Phidian tradition, it attains a high degree of pathos, with the restraint typical of Greek art at its zenith. A marble head of the fourth century, perhaps of a Greek poetess, reflects the influence of the school of Praxiteles in its subtly modeled planes and contours and its emotional expression. The realistic trend of art in the Hellenistic epoch, following the death of Alexander (323 B. C.) is interestingly shown in a bronze statuette of a child found at Alexandria and presumed to be the Infant Dionysos.



Fragment of a tomb stele.

This tendency toward realism reached its culmination in Roman portraiture, as may be seen in the sculptured heads of Vespasian, Caracalla and a woman, perhaps of the Agrippine family, all from the first to the second century A. D.

Greek painted vases present a vivid pageant of classic gods and heroes as well as illuminating pictures of contemporary life.

EXAMPLES in this gallery trace the evolution of the art through the vigorous archaic "black-figured" period (ca. 600-500 B. C.), the more naturalistic "red-figured" period (ca. 500-280 B. C.), and include several Athenian lecythi, or memorial vases.

Two wall cases contain a collection of jewelry illustrative of the high development of the art of the goldsmith and the lapidary. Much of the gold jewelry exhibits the celebrated granular technique of the ancient goldsmiths, which consisted of the enrichment of the surface by soldering to it innumerable gold globules of almost microscopic minuteness. The engraved gems, widely used in the classical period as seals, include intaglios and cameos in carnelian, agate, sardonyx and onyx.

And The Things They Do

By WALTER QUERMANN

Uninvited Guests

THE PLAYERS

TEDDY AND EDDIE—Bear twins who were reduced to the size of insects by a magic chemical administered by order of Queen Buzz of the Bumblebees so the twins might be taught to make honey. But now they are prisoners of the Ants.

QUEEN ANT—Ruler of the colony of Ants.

MANDIBLE—The Queen's adviser.

CHIEF SCOUT—Who hunts for picnics.

THE PLAY BEGINS

(Teddy is carrying a big load while Eddie is driving one of the Ants' cows. They pause to talk.)

TEDDY—Gosh! I never dreamt that Ants worked as hard as they do.

EDDIE—I never knew they had these things they call cows.

TEDDY—It gives me the creeps to go down in their homes.

EDDIE—And I get sick every time I think of milking this thing. (Mandible angrily rushes up to them.)

MANDIBLE—What's all this here fool talk about? You had better get back to work if you know what's good for you. (Teddy and Eddie go back to work and Mandible goes over to the Queen, just as the Scouts come up, greatly excited.)

CHIEF SCOUT—There's another picnic down in Poison Ivy Meadow.

QUEEN ANT—A picnic? How grand. Mandible; call all the men together and go there.

TEDDY—(Who had been listening.) Can we go, too?

QUEEN ANT—If you promise to obey Mandible you may go.

TEDDY AND EDDIE—We'll do anything he says.

QUEEN ANT—That's splendid. (Mandible, Teddy, Eddie and the army leave for the picnic.)

TEDDY—(Joyfully.) Gosh. This will be real fun.

EDDIE—(Happily.) And I thought Ants did nothing but work. (They are gone for a while and then Teddy and Eddie come back, carrying a large piece of bread, much too heavy for them.)

EDDIE—Whew! This is terrible. First Mandible makes us risk being stepped on getting the food. Then he won't let us eat it, but makes us take it to the storehouse.

TEDDY—We should have known there was a catch in it. When an Ant says picnic, he means work, because that's his only pleasure in life. Oh! Oh! My poor back!

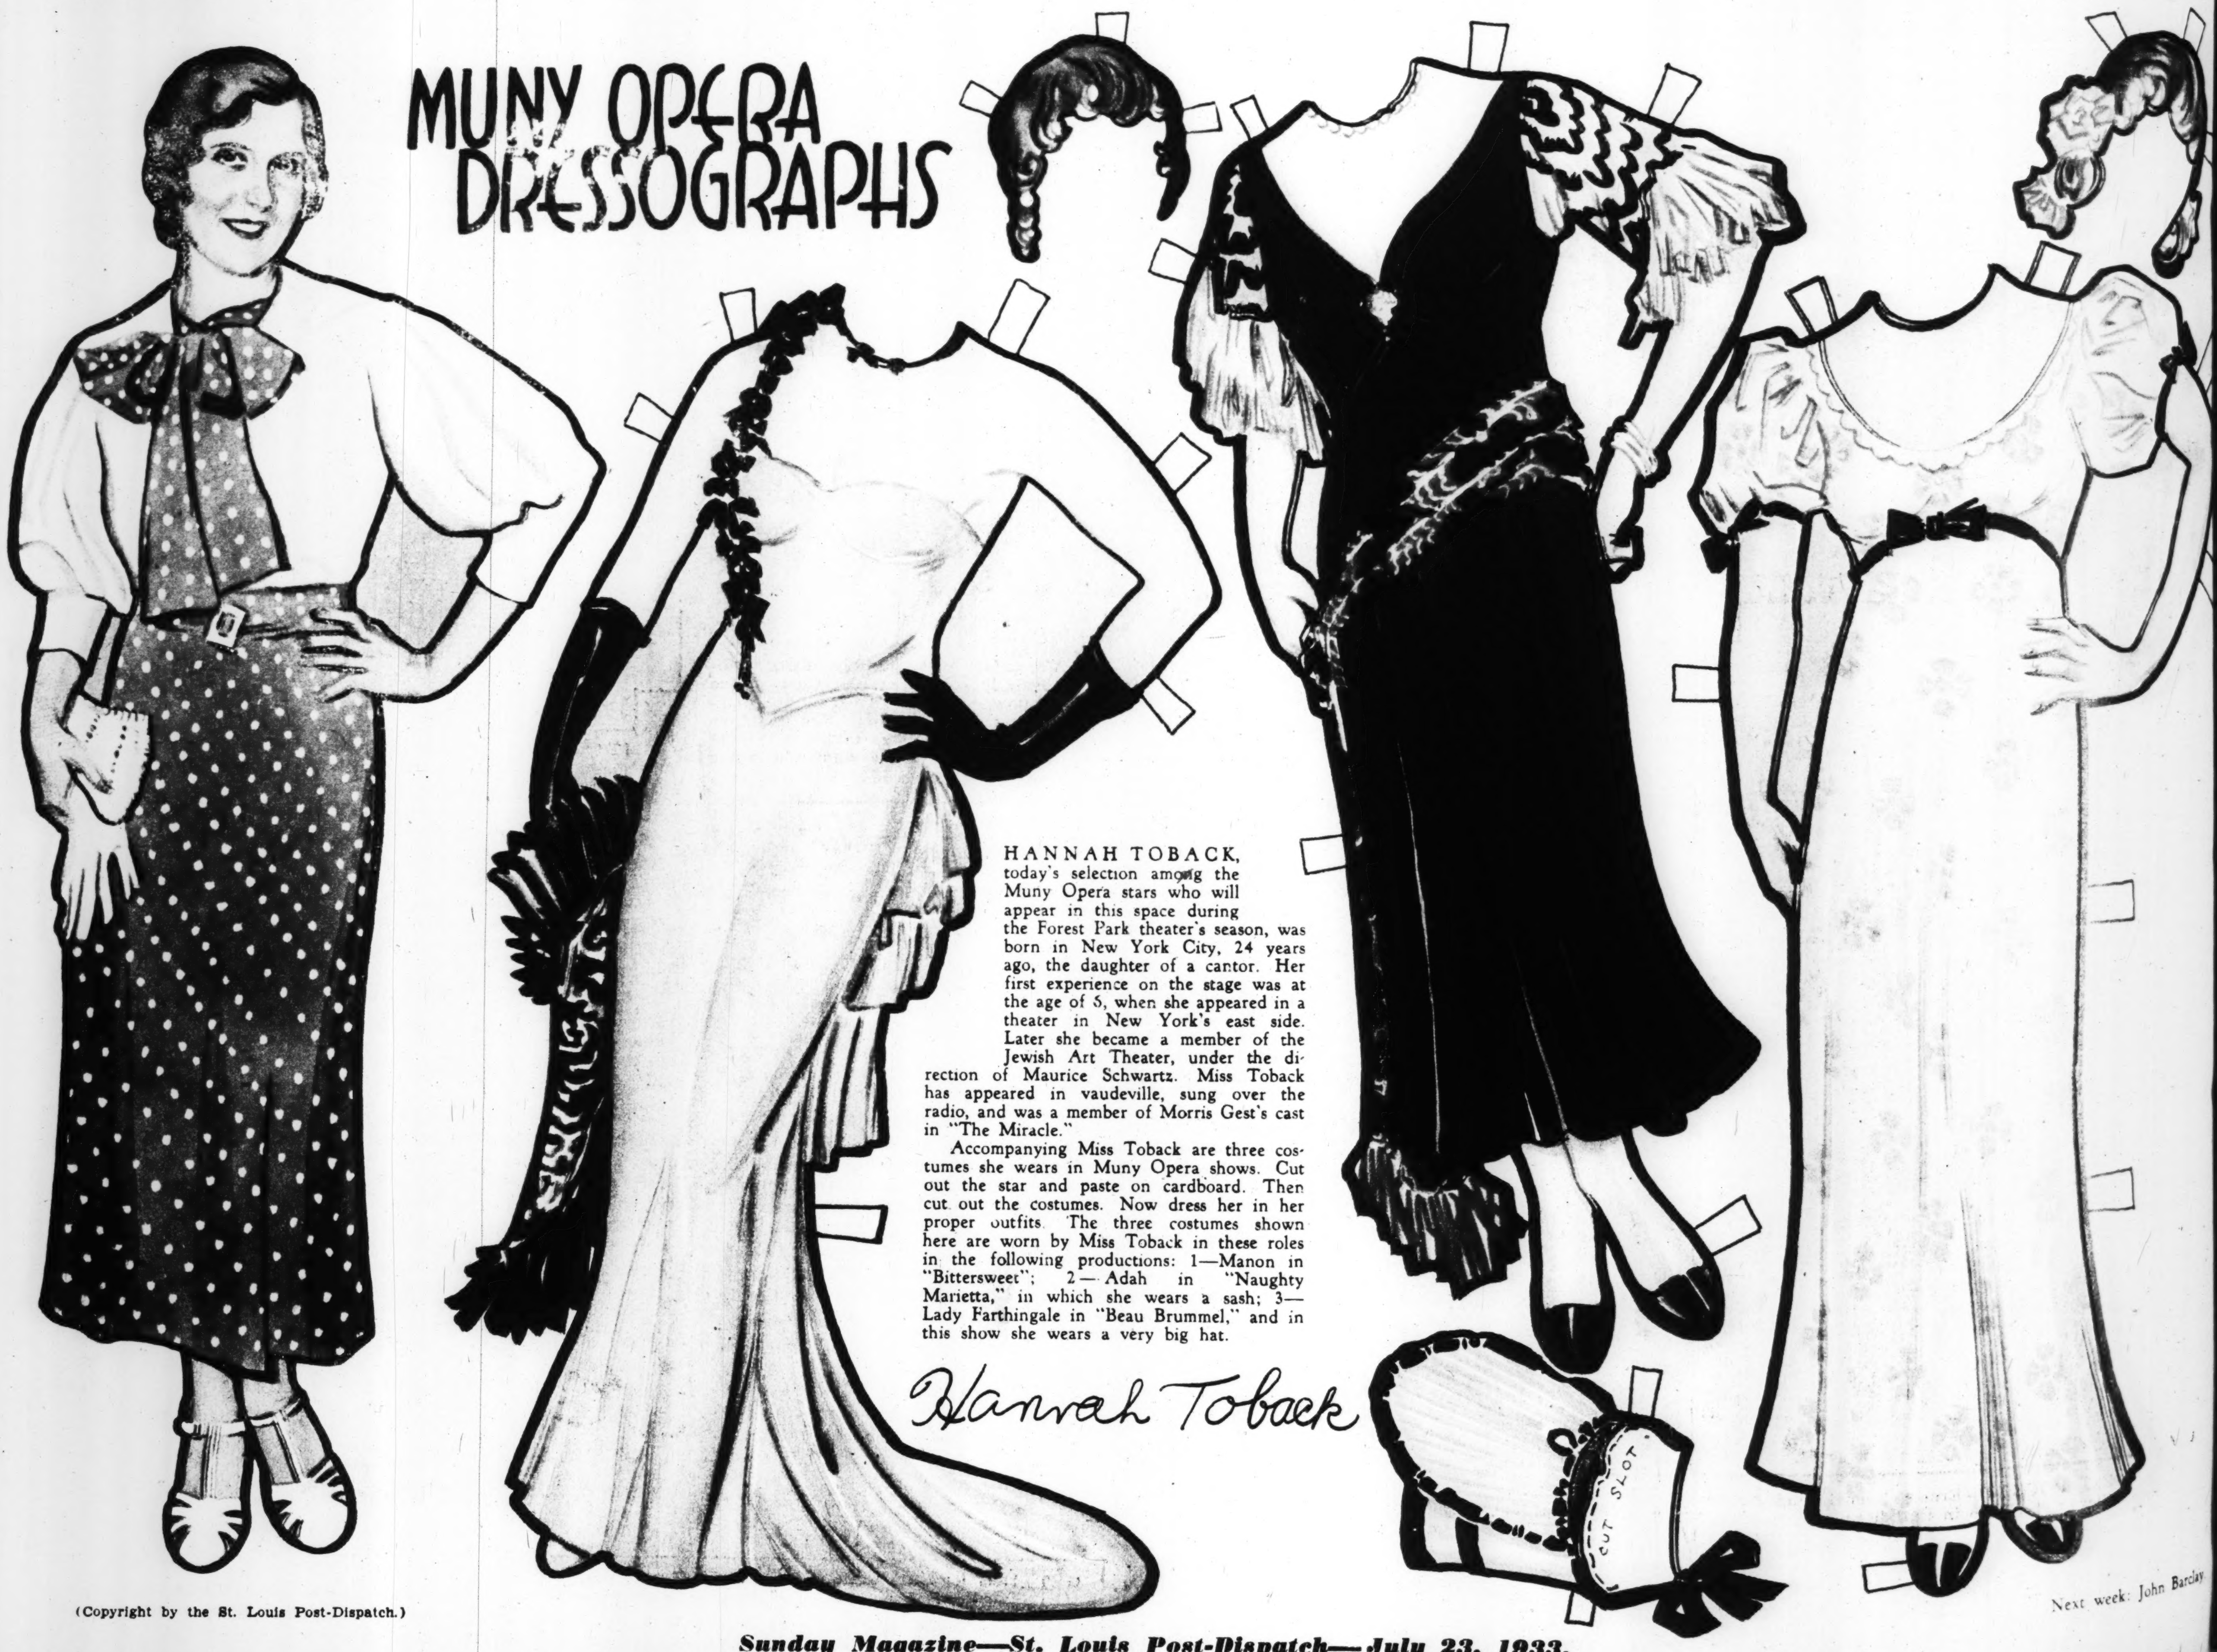
MUNY OPERA DRESSOGRAPHS



HANNAH TOBACK, today's selection among the Muny Opera stars who will appear in this space during the Forest Park theater's season, was born in New York City, 24 years ago, the daughter of a cantor. Her first experience on the stage was at the age of 5, when she appeared in a theater in New York's east side. Later she became a member of the Jewish Art Theater, under the direction of Maurice Schwartz. Miss Toback has appeared in vaudeville, sung over the radio, and was a member of Morris Gest's cast in "The Miracle."

Accompanying Miss Toback are three costumes she wears in Muny Opera shows. Cut out the star and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress her in her proper outfits. The three costumes shown here are worn by Miss Toback in these roles in the following productions: 1—Manon in "Bittersweet"; 2—Adah in "Naughty Marietta," in which she wears a sash; 3—Lady Farthingale in "Beau Brummel," and in this show she wears a very big hat.

How To Make Your Child

Actually Hungry for Vegetables this Summer

. . . Besides Greatly Increasing His Appetite for Milk

Now—A Remarkable Swiss Food Discovery, By Actually Creating the Sensation of Hunger, Combats Loss of Appetite in Summer . . . Frequently Adds Weight at the Rate of a Pound a Week While Curbing Nervousness, Too

Accept a Trial Package—
Note the Coupon Below

FOR a child to lose his appetite in summer is not only unnecessary—but also highly undesirable. Because vacation is the one time above all when a child should be storing up energy and replenishing his vital reserve. When he should be compensating for the drain of the previous school year and building for the next.

So if your child eats poorly in summer, try this remarkable way to make "poor eaters" eat! A way that does not merely "tempt" the appetite, but which actually creates the natural sensation of hunger.

Not only will you find your child more eager to eat (even such healthful foods as spinach, carrots and lettuce)—but you will usually find him willing to drink double the usual quantity of milk each day.

A remarkable food creation (discovered in Switzerland and now made over here) should achieve this result for your child. It is called Ovaltine. In summer you simply give it shaken up with cold milk, and children love its taste.

How It Works

First: Besides being extremely nourishing and easy to digest, Ovaltine is rich in the appetite-producing Vitamin B.

Second: Ovaltine contains an unusually high proportion of a remarkable food property called "diastase." This substance has long been recognized for its power to liquefy and "digest" starchy foods—a significant fact when you consider that the diet of the average child contains about 60% of starchy foods.

These features of Ovaltine are tremendously important. And specialists will tell you that the child with poor (or "slow") digestion is usually the one who won't eat—who shuns vegetables and objects to drinking milk.

But once appetite is stimulated in a scientific way and the sensation of hunger is produced, a definite change takes place. The old objection to every-day foods gradually disappears. And even a "vegetable-hunger" is built up naturally day by day.

Third: Milk turns to solid curds when taken into the stomach. Ovaltine breaks up these curds into small granules. Thus increasing its digestibility to a marked degree.

Milk is also taken much more readily when it is mixed with Ovaltine. And Ovaltine has a delicious taste that the fussiest child is unable to resist.

Start Today

For the sake of your child, we urge you to try Ovaltine. By doing so, you can make this a real health-summer for him. Note the almost immediate difference in appetite—in the way he acts at meals. Note, too, the attendant increase in weight, in nerve poise and in strength.

You can get Ovaltine at any drug or grocery store. Or send the coupon at right for a generous trial supply . . . Notice the offer of a Little Orphan Annie shake-up mug (worth 75c) which is now being given free.

NOTE: Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. During the World War, medical authorities made it a standard ration for invalid, nerve-shattered soldiers. It is also highly recommended by physicians for sleeplessness—for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged.

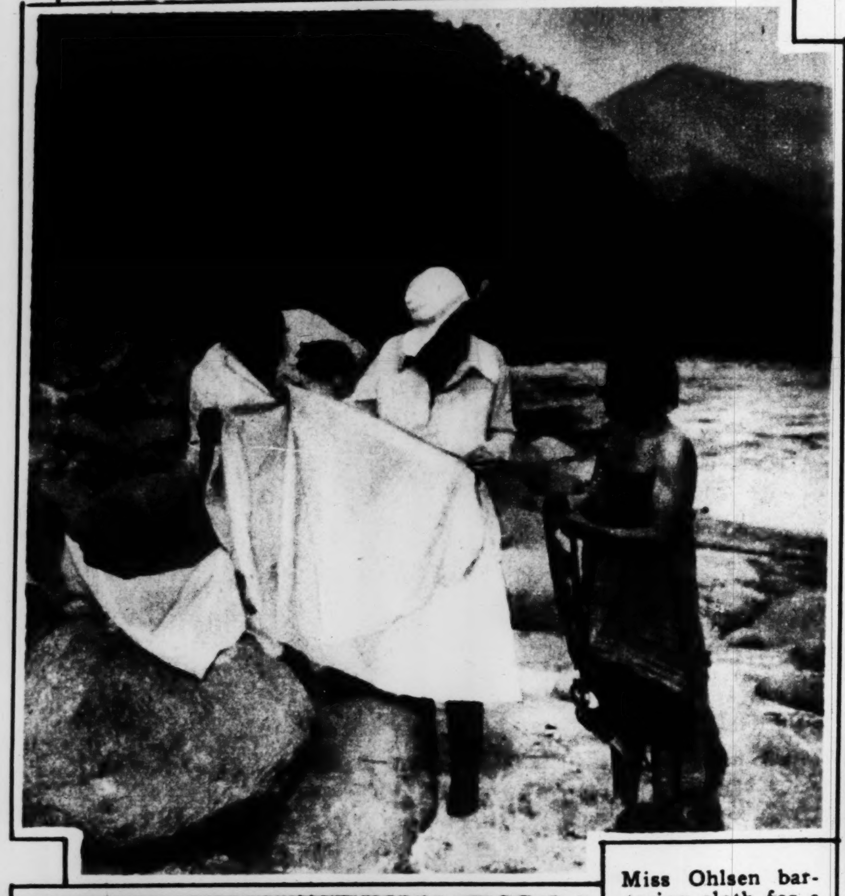
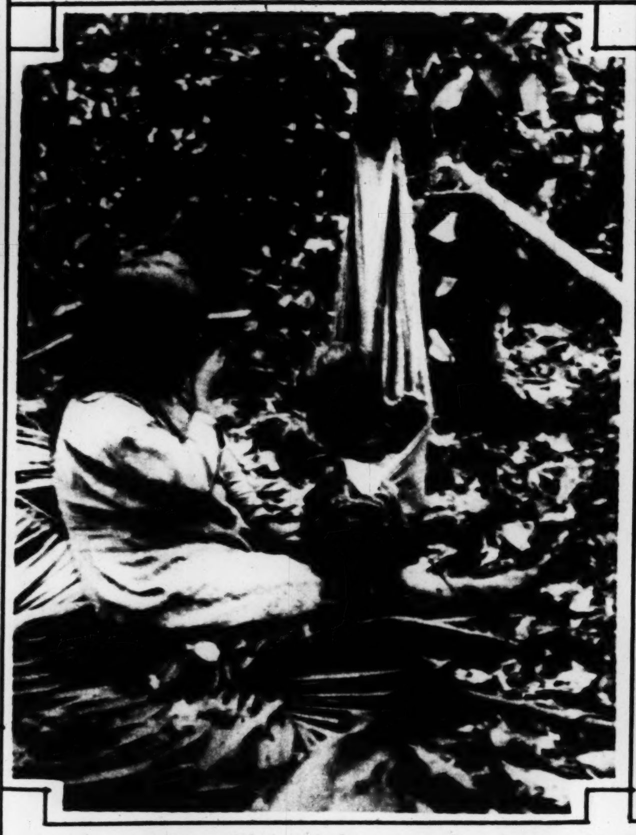
Three and a Half Years Among the Head Hunting Jivaros

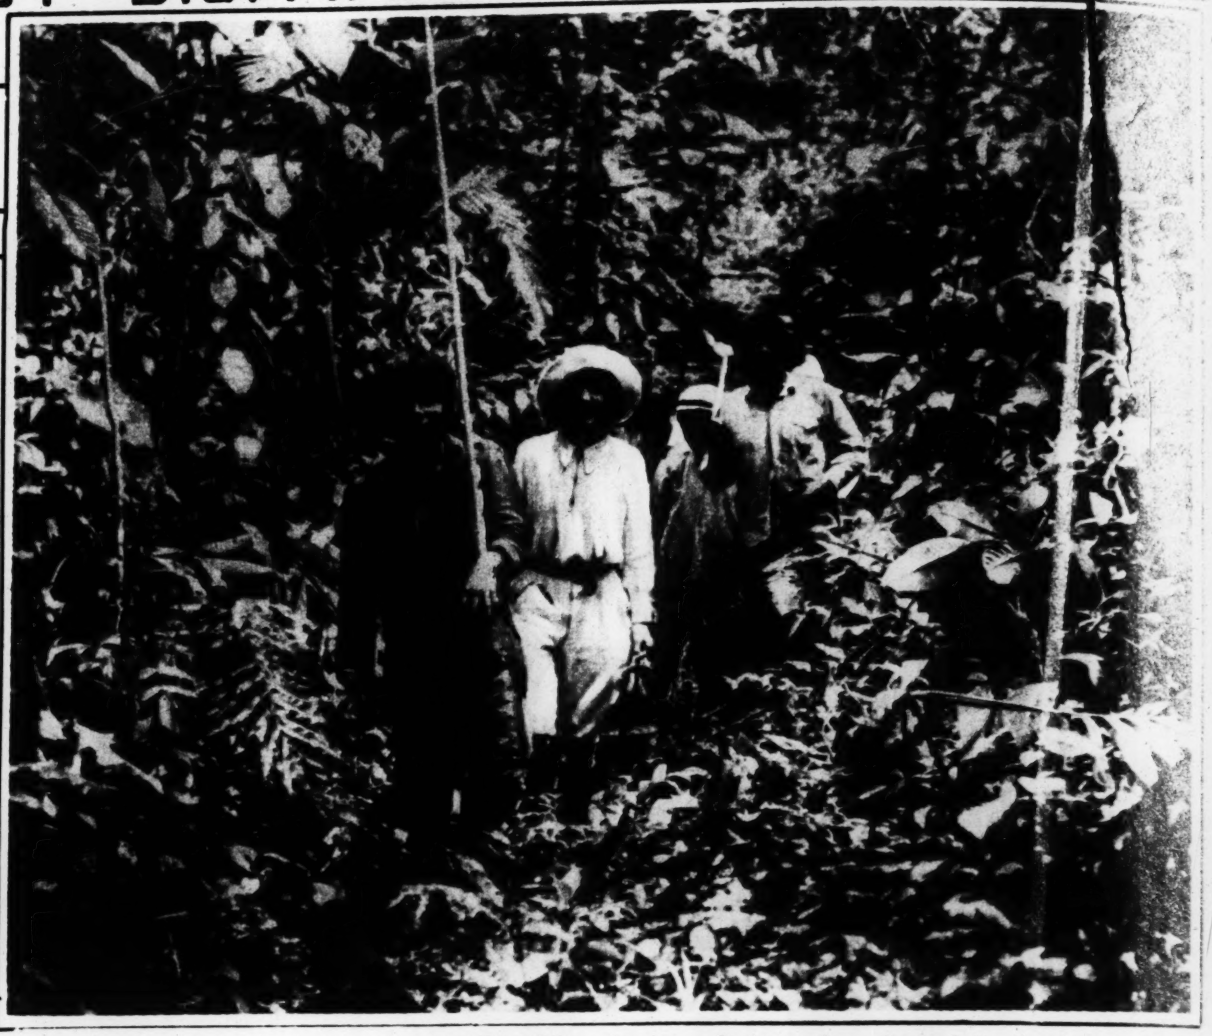
A Pictorial Record of a Sojourn in the Jungles of Ecuador by Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Gill and Miss Violet Ohlsen of New York.



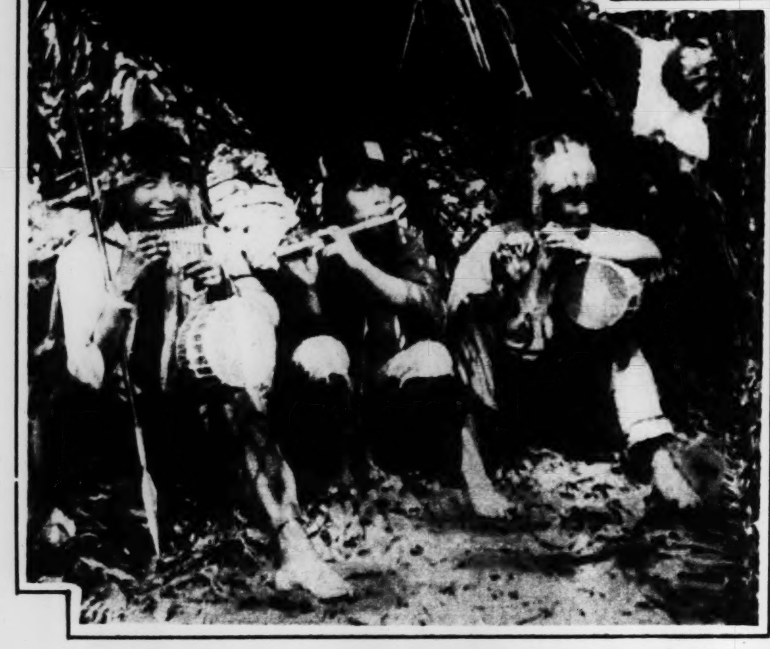
Miss Ohlsen bartering cloth for a jungle maiden's necklace of seeds and bird skins.



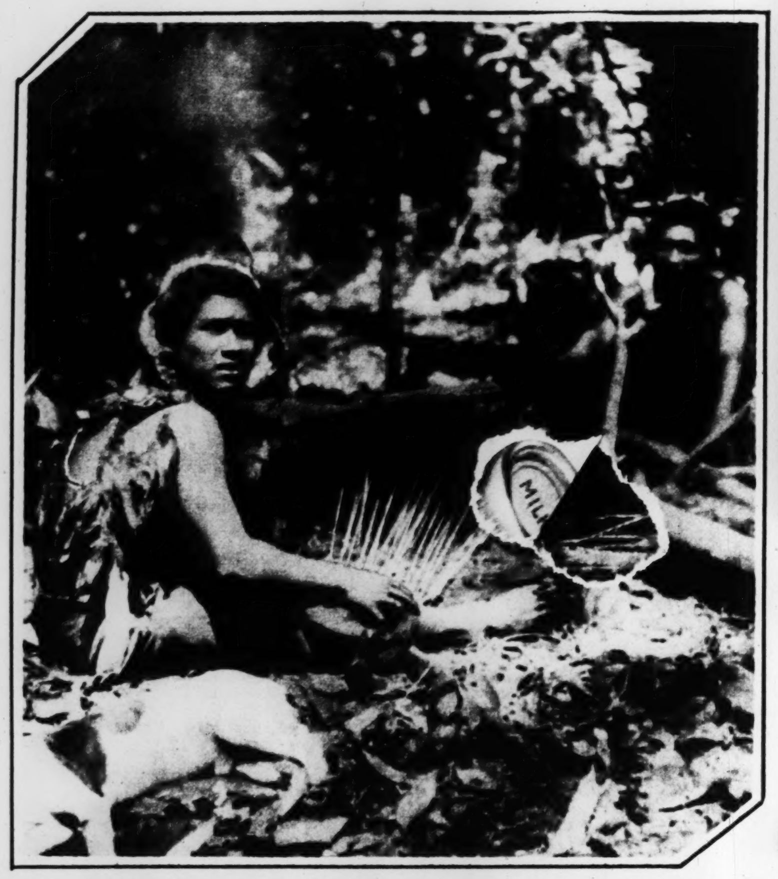
A young mother with her baby swung in a hammock made of fiber.



On a trail through the jungle, showing Mrs. Gill and some of the natives dressed in clothing donated by Mr. Gill.



Music after a banquet in honor of the American guests.



Jivaro boys tipping their blow-gun darts and arrows with curare, an extract from a native plant containing a high content of strychnine which, it is said, produces death by paralysis.

Guarding a trail against enemies. Jivaro natives with their spears of chota wood.

DONE! AND WHAT A SWEET JOB OF SHELLACKING. THE BEST I EVER DID.
I DIDN'T THINK THIS BRUSH WOULD HOLD OUT UNTIL I GOT THROUGH BUT IT DID. LOOK AT THAT BABY FALLING APART NOW.
WELL THIS IS A GREAT JOB. A-NO. 1! WONDERFUL AND.... OH OH!
I MISSED A LITTLE PLACE OVER THERE. TOO FAR TO REACH EVEN IF I HAD A BRUSH.
LET ME THINK..?... THAT WAS MY ONLY BRUSH BUT.....
AH!
FIRST TO GO DOWN IN THE YARD AND GET A CLOTHES POLE, THEN COME UPSTAIRS AND.....
AH! THERE'S THE LITTLE NEXTDOOR DOGGIE I WANT. IF I CAN SNEAK UP AND GRAB HIM BEFORE HE.....
HE SEES ME. SUCH LUCK. WELL ANYHOW..
HERE FIDO! STOP! FIDO!
WHAT A CHASE! BUT I GOT HIM. HOLD STILL, FIDO, UNTIL I SHUT THIS DOOR.
HOLD STILL! HOLD STEADY! STEADY, FIDO!
NOW TO TIE HIM ON THE POLE WITH THIS NICE JUICY PORKCHOP.
THEN DIP HIS TAIL IN THE SHELLAC - JARS
AND WHEN HE SEES THE PORKCHOP AND WAGS HIS TAIL, HE SHELLACKS THE PLACE IN THE FLOOR THAT I MISSED. VERY GOOD.
NOW ONE MORE COAT, FIDO. ATTA BOY!
THE DOG GOT AWAY FROM ME BEFORE I COULD WASH ALL THE SHELLAC OUT OF HIS TAIL. AND THERE'S HIS OWNER LOOKING AT FIDO'S TAIL AND THEN AT ME.
HO HUM! I SUPPOSE HE'LL RUN OVER FOR A LITTLE TALK LATER ON. WELL WHY WORRY ABOUT DETAILS WHEN I DID SUCH A PERFECT JOB ON THAT FLOOR!
